no less than his. If, then, that friend demand, why Brutus rose against Cæsar? this is my answer,—not that I loved Cæsar less, but that I loved Rome more.
Had you rather Cæsar were living, and die all slaves, than that Cæsar were dead, to live all free men? As Cæsar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate,
I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him; but, as he was ambitious, I slew him. There is tears for his love; joy for his Fortune; honour for his valour; and death for his ambition. Who is here so base, that would be a bondman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so rude, that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him have I offended.
Who is here so vile, that will not love his country?
If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

All. None, Brutus, none.

Brut. Then, none have I offended. I have done no more to Cæsar, than you shall do to Brutus. The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol; his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy, nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death.

Enter Antony and others, with Cæsar's Body.
Here comes his body, mourned by Mark Antony: who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth; as which of you shall not? With this I depart; that, as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome. I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death.

All. Live, Brutus! live! live!
1 Cit. Bring him with triumph home unto his house.
2 Cit. Give him a statue with his ancestors.
3 Cit. Let him be Cæsar.
4 Cit. Cæsar's better parts Shall now be crown'd in Brutus.
1 Cit. We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours.

Brut. My countrymen,—

2 Cit. Peace! silence! Brutus speaks.
1 Cit. Peace, ho!

Brut. Good countrymen, let me depart alone;
And, for my sake, stay here with Antony:
Do grace to Cæsar's corpse, and grace his speech
Tending to Cæsar's glories, which Mark Antony,
By our permission, is allow'd to make.
I do entreat you, not a man depart,
Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. [Exit.
1 Cit. Stay, ho! and let us hear Mark Antony.
3 Cit. Let him go up into the public chair:
We'll hear him.—Noble Antony, go up.

Ant. For Brutus' sake, I am beholding to you.
4 Cit. What does he say of Brutus?
3 Cit. He says, for Brutus' sake,
He finds himself beholding to us all.
4 Cit. 'Twas best he speak no harm of Brutus here.
1 Cit. This Cæsar was a tyrant.
3 Cit. Nay, that's certain:
We are bless'd, that Rome is rid of him.
2 Cit. Peace! let us hear what Antony can say.

Ant. You gentle Romans.—

Cit. Peace, ho! let us hear him.

Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears:
I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him.
The evil that men do lives after them,
The good is oft interred with their bones:
So let it be with Cæsar. The noble Brutus
Hath told you Cæsar was ambitious:
If it were so, it was a grievous fault,
And grievously hath Cæsar answer'd it.
Here, under leave of Brutus and the rest, (For Brutus is an honourable man,
So are they all, all honourable men)
Come I to speak in Cæsar's funeral.
He was my friend, faithful and just to me:
But Brutus says, he was ambitious;
And Brutus is an honourable man.
He hath brought many captives home to Rome,
Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill.
Did this in Cæsar seem ambitious?—
When that the poor have cried, Cæsar hath wept,
Ambition should be made of sterner stuff:
Yet Brutus says, he was ambitious;
And Brutus is an honourable man.
You all did see, that on the Lupercal
I thrice presented him a kingly crown.
Which he did thrice refuse. Was this ambition?
Yet Brutus says, he was ambitious;
And, sure, he is an honourable man.
I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,
But here I am to speak what I do know.
You all did love him once, not without cause:
What cause withholds you, then, to mourn for him?
O judgment! thou art flid to brutish beasts,
And men have lost their reason.—Bear with me;
My heart is in the coffin there with Cæsar,
And I must pause till it come back to me.

1 Cit. Methinks, there is much reason in his sayings.
2 Cit. If thou consider rightly of the matter,
Cæsar has had great wrong.

3 Cit. Has he, masters?
I fear, there will a worse come in his place.
4 Cit. Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown:
Therefore, 'tis certain, he was not ambitious.

1 Cit. If it be found so, some will dare abide it.
2 Cit. Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire with weeping.
3 Cit. There's not a nobler man in Rome than Antony.
4 Cit. Now mark him; he begins again to speak.

Ant. But yesterday, the word of Cæsar might
Have stood against the world: now, lies he there,
And none so poor to do him reverence.
O masters! if I were dispos'd to stir
Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage,
I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong,
Who, you all know, are honourable men.
I will not do them wrong: I rather choose
To wrong the dead, to wrong myself and you,
Than I will wrong such honourable men.
But here's a parchment with the seal of Cæsar;
I found it in his closet, 'tis his will:
Let but the commons hear this testament,
(Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read)
And they would go and kiss dead Cæsar's wounds,
And dip their napkins in his sacred blood;
Yea, beg a hair of him for memory.
And, dying, mention it within their wills,
Bequeathing it, as a rich legacy,
Unto their issue.

4 Cit. We'll hear the will. Read it, Mark Antony.
All. The will, the will! we will hear Cæsar's will.

Ant. Have patience, gentle friends; I must not read it:
Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me not stir you up
To such a sudden flood of mutiny.
They that have done this deed are honourable:
What private griefs they have, alas! I know not,
That made them do it; they are wise and honourable
And will, no doubt, with reasons answer you.
I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts:
I am no orator, as Brutus is,
But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man,
That love my friend; and that they know full well
That gave me public leave to speak of him.
For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth,
Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech,
To stir men's blood: I only speak right on:
I tell you that, which you yourselves do know,
Show you sweet Caesar's wounds, poor, poor dumb mouths,
And bid them speak for me: but were I Brutus,
And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony
Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue
In every wound of Caesar, that should move
The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.
All. We'll mutiny.
1 Cit. We'll burn the house of Brutus.
3 Cit. Away then I come, seek the conspirators.
Ant. Yet hear me. countrymen: yet hear me speak
All. Peace, ho! Hear Antony; most noble Antony.
Ant. Why, friends, you go to do you know not what Wherein hath Caesar thus deserv'd your loves?
Alas! you know not:—I must tell you, then.
You have forgot the will I told you of.
All. Most true;—the will:—let's stay, and hear the will.
Ant. Here is the will, and under Caesar's seal.
To every Roman citizen he gives,
To every several man, seventy-five drachmas.
2 Cit. Most noble Caesar!—we'll revenge his death
3 Cit. O royal Caesar!
Ant. Hear me with patience.
All. Peace, ho!
Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his walks,
His private arbours, and new-planted orchards,
On this side Tyber: he hath left them you,
And to your heirs for ever; common pleasures,
To walk abroad, and recreate yourselves.
Here was a Caesar: when comes such another?
1 Cit. Never, never!—Come, away, away!
We'll burn his body in the holy place,
And with the brands fire the traitors' houses.
Take up the body.
2 Cit. Go, fetch fire.
3 Cit. Pluck down benches.
4 Cit. Pluck down forms, windows, any thing.
[Enter Citizens, with the Body
Ant. Now let it work. Mischief, thou art afoot,
Take thou what course thou wilt.—How now, fellow:
Enter a Servant.
Serv. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.
Ant. Where is he?
Serv. He and Lepidus are at Caesar's house,
Ant. And thither will I straight to visit him.
He comes upon a wish: Fortune is merry,
And in this mood will give us any thing.
Serv. I heard them say. Brutus and Cassius
Are rid like madmen through the gates of Rome.
Ant. Belike, they had some notice of the people
How I had mov'd them. Bring me to Octavius. [Exit
SCENE III.—The Same. A Street.

Enter Cinna, the Poet.

Cin. I dreamt to-night, that I did feast with Caesar, and things unlikely charge my fancy. I have no will to wander forth of doors, yet something leads me forth.

Enter Citizens.

1 Cit. What is your name?
2 Cit. Whither are you going?
3 Cit. Where do you dwell?
4 Cit. Are you a married man, or a bachelor?
2 Cit. Answer every man directly.
1 Cit. Ay, and briefly.
4 Cit. Ay, and wisely.
3 Cit. Ay, and truly; you were best.
Cin. What is my name? Whither am I going? Where do I dwell? Am I a married man, or a bachelor? Then, to answer every man directly, and briefly, wisely, and truly, wisely I say, I am a bachelor.

2 Cit. That’s as much as to say, they are fools that marry:—you’ll bear me a bang for that, I fear. Proceed: directly.

Cin. Directly, I am going to Caesar’s funeral.
1 Cit. As a friend, or an enemy?
Cin. As a friend.
2 Cit. That matter is answered directly.
4 Cit. For your dwelling,—briefly.
Cin. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.
3 Cit. Your name, sir, truly.
Cin. Truly, my name is Cinna.
1 Cit. Tear him to pieces: he’s a conspirator.
Cin. I am Cinna, the poet; I am Cinna, the poet.
4 Cit. Tear him for his bad verses; tear him for his bad verses.

Cin. I am not Cinna the conspirator.
2 Cit. It is no matter; his name’s Cinna: pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going.
3 Cit. Tear him, tear him! Come: brands, ho! firebrands! To Brutus, to Cassius; burn all. Some to Decius’ house, and some to Casca’s; some to Ligarius. Away! go! [Exeunt; forcing out Cinna]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same. A Room in Antony’s House.

Antony, Octavius, and Lepidus, seated at a Table.

Ant. These many, then, shall die; their names are pricked.
Oct. Your brother, too, must die: consent you, Lepidus?
Lep. I do consent.
Lep. Upon condition Publius shall not live, who is your sister’s son, Mark Antony.
Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn him.
But, Lepidus, go you to Caesar’s house; fetch the will hither, and we will determine how to cut off some charge in legacies.
Lep. What, shall I find you here?
Oct. Or here, or at the Capitol. [Exit Lepidus.
Ant. This is a slight unmeritable man. Meet to be sent on errands: is it fit, the threefold world divided, he should stand one of the three to share it?
Oct. So you thought him; and took his voice who should be pricked to die in our black sentence and proscription.
Ant. Octavius, I have seen more days than you: and though we lay these honours on this man, to ease ourselves of divers slanderous loads, he shall but bear them as the ass bears gold, to groan and sweat under the business, either led or driven, as we point the way; and having brought our treasure where we will, then take we down his load, and turn him off, like to the empty ass, to shake his ears, and graze on commons.
Oct. You may do your will; but he’s a tried and valiant soldier.
Ant. So is my horse, Octavius; and for that I do appoint him store of provender; it is a creature that I teach to fight, to wind, to stop, to run directly on, his corporal motion govern’d by my spirit:

And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so:
He must be taught, and train’d, and bid go forth.
A barren-spirited fellow; one that feeds on objects, arts, and imitations,
Which, out of use and stale by other men,
Begin his fashion; do not talk of him,
But as a property. And now, Octavius,
Listen great things. Brutus and Cassius,
Are levyng powers: we must straight make head;
Therefore, let our alliance be combin’d,
Our best friends made, and our best means stretch’d;
And let us presently go sit in council,
How covert matters may be best disclos’d,
And open perils surest answered.
Oct. Let us do so, for we are at the stake,
And bayed about with many enemies;
And some, that smile, have in their hearts, I fear,
Millions of mischiefs. [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—Before Brutus’ Tent, in the Camp near Sardis.

Drum. Enter Brutus, Lucilius, Lucius, and Soldiers
Tittinius and Pindarus meet them.

Brut. Stand, ho!
Luc. Give the word, ho! and stand.
Brut. What now, Lucilius? is Cassius near?
Luc. He is at hand; and Pindarus is come
To do you salutation from his master.
[Exit Lucius with a Letter to Brutus.

Brut. He greets me well.—Your master, Pindarus, In his own change, or by ill officers, Hath given me some worthy cause to wish Things done, undone; but, if he be at hand, I shall be satisfied.
Pin. I do not doubt,
But that my noble master will appear
Such as he is, full of regard and honour.
Brut. He is not doubted.—A word, Lucilius:
How he receiv’d you let me be resolv’d.
Luc. With courtesy and with respect enough;

1 unlucky: in f. e. ² The rest of this direction is not in f. e. ³ So the folio, 1632; first folio gives the line: "You, best friends made, our"
But not with such familiar instances,
Nor with such free and friendly conference,
As he hath used of old.

_Brutus._ Thou hast describ'd
A hot friend cooling. Ever note, Lucilius,
When love begins to sicken and decay,
It useth an enforced ceremony.
There are no tricks in plain and simple faith;
But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
Make gallant show and promise of their mettle,
But when they should endure the bloody spur,
They fall their crests, and, like deceitful jades,
Sink in the trial. Comes his army on?

_Luc._ They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd;
The greater part, the horse in general,
Are come with Cassius. [March within.

_Brutus._ Hark! he is arriv'd.—
March gently on to meet him.

_Enter Cassius and Soldiers._

_Caesar._ Stand, ho!

_Brutus._ Stand, ho! Speak the word along.

Within. Stand.

Within. Stand.

Within. Stand. [One after the other, and fainter!—

_Caesar._ Most noble brother, you have done me wrong.

_Brutus._ Judge me, ye gods! Wrong I mine enemies?
And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother?

_Caesar._ Brutus, this sober form of yours hides wrongs;
And when you do them—

_Brutus._ Cassius, be content;
Speak your griefs softly: I do know you well.
Before the eyes of both our armies here,
Which should perceive nothing but love from us,
Let us not wrangle: bid them move away;
Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs,
And I will give you audience.

_Caesar._ Pindarus.
Bid our commanders lead their charges off
A little from this ground.

_Brutus._ Lucilius, do you the like: and let no man
Come to our tent, till we have done our conference.

Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Within the Tent of Brutus.

_Lucius and Titinius at some distance from it._

_Enter Brutus and Cassius._

_Caesar._ That you have wrong'd me doth appear in this:
You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella
For taking bribes here of the Sardians;
Wherein my letters, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, were slighted off.

_Brutus._ You wrong'd yourself to write in such a case.
_Caesar._ In such a time as this, it is not meet
That every nice offence should bear his comment.

_Brutus._ Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself
Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm;
To sell and mart your offices for gold
To undeservers.

_Caesar._ I an itching palm? You know that you are Brutus that speak this,
Or by the gods this speech were else your last.

_Brutus._ The name of Cassius honours this corruption,
And chastisement does therefore hide his head.

_Caesar._ Chastisement!

_Brutus._ Remember March, the idea of March remember,
Did not great Julius bleed for justice's sake?
What villain touch'd his body, that did stab,
And not for justice? What! shall one of us,
That struck the foremost man of all this world,
But for supporting robbers, shall we now
Contaminate our fingers with base bribes,
And sell the mighty space of our large honours,
For so much trash as may be grasped thus?
I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon,
Than such a Roman.

_Caesar._ Brutus, bay not me,
I'll not endure it: you forget yourself;
To hedge me in. I am a soldier, I,
Older in practice, abler than yourself.
To make conditions.

_Brutus._ Go to; you are not, Cassius
_Caesar._ I am.

_Brutus._ I say, you are not.
_Caesar._ Urge me no more, I shall forget myself:
Have mind upon your health; tempt me no farther.

_Brutus._ Away, slight man!

_Caesar._ Is't possible?

_Brutus._ Hear me, for I will speak.
Must I give way and room to your rash cholers?
Shall I be frightened, when a madman sates?
_Caesar._ O ye gods! ye gods! Must I endure all this?

_Brutus._ All this? ay, more. Fret, till your proud heart break;
Go, show your slaves how choleric you are,
And make your bondmen tremble. Must I budge?
Must I observe you? Must I stand and crouch
Under your testy humour? By the gods,
You shall digest the venom of your spleen,
Though it do split you; for this day forth,
I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter,
When you are wagsplish.

_Caesar._ Is it come to this?

_Brutus._ You say, you are a better soldier;
Let it appear so; make your vaunting true,
And it shall please me well. For mine own part,
I shall be glad to learn of abler men.

_Caesar._ You wrong me every way; you wrong me,

_Brutus._ I said, an elder soldier, not a better :
Did I say? better?

_Brutus._ If you did, I care not.

_Caesar._ When Caesar liv'd, he durst not thus have

_Brutus._ Peace, peace! you durst not so have tempted him

_Caesar._ I durst not?

_Brutus._ No.

_Caesar._ What! durst not tempt him?

_Brutus._ For your life you durst not.

_Caesar._ Do not presume too much upon my love;
I may do that I shall be sorry for.

_Brutus._ You have done that you should be sorry for.
There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats,
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty,
That they pass by me as the idle wind,
Which I respect not. I did send to you
For certain sums of gold, which you denied me;
For I can raise no money by vile means:
By heaven, I had rather coin my heart,
And drop my blood for drachmas, than to wring
From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash,
By any indirection. I did send
To you for gold to pay my legions,
Which you denied me: was that done like Cassius?
Should I have answered Caius Cassius so?
When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous,
To lock such rascal counters from his friends,
Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts.

Scene III.

JULIUS CAESAR.

Dash him to pieces!

Cas. I denied you not.

Bru. You did.

Cas. I did not: he was but a fool.

That brought my answer back.—Brutus hath rived my heart:

A friend should bear his friend’s iniquities,

But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

Bru. I do not, till you practise them on me.

Cas. You love me not.

Bru. I do not like your faults.

Cas. A friendly eye could never see such faults.

Bru. A flattering would not, though they did appear

As huge as high Olympus.

Cas. Come, Antony; and young Octavius, come;

Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius,

For Cassius is a vaery of the world:

Hated by one he loves; brav’d by his brother;

Cheek’d like a bondman; all his faults observ’d,

Set in a note-book, learn’d, and count’d by rote,

To cast into my teeth. O! I could weep

My spirit from mine eyes.—There is my dagger,

And here my naked breast; within, a heart

Dearer than Plutus’ mine, richer than gold:

If that thou be’st a Roman, take it forth;

I, that denied thee gold will give my heart.

Strike, as thou didst at Caesar; for, I know,

When thou didst hate him worst, thou lov’dst him better

Than ever thou lov’dst Cassius.

Bru. Sheath your dagger.

Be angry when you will, it shall have scope;

Do what you will, dishonour shall be honour.

O Cassius! you are yoked with a lamb,

That carries anger as the flint bears fire,

Who, much enforced, shows a hasty spark,

And straight is cold again.

Cas. Hath Cassius liv’d

To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,

When grief, and blood ill-temper’d, vexeth him?

Bru. When I spoke that, I was ill-temper’d too.

Cas. Do you confess so much? Give me your hand.

Bru. And my heart, too. O Brutus!—

Cas. What’s the matter?

Have you not love enough to bear with me,

When that rash humour, which my mother gave me,

Makes me forgetful?

Bru. Yes, Cassius; and, from henceforth,

When you are over-earnest with your Brutus,

He’ll think your mother chides, and leave you so.

[Enter Lucilius and Titinius.]

Enter Lucilius and Titinius.

Bru. Lucilius and Titinius, bid the commanders

Prepare to lodge their companies to-night.

Cas. And come yourselves, and bring Messala with you,

Immediately to us. [Exeunt Lucilius and Titinius.

Bru. Lucilius, a bowl of wine.

Cas. I did not think you could have been so angry.

Bru. O Cassius! I am sick of many griefs.

Cas. Of your philosophy you make no use,

If you give place to accidental evils.

Bru. No man bears sorrow better.—Portia is dead.

Cas. Ha! Portia?

Bru. She is dead.

Cas. How escap’d killing, when I cross’d you so?—

O, unsupported and touching loss!—

Upon what sickness?

Bru. Impatient of my absence,

And grief, that young Octavius with Mark Antony

Have made themselves so strong—for with her death

That tidings came.—With this she fell distract,

And, her attendants absent, swallowed fire.

Cas. And died so?

Bru. Even so.

Cas. O ye immortal gods!—

Enter Lucius, with Wine and Tapers.

Bru. Speak no more of her.—Give me a bowl of wine;

In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius.

[Drinks.

Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge.—

Fill, Lucius, till the wine o’erswell the cup;

I cannot drink too much of Brutus’ love.

[Drinks.

Re-enter Titinius, with Messala.

Bru. Come in, Titinius.—Welcome, good Messala.—

Now sit we close about this taper here,

And call in question our necessities.

Cas. Portia, art thou gone?

Bru. No more, I pray you.—

Messala, I have here received letters,

That young Octavius, and Mark Antony,

Come down upon us with a mighty power;

Bending their expedition toward Philippa.

Mrs. Myself have letters of the self-same tenour.

Bru. With what addition?

Mrs. That by proscription, and bills of outlawry,

Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus,

Have put to death an hundred senators.

Bru. Therein our letters do not well agree:

Mine speak of seventy senators, that died

By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.

Cas. Cicero one?

Mrs. Cicero is dead,

And by that order of proscription.—

Had you your letters from your wife, my lord?

Bru. No, Messala.

Mrs. Nor nothing in your letters writ of her?

Mrs. That, methinks, is strange.

Bru. Why ask you? Hear you aught of her in yours?

Mrs. No, my lord.

Bru. Now, as you are a Roman, tell me true.

Mrs. Then like a Roman bear the truth I tell:

For certain she is dead, and by strange manner.

Bru. Why, farewell, Portia.—We must die, Messala.

With meditating that she must die once,

I have the patience to endure it now.

Mrs. Even so great men great losses should endure.

Cas. I have as much of this in art as you,

But yet my nature could not bear it so.

Bru. Well, to our work alive.—What do you think
Of marching to Philippi presently?

Cas. I do not think it good.

Bru. Your reason?

Cas. This is.

It is better, that the enemy seek us;
So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiers,
Doing himself offence; whilst we, lying still,
Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness.

Bru. Good reasons must, of force, give place to better.
The people, 'twixt Philippi and this ground,
Do stand but in a fore'd affection,
For they have grudg'd us contribution:
The enemy, marching along by them,
By them shall make a fuller number up,
Come on refresh'd, new-hearted, and encourag'd;
From which advantage shall we cut him off;
If at Philippi we do race him there,
These people at our back.

Cas. Hear me, good brother.

Bru. Under your pardon.—You must note besides,
That we have tried the utmost of our friends.
Our legions are brim-full, our cause is ripe:
The enemy increaseth every day:
We, at the height, are ready to decline.
There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows, and in miseries.
On such a full sea are we now aboard;
And we must take the current when it serves,
Or lose our ventures.

Cas. Then, with your will, go on:
We will along ourselves, and meet them at Philippi.
Bru. The deep of night has crept upon our talk,
And nature must obey necessity,
Which we will niggard with a little rest.
There is no more to say?

Cas. No more.—Good night:
Early to-morrow will we rise, and hence.
Bru. Lucius, my gown. [Exit Lucius.]—Farewell, good Messala:

Good night, Titinius.—Noble, noble Cassius,
Good night, and good repose.

Cas. O! my dear brother,
This was an ill beginning of the night.
Never come such division 'tween our souls!
Let it not, Brutus.

Bru. Every thing is well.
Cas. Good night, my lord.

Bru. Good night, good brother.

TX. Mrs. Good night, lord Brutus.

Bru. Farewell, every one.

[Exeunt Cas. Tit. and Mrs.]

Re-enter Lucius, with the Gown.

Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument?

Luc. Here in the tent.

Bru. What! thou speakest drowsily?
Poor knife, I blame thee not; thou art o'er-watch'd.
Call Cassius, and some other of my men;
I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.

Luc. Varro, and Cassius!

Enter Varro and Cassius.

Var. Calls my lord?

Bru. I pray you, sirs, lie in my tent, and sleep:
It may be, I shall raise you by and by
On business to my brother Cassius.

Var. So please you, we will stand, and watch your pleasure.

Bru. I will not have it so; lie down, good sirs:

It may be, I shall otherwise bethink me.
Look, Lucius, here's the book I sought for so.
I put it in the pocket of my gown. [Servants lie down]

Luc. I was sure, your lordship did not give it me.

Bru. Bear with me, good boy; I am much forgetful.
Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes awhile,
And touch thy instrument a strain or two?

Luc. Ay, my lord, an' please you.

Bru. It does, my boy
I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.

Luc. It is my duty, sir.

Bru. I should not urge thy duty past thy night:
I know, young bloods look for a time of rest.

Luc. I have slept, my lord, already.

Bru. It was well done, and thou shalt sleep again;
I will not hold thee long; if I do live,
I will be good to thee.

[Music, and a Song.]

This is a sleepy tune.—O murderous slumber!

[Lucius falls asleep.]

Lay'st thou thy laden mace upon my boy,
That plays thee music?—Gentle knave, good night;
I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee.
If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument:
I'll take it from thee; and, good boy, good night.—
Let me see, let me see: is not the leaf turn'd down,
Where I left reading? Here it is, I think.

[He sits down to read.]

Enter the Ghost of Caesar.

How ill this taper burns.—Ha! who comes here?
I think, it is the weakness of mine eyes
That whispers this monstrous apparition.
It comes upon me.—Art thou any thing?
Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil,
That mak'st my blood cold, and my hair to stare?
Speak to me, what thou art.

Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus.

Bru. Why com'st thou?

Ghost. To tell thee, thou shalt see me at Philippi.

Bru. Well; then I shall see thee again?

Ghost. Ay, at Philippi.

[Ghost vanishes.]—

Bru. Why, I will see thee at Philippi then.—
Now I have taken heart, thou vanisher:
Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee.—

Boy! Lucius!—Varro! Varro! Claudius! Sirs, awake!—

Claudius!

Luc. The strings, my lord, are false.

Bru. He thinks, he still is at his instrument.—

Lucius, awake!—

Luc. My lord.

Bru. Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou so eriedst out?

Luc. My lord, I do not know that I did cry.

Bru. Yes, that thou didst. Didst thou see anything?

Luc. Nothing, my lord.

Bru. Sleep again, Lucius.—Sirrah, Claudius!—

Fellow thou: awake!—

Var. My lord.

Clau. My lord.

Bru. Why did you so cry out, sirs, in your sleep?

Var. Clau. Did we, my lord?

Bru. Ay: saw you any thing?

Var. No, my lord, I saw nothing.

Clau. Nor I, my lord.

Bru. Go, and commend me to my brother Cassius:
Bid him set on his powers betimes before,
And we will follow.

Var. Clau. It shall be done, my lord. [Exit]
ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Plains of Philippi.

Enter Octavius, Antony, and their Army.

Oct. Now, Antony, our hopes are answered. You said, the enemy would not come down, but keep the hills and upper regions; it proves not so: their battles are at hand; they mean to warn us at Philippi here, answering before we do demand of them.

Ant. Tut! I am in their bosoms, and I know Wherefore they do it: they could be content To visit other places; and come down With fearful bravery, thinking by this face To fasten in our thoughts that they have courage; But 'tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, generals; The enemy comes on in gallant show: Their bloody sign of battle is hung out, And something to be done immediately.

Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on, Upon the left hand of the even field.

Oct. Upon the right hand I; keep thou the left. Why do you cross me in this exigent?

Oct. I do not cross you; but I will do so. [March. Drum. Enter Brutus, Cassius, and their Army; Lucilius, Titinius, Messala, and others. Brut. They stand, and would have parley. Cass. Stand fast, Titinius: we must out and talk. Oct. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle? Ant. No, Caesar, we will answer on their charge. Make forth: the generals would have some words.

Oct. Stir not until the signal.

Brut. Words before blows; is it so, countrymen?

Oct. Not that we love words better, as you do. Brut. Good words are better than bad strokes, Octavius.

Ant. In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words:

Witness the hole you made in Caesar's heart, Crying, "Long live! hail, Caesar!"

Cas. Antony, The posture of your blows is yet unknown; But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees, And leave them honeyless.

Ant. Not stingleas, too.

Brut. O! yes, and soundless too;
For you have stol'n their buzzing, Antony,
And very wisely threat before you sting.

Ant. Villains! you did not so when your vile daggers Hacked one another in the sides of Caesar:
You showed your teeth like apes, and fawn'd like hounds,
And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Caesar's feet;
While we, as Caesar, like a fear, behind
Struck Caesar on the neck. O, you flatterers!

Cas. Flatterers!—Now, Brutus, thank you yourself:
This tongue had not offended so to-day,
If Cassius might have rul'd.

Oct. Come, come, the cause: if arguing make us sweat,
The proof of it will turn to redder drops.
Look; I draw sword against conspirators;
When think you that the sword goes up again?

Never, till Caesar's three and thirty wounds

Be well aveng'd; or till another Caesar
Have added slaughter to the word of traitor;

Brut. Caesar, thou canst not die by traitors' hands,
Unless thou bring'st them with thee.

Oct. So I hope:
I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.

Brut. O! if thou wert the noblest of thy strain
Young man, thou couldst not die more honourable.

Cas. A peevish schoolboy, worthless of such honour
Join'd with a masker and a reveller.

Ant. Old Cassius still.

Oct. Come, Antony; away!—

Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth.
If you dare fight to-day, come to the field;
If not, when you have stomachs.

[Event Octavius, Antony, and their Army

Cas. Why now, blow wind, swell billow, and swim bark!

The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.

Brut. Ho, Lucilius! hark, a word with you.

Luc. My lord. [Brutus and Lucilius talk apart

Cas. Messala!

Mes. What says the general?

Cas. This is my birth-day; as this very day

Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand, Messala;

Be thou my witness, that against my will,

As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set

Upon one battle all our liberties.

You know, that I held Epicurus strong,
And his opinion: now, I change my mind,
And partly credit things that do pressage.

Coming from Sardis, in our forward ensign

Two mighty eagles fell: and there they perch'd,

Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands;

Who to Philippi here escorted us:

This morning are they fled away, and gone,

And in their steads do ravens, crows, and kites,

Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us,

As we were sickly prey: their shadows seem

A canopy most fatal, under which

Our army lies ready to give up the ghost.

Mes. Believe not so.

Cas. I but believe it partly,
For I am fresh of spirit, and resolv'd
To meet all perils very constantly.

Brut. Even so, Lucilius. [Lucilius stands back

Cas. Now, most noble Brutus,

The gods to-day stand friendly! that we may,

Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age:

But since the affairs of men rest still uncertain,
Let's reason with the worst that may befal.
If we do lose this battle, then is this

The very last time we shall speak together:

What are you then determined to do?

Brut. Even by the rule of that philosophy,

By which I did blame Cato for the death
Which he did give himself. I know not how,
But I do find it cowardly and vile,
For fear of what might fall, so to prevent

The term of life,—arming myself with patience,
To stay the providence of those high powers

That govern us below.

Cas. Then, if we lose this battle,
Enter Pindarus.

Come hither, sirrah.
In Parthia did I take thee prisoner;
And then I swore thee, saving of thy life
That whatsoever I did bid thee do,
Thou shouldst attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath
Now be a freeman; and with this good sword,
That ran through Caesar's bowels, search this bosom
Stand not to answer: here, take thou the hilts:
And when my face is cover'd, as 'tis now
Guide thou the sword.—Caesar, thou art reveng'd.
Even with the sword that kill'd thee.

[Dies]

Pin. So, I am free; yet would not so have been.
Durst I have done my will. O Cassius!
Far from this country Pindarus shall run,
Where never Roman shall take note of him. [Exit
Re-enter Titinius, with Messala.

Mes. It is but change, Titinius; for Octavius
Is overthrown by noble Brutus' power,
As Cassius' legions are by Antony.

Tit. These tidings will well comfort Cassius
Mes. Where did you leave him?

Tit. All disconsolate
With Pindarus, his bondman, on this hill.

Mes. Is not that he, that lies upon the ground?
Tit. He lies not like the living.—O my heart!
Mes. Is not that he?

Tit. No, this was he, Messala,
But Cassius is no more.—O setting sun!
As in thy red rays thou dost sink to-night,
So in his red blood Cassius' day is set:
The sun of Rome is set. Our day is gone:
Clouds, dews, and dangers come; our deeds are done
Mistrust of my success hath done this deed.

Mes. Mistrust of good success hath done this deed
O hateful error! melancholy's child,
Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of men
The things that are not? O error! soon conceiv'd,
Thou never com'st unto a happy birth.
But kill'st the mother that engender'd thee.

Tit. What, Pindarus! Where art thou, Pindarus?

Mes. Seek him, Titinius, whilst I go to meet
The noble Brutus, thrusting this report
Into his ears: I may say, thrusting it;
For piercing steel, and darts envenomed,
Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus,
As tidings of this sight.

Tit. He yeow, Messala,
And I will seek for Pindarus the while. [Exit Messala.
Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius?
Did I not meet thy friends? and did not they Put on my brows this wreath of victory,
And bid me give it thee? Didst not thou hear their shouts?
Alas! thou hast misconstrued every thing,
But hold thee; take this garland on thy brow:
Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I
Will do his bidding.—Brutus, come apace,
And see how I regarded Caius Cassius.
By your leave, gods:—This is a Roman's part:
Come, Cassius' sword, and find Titinius' heart. [Dies
Alarum. Re-enter Messala, with Brutus, young Cato, Strato, Volumnius, and Lucilius.

Bru. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie?

Mes. Lo! yonder; and Titinius mourning it

Bru. Titinius' face is upward.

Cato. He is slain.

Bru. O Julius Caesar! thou art mighty yet:
Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords
In our own proper entrails. [Low Alarum.

SCENE II.—The Same. The Field of Battle.

Alarum. Enter Brutus and Messala.

Bru. Ride, ride, Messala; ride, and give these bills
Unto the legions on the other side. [Loud Alarum.

Let them set on at once: for I perceive
But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing,
And sudden push gives them the overthrow.
Ride, ride, Messala: let them all come down. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter Cassius and Titinius.

Cas. O, look, Titinius, look! the villains fly.
Myself have to mine own turn'd enemy:
This ensign here of mine was turning back;
I slew the coward, and did take it from him.

Tit. O Cassius! Brutus gave the word too early;
Who having some advantage on Octavius,
Took it too eagerly: his soldiers fell to spoil,
Whilst we by Antony are all enclos'd.

Enter Pindarus.

Pin. Fly farther off, my lord; fly farther off;
Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord:
Fly, therefore, noble Cassius, fly farther.

Cas. This hill is far enough. Look look, Titinius;
Are those my tents where I perceive the fire?

Tit. They are, my lord.

Titinius, if thou lov'st me,
Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in him,
Till he have brought thee up to yonder troops,
And here again; that I may jest assur'd,
Whether yond' troops are friend or enemy,

Tit. I will be here again, even with a thought. [Exit
Cas. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill:
My sight was ever thick; regard Titinius,
And tell me what thou not'st about the field.—
[Exeunt Pindarus.

This day I breathed first; time is come round,
And where I did begin, there shall I end:
My life is run his compass.—SIRRah, what news?

Pin. [Above.] O my lord!

Cas. What news?

Pin. Titinius is enclosed round about
With horsemen, that make him on the spur;
Yet he spurs on:—now they are almost on him.
Now, Titinius!—now some 'light:—O! he 'lights too:
Is't soon; and, hark! [Shout.] they shout for joy.

Cas. Come down: behold no more.—
O, coward that I am, to live so long,
To see my best friend ta'en before my face!
Cato.  Brave Titinius!
Look, where he has not crown’d dead Cassius!
Brut. Are yet two Romans living such as these?—
The last of all the Romans, fare thee well!
It is impossible that ever Rome
Should breed thy fellow.—Friends, I owe more tears
To this dead man, than you shall see me pay.—
I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time.—
Come, therefore, and to Thasos send his body:
His funerals shall not be in our camp.
Lest it discomfit us.—Lucilius, come:—
And come, young Cato; let us to the field.—
Labeo, and Flavius, set our battles on!—
'Tis three o'clock: and, Romans, yet ere night
We shall try fortune in a second fight.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.
Alarum. Enter, fighting, Soldiers of both Armies; then Brutus, Cato, Lucilius, and others.
Brut. Yet, countrymen, O! yet hold up your heads,
Cato. What bastard doth not? Who will go with me?
I will proclaim my name about the field,—
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!
A foe to tyrants, and my country’s friend.
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho! [Charges the Enemy.
Brut. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus; I:
Brutus, my country’s friend: know me for Brutus.
[Exit, charging the Enemy. Cato is overpowered, and falls.
Luc. O, young and noble Cato! art thou down?
Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius,
And may’st be honour’d being Cato’s son.
1 Sold. Yield, or thou diest.
Luc. Only I yield to die.
There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight.
[Offering money.
Kill Brutus, and be honour’d in his death.
1 Sold. We must not.—A noble prisoner!
2 Sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony, Brutus is ta’en.
1 Sold. I’ll tell the news:—Here comes the general.—
[Enter Antony.
Brutus is ta’en, Brutus is ta’en, my lord.
Ant. Where is he?
Luc. Safe, Antony; Brutus is safe enough.
I dare assure thee, that no enemy
Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus:
The gods defend him from so great a shame!
When you do find him, or alive, or dead,
He will be found like Brutus, like himself
Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but, I assure you,
A prize no less in worth. Keep this man safe,
Give him all kindness: I had rather have Such men my friends, than enemies. Go on,
And see where Brutus be alive, or dead,
And bring us word unto Octavius’ tent.
How every thing is chanced.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.
Enter Brutus, Dardanius, Clitus, Strato, and Volumnius.
Brut. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.
Clit. Statilius show’d the torch-light; but, my lord,
He came not back: he is or ta’en, or slain.
Brut. Sit thee down, Clitus; saying is the word;
It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus, — [Whispering.
Clit. What! I, my lord? No, not for all the world.
Brut Peace then: no words.

Clt. I’ll rather kill myself
Dor. Shall I do such a deed?
Clit. O, Dardanius!
Dor. O, Clitus!
Clit. What ill request did Brutus make to thee?
Dor. To kill him, Clitus. Look, he meditates.
Clit. Now is that noble vessel full of grief,
That it runs over even at his eyes.
Brut. Come hither, good Volumnius: list a word.
Vol. What says my lord?
Brut. Why, this, Volumnius
The ghost of Caesar hath appear’d to me
Two several times by night: at Sardis once;
And, this last night, here in Philippi’ fields.
I know my hour is come.
Vol. Not so, my lord.
Brut. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius.
Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes;
Our enemies have beat us to the pit:
[Low Alarum.
It is more worthy to leap in ourselves.
Than tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius,
Thou know’st that we two went to school together.
Even for that our love of old, I pray thee,
Hold thou my sword-hilts whilst I run on it
Vol. That’s not an office for a friend, my lord.
[Alarum still.
Clit. Fly, fly, my lord! there is no tarrying here.
Brut. Farewell to you:—and you, and you, Volumnius.
[Shaking hands severally.
Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep;
Farewell to thee too, Strato.—Countrymen,
My heart doth joy, that yet in all my life
I found no man, but he was true to me.
I shall have glory by this losing day.
More than Octavius, and Mark Antony,
By this vile conquest shall attain unto.
So, fare you well at once; for Brutus’ tongue
Hath almost ended his life’s history.
Night hangs upon mine eyes; my bones would rest
That have but laboured to attain this hour [Alarum.
Cry within: Fly, fly, fly
Clit. Fly, my lord, fly!
Brut. Hence: I will follow.
[Exeunt Clitus, Dardanius, and Volumnius
I pr’ythee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord.
Thou art a fellow of a good respect:
Thy life hath had some snatch of honour in it:
Hold, then, my sword, and turn away thy face,
While I do run upon it. Will thou, Strato?
Strat. Give me your hand first: fare you well, my lord
Brut. Farewell, good Strato.—Caesar, now be still:
I kill’d not thee with half so good a will.
[He runs on his Sword, and dies.
Oct. What man is that?
Mess. My master’s man.—Strato, where is thy master?
Strat. Free from the bondage you are in, Messala:
The conquerors can but make a fire of him;
For Brutus only overcame himself,
And no man else hath honour by his death.
Luc. So Brutus should be found.—I thank thee
Brutus. That thou hast prov’d Lucilius’ saying true.
Oct. All that serv’d Brutus I will entertain
Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?
Strat. Ay, if Messala will prefer me to you.
Oct. Do so, good Messala.
Mes. How died my master, Strato?

Str. I held the sword, and he did run on it.

Mes. Octavius, then take him to follow thee,
That did the latest service to my master.

Ant. This was the noblest Roman of them all:
All the conspirators, save only he,
Did that they did in envy of great Caesar;
He, only, in a generous' honest thought
Of a common good to all, made one of them

His life was gentle; and the elements
So mix’d in him, that Nature might stand up,
And say to all the world, “This was a man!”

Oct. According to his virtue let us use him
With all respect, and rites of burial.
Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie,
Most like a soldier, order’d honourably.—
So, call the field to rest; and let’s away,
To part the glories of this happy day.

Exeunt.

The Ghost of Banquo, and other Apparitions.

SCENE, in the end of the fourth Act, in England: through the rest of the Play, in Scotland

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An open Place.

Thunder and lightning. Enter three Witches.

1 Witch. When shall we three meet again,
In thunder, lightning, or in rain?
2 Witch. When the hurlyburly's done, the battle's won.
Which is the strange effect of sun, moon, and stars?
1 Witch. Where shall we meet? Upon the heath:
2 Witch. There to meet with Macbeth.
1 Witch. I come, Graymalkin!
All. Paddock* calls,—Anon.—
Fair is foul, and foul is fair;—
Hover through the fog and filthy air. [Witches vanish.

SCENE II.—A Camp near Fores.

Sennet within. Enter King Duncan, Malcolm, Donalbain, Lenox, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Soldier.

Dun. What bloody man is that? He can report
As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
The newest state.

Mal. This is the sergeant,
Who, like a good and hardy soldier, fought
Gainst my captivity,—Hail, brave friend!—
Say to the king thy knowledge of the broil,
As thou didst leave it.

Sold. Doubtful it stood;
As two spent swimmers, that do cling together
And choke their art. The merciless Macdonwald (Worthy to be a rebel, for to that
The multiplying villainies of nature
Do swarm upon him) from the western isles

Of Kerns and Gallowglasses² is supplied;
And fortune, on his damned quarrel² smiling,
Show'd like a rebel's whore: but all's too weak.
For brave Macbeth (well he deserves that name)
Disdaining fortune, with his brandish'd steel,
Which smok'd with bloody execution,
Like valour's minion, car'd out his passage,
Till he face'd the slave;
Which ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewell to him.
Till he unseam'd him from the nave to the chaps,
And fi'd his head upon our battlements.

Dun. O, valiant cousin! worthy gentleman!
Sold. As whence the sun 'gins his reflexion
Shipwrecking storms and direful thunders break,
So from that spring, whence comfort seem'd to come,
Discomfort swells. Mark, king of Scotland, mark—
No sooner justice had, with valour arm'd,
Compell'd these skipping Kerns to trust their heels.
But the Norwegan lord, surveying vantage,
With furth'sh'd arms, and new supplies of men
Began a fresh assault.

Dun. Dismay'd not this
Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?
Sold. Yes,

As sparrows eagles, or the hare the lion.
If I say sooth, I must report they were
As cannons overcharg'd with double cracks:
So they doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe:
Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds,
Or memorize another Golgotha,
I cannot tell.—
But I am faint, my gashes cry for help.

Dun. So well thy words become thee, as thy wounds:

1 A name intimating the sound of that it signifies, as hurly burly, for an uproar and tumultuous storm.—Peacham's Garden of Eloquence, 1577.
2 A toad.
They smack of honour both.—Go, get him surgeons.

[Exit Soldier, attended.

Enter Rosse and Angus.

Who comes here?

Mol. The worthy thane of Rosse.

Len. What haste looks through his eyes!

So should he look, that comes to speak things strange.

Rosse. God save the king!

Dun. Whence camest thou, worthy thane?

Rosse. From Fife, great king;

Where the Norwegians bann'd thou the sky
And fan our people cold.

Norway himself, with terrible numbers,
Assisted by that most disloyal traitor,
The thane of Cawdor, began a dismal conflict,
Till that Bellona's bridgesome, lapp'd in proof,
Confronted him with self-comparisons,
Point against point, rebellious arm against arm,
Curbing his invish spirit: and, to conclude,
The victory fell on us:—Great happiness!

Dun. What he hath lost noble Macbeth hath won.

SCENE III.—A Heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1 Witch. Where hast thou been, sister?

3 Witch. Sister, where thou?

1 Witch. A sailor's wife had chestnuts in her lap.

And morn'd, and morn'd, and morn'd: 'Give me,'

 Exeunt.

Posters of the sea and land,

Thus do go about, about:
Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,
And thrice again, to make up nine.

Peace!—the charm's wound up.

Enter Macbeth and Banquo.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have not seen.

Ban. How far is 't called to Fores?—What are there,
So wither'd, and so wild in their attire,
That look not like th' inhabitants of the earth.

And yet are on't? Live ye or are ye aught?

That man may question? You seem to understand me,

By each at once her chappy finger laying

Upon her skinny lips. You should be women,

And yet your beards forbid me to interpret
That you are so.

Macb. Speak, if you can.—What are ye?

1 Witch. All hail! Macbeth! hail to thee, thane of Glamis!

2 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, thane of Cawdor!

3 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! that shalt be king hereafter.

Ban. Good sir, why do you start, and seem to fear

Things that do sound so fair?—I the name of truth,

Are ye fantastical, or that indeed

Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner

You greet with present grace, and great prediction

Of noble having, and of royal hope,

That he seems rapt withal: to me you speak not.

If you can look into the seeds of time,

And say which grain will grow, and which will not.

Speak then to me, who neither beg, nor fear,

Your favours, nor your hate.

1 Witch. Hail!

2 Witch. Hail!

3 Witch. Hail!

1 Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and greater.

2 Witch. Not so happy, yet much happier.

3 Witch. Thou shalt get kings, though thou be none.

So, all hail, Macbeth, and Banquo!

1 Witch. Banquo, and Macbeth, all hail!

Macb. Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me more.

By Sinel's death, I know, I am thane of Glamis;

But how of Cawdor? the thane of Cawdor lives,

A prosperous gentleman; and to be king

Stands not within the prospect of belief,

No more than to be Cawdor. Say, from whence

You owe this strange intelligence? or why

Upon this blasted heath you stop our way

With such prophetic greeting?—Speak, I charge you.

[Witches vanish.

Ban. The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,

And these are of them.—Whither have they vanished?

Macb. Into the air; and what seem'd corporal, melted

As breath into the wind.—Would they had stay'd!

Ban. Were such things heard, as we do speak about,

Or have we eaten on the insane root,

That takes the reason prisoner?

Macb. Your children shall be kings.

Ban. You shall be king

Macb. And thane of Cawdor too: went it not so?

Ban. To the self-same tune, and words. Who's here?

Enter Rosse and Angus.

Rosse. The king hath happily receiv'd, Macbeth,

The news of thy success; and when he read

Thy personal venture in the rebel's fight,

His wonders and his praises do contend,
SCENE IV.

MACBETH.

Which should be thine, or his. Silene'd with that,
In viewing o'er the rest of the self-same day,
He finds thee in the stout Norweyan ranks.
Nothing afeard of what thyself didst make,
Strange images of death. As thick as tale,
Came post with post; and every one did bear
Thy praises in his kingdom's great defence,
And pour'd them down before him.

Ang.

To give thee from our royal master thanks;
Only to herald thee into his sight,
Not pay thee.

Rosse. And, for an earnest of a greater honour,
He bade me from him call thee thane of Cawdor:
In which addition, hail, most worthy thane,
For it is thine.

Ban.

What! can the devil speak true?

Macb. The thane of Cawdor lives: why do you
In borrow'd robes?

Ang.

Who was the thane, lives yet;
But under heavy judgment bears that life
Which he deserves to lose. Whether he was combin'd
With those of Norway, or did line the rebel
With hidden help and vantage, or that with both
He laboured in his country's wreck, I know not;
But treasons capital, confess'd and prov'd,
Have overthrown him.

Macb.

Glamis, and thane of Cawdor:
The greatest is behind. [Aside.] Thanks for your pains.—
Do you not hope your children shall be kings,
When those that gave the thane of Cawdor to me,
Promis'd no less to them?

Ban.

That, thrust'd home,
Might yet enkindle you unto the crown.
Besides the thane of Cawdor. But it is strange:
And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,
The instruments of darkness tell us truths;
Win us with honest tristles, to betray us
In deepest consequence.—

Consins, a word, I pray you.

Two truths are told,

Macb.

As happy prologues to the swelling act
Of the imperial theme. [Aside.] I thank you, gentlemen.—

This supernatural soliciting

Cannot be ill: cannot be good:—if ill,

Why hath it given me earnest of success,

Commencing in a truth? I am thane of Cawdor:
If good, why do I yield to that suggestion,

Whose horrid image doth unfixed my hair,

And make my seced heart knock at my ribs,

Against the use of nature? Present fears

Are less than horrible imaginings.

My thought, where murder yet is but fantastical,
Shakes so my single state of man, that function

Is smother'd in surmise, and nothing is,

But what is not.

Ban.

Look, how our partner's rapt.

Macb. If chance will have me king, why, chance may crown me,

Without my stir.

Ban.

New honours come upon him,
Like our strange garments, clevate not to their mould,

With the aid of use.

Macb.

Come what come may,

Time and the hour runs through the roughest day.

Ban. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure.

Macb. Give me your favour: my dull brain was

With things forgotten.—Kind gentlemen, your pains
Are register'd where every day I turn
The leaf to read them.—Let us toward the king.—
[To Banquo.] Think upon what hath chanc'd: and at more time,
The interim having weight'd it, let us speak
Our free hearts each to other.

Ban.

Very gladly.

Macb. Till then, enough.—Come, friends. [Exeunt]

SCENE IV.—Forees. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter Duncan, MacIom, Donalsbain,
Lenox, and attendants.

Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor? Are not
Those in commission yet return'd?

Mat.

My liege,
They are not yet come back; but I have spoke
With one that saw him die, who did report,
That very thrantly he confess'd his treasons,
Implord his highness' pardon, and set forth
A deep repentance. Nothing in his life

Because him like the leaving it: he died
As one that had been studied in his death,
To throw away the dearest thing he owd,
As 't were a careless trifle.

Dun.

There's no art
To find the mind's construction in the face:
He was a gentleman on whom I built
An absolute trust.—

Enter Macbeth, Banquo, Rosse, and Angus.

O worthiest cousin! [Embrace]

The sin of my ingratitude even now

Was heavy on me. Thou art so far before,

That swiftest wind of recompense is slow
To overtake thee: would thou hadst less disabled
That the proportion both of thanks and payment

Might have been more! only I have left to say,
More is thy duce than more than all can pay.

Macb. The service and the loyalty I owe,
In doing it pays itself. Your highness' part
Is to receive our duties: and our duties

Are to your throne and state, children, and servants:
Which do but what they should, by doing every thing
Safe toward your love and honour.

Dun.

Welcome hither:

I have begun to plant thee. and will labour
To make thee full of growing.—Noble Banquo,

That hast no less deserv'd, nor must be known
No less to have done so: let me infold thee.

And hold thee to my heart. [Embrace.

Ban.

There if I grow,
The harvest is your own.

Dun.

My plenteous joys,
Wanton in fulness, seek to hide themselves

In drops of sorrow.—Sons, kinsmen, thanes,
And you whose places are the nearest, know,
We will establish our estate upon

Our eldest, Malcolm: whom we name hereafter
The prince of Cumberland: which honour must

Not, unaccompanied, invest him only,

But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine

On all deservers.—From hence to Inverness,

And bind us farther to you.

Macb. The rest is labour, which is not end for you

I'll be myself the harbinger, and make joyful
The hearing of my wife with your approach;

So, humbly take my leave.

Dun.

My worthy Cawdor!

Macb. The prince of Cumberland!—That is a step
On which I must fall down, or else o'er-leap,
For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires
Let not light see my black and deep desires;
The eye wink at the hand; yet let that be,
Which the eye fears, when it is done, to see. [Exit.

Den. True, worthy Banquo: he is full so valiant,
And in his commendations I am fed;
It is a banquet to me. Let us after him,
Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome:
It is a peerless kinsman. [Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Inverness. A Room in Macbeth's Castle.

Enter Lady Macbeth, with a letter.

Lady M. [Reads.] "They met me in the day of success;
and I have learned by the perfectest report, they have more in them than mortal knowledge. When I burned in desire to question them farther, they made themselves air, into which they vanished. While I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came missives from the king, who all-hailed me, 'Thane of Cawdor'; by which title, before, these weird sisters saluted me, and referred me to the coming on of time, with, 'Hail, thou that shalt be!' This have I thought good to deliver thee, my dearest partner of greatness, that thou most not lose the dutes of rejoicing, by being ignorant of what greatness is promised thee. Lay it to thy heart, and farewell." [Glamis thou art, and Cawdor; and shalt be What thou art promised. Yet I do fear thy nature:
It is too full o' the milk of human kindness,
To catch the nearest way. Thou wouldst be great; Art not without ambition; but without the Illness should attend it: what thou wouldst highly,
That wouldst thou holily; wouldst not play false.
And yet wouldst wrongly win: thou'ldst have, great Glamis,
That which cries, 'Thus thou must do, if thou have it;
And that which rather thou dost fear to do,
Than wishest should be undone.' He thee hither,
That I may pour my spirits in thine ear,
And chastise with the valour of my tongue,
All that impedes thee from the golden round,
Which fate and metaphysical aid doth seem
To have thee crown'd wilt. —
[Enter an Attendant."
 What is your tidings?

Att. The king comes here to-night.

Lady M. Thou'rt mad to say it.
Is not thy master with him? who, were't so,
Would have inform'd for preparation.

Att. So please you, it is true: our thane is coming.
One of my fellows had the speed of him;
Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely more
Than would make up his message.

Lady M. Give him tending: he bears great news. [Exit Attendant.] The raven himself is hoarse,
That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan
Under my battlements. Come, you spirits
That tend on mortal thoughts, unsheath me here,
And fill me, from the crown to the toe, top-full
Of direst cruelty: make thick my blood
Stop up th' access and passage to remorse;
That no compunction visitings of nature
Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace between
Th' effect and 't. Come to my woman's breasts,
And take my milk for gall, you murdering ministers,
Wherever in your sightless substances

[Aside.] You wait on nature's mischief. Come, thick night,
And pall thee in the dunest smoke of hell,
That my keen knife see not the wound it makes,
Nor heaven peep through the blankness1 of the dark
To cry, 'Hold, hold!'—

Enter Macbeth.

Great Glamis! worthy Cawdor! Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter!

[They embrace."

Thy letters have transported me beyond
This ignorant present, and I feel now
The future in the instant.

Macb. My dearest love,
Duncan comes here to-night.

Lady M. And when goes...ence?

Macb. To-morrow, as he purposes.

Lady M. O! never Shall sun that morrow see.

Your face, my thane, is as a book, where men
May read strange matters: to beguile the time,
Look like the time: bear welcome in your eye,
Your hand, your tongue: look like the innocent flower
But be the serpent under it. He that's coming Must be provided for; and you shall put
This night's great business into my despach,
Which shall to all our nights and days to come
Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom.

Macb. We will speak farther.

Lady M. Only look up clear:

To alter favour ever is to fear,
Leave all the rest to me. [Exit.

SCENE VI.—The Same. Before the Castle.

Enter Duncan, Malcolm, Donalbain, Banquo, Lenox, Macduff, Rosse, Angus, and Attendants.

Dun. This castle hath a pleasant seat: the air
Nimbly and sweetly recommends itself
Unto our gentle senses.

Ban. This guest of summer,
The temple-haunting martlet, does approve,
By his low'd mansionry, that the heaven's breath
Smells woefully here: no jutty in the breezes,
Buttress, nor coigne of vantage, but this bird
Hath made his pendent bed, and procerant cradle;
Where they much' breed and haunt, I have observ'd,
The air is delicate.

Enter Lady Macbeth."

[Aside.] See, see! our honour'd hostess.—
The love that follows us sometime is our trouble,
Which still we thank as love: herein I teach you,
How you shall bid God yield us for your pains,
And thank us for you: trouble.

Lady M. All our service,
In every point twice done, and then done double,
Were poor and single business to content.
Against those honours deep and broad, wherewith
Your majesty loads our house. For those of old,
And the late dignities heap'd up to them,
We rest your hermits."

Dun. Where's the thane of Cawdor?

We course'd him at the heels, and had a purpose
To be his purveyor; but he rides well,
And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath help him
To his home before us. Fair and noble hostess,
We are your guest to-night.

Lady M. Your servants ever
Have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs, in comp.
To make their audit at your highness' pleasure,
Still to return your own.
Conduct me to mine host: we love him highly,
And shall continue our graces towards him.
By your leave, hostess.

Hautboys and torches. Enter, and pass over the stage,
a Serv'is and divers Servants with dishes and service.
Then, enter MACBETH.

Macb. If it were done, when 'tis done, then 't were well
It were done quickly: if the assassination
Could trammel up the consequence, and catch
With his surer case success; that but this blow
Might be the be-all and the end-all here.
But here upon this rank and shoul'd of time,
We'd jump the life to come.—But in these cases,
We still have judgment here; that we but teaceh
Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return
To plague th' inventor: thus even-handed justice
Commends th' ingredients of our poison'd chalice
To our own lips. He's here in double trust:
First, as I am his kinsman and his subject;
Strong both against the deed: then, as his host,
Who should against his murderer shut the door,
Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Duncan
Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been
So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead, like angels trumpet-tongued, against
The deep damnation of his taking-off;
And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubim, hors'd
Upon the sightless couriers of the air,
Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
That tears shall drown the wind.—I have no spur
To prick the sides of my intent, but only
Vanitie ambition, which o'er-leaps itself,
And falls on the other.

Enter Lady MACBETH.
How now! what news?

Lady M. He has almost supp'd. Why have you left
The chamber?

Macb. Hath he ask'd for me?

Lady M.

Macb. We will proceed no farther in this business:
He hath honour'd me of late; and I have bought
Golden opinions from all sorts of people,
Which would be worn now in their newest gloss,
Not cast aside so soon.

Lady M.

Was the hope drunk,
Wherein you dress'd yourself? hath it slept since,
And waketh it now, to look so green and pale
At what it did so freely? From this time,
Such I account thy love. Art thou afraid
To be the same in thine own act and valour,
As thou art in desire? Wouldst thou have that
Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life
And live a coward in thine own esteem.
Letting I dare not wait upon I would,
Like the poor cat i' the adage?

Macb.

Pr'ythee, peace.
I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more is none.

Lady M.

What beast was't, thin?
That made you break this enterprise to me?
When you durst do it, then you were a man:
And, to be more than what you were, you would Be so much more the man. Nor time, nor place,
Did then adhere, and yet you would make both:
They have made themselves, and that their fitness now
Does unmake you. I have given suck, and know
How tender 'tis to love the babe that milks me:
I would, while it was smiling in my face,
Have pluck'd my nipple from his boneless gums,
And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn as you
Have done to this.

Macb.

If we should fail?

Lady M.

We fail!
But screw your courage to the sticking-place,
And we'll not fail. When Duncan is asleep,
(Wheroeto the rather shall his day's hard journey Soundly invite him) his two chamberlains
Will I with wine and wassell so convince;
That memory, the warden of the brain,
Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason
A limbock only: when in swinish sleep
Their drenched natures lie, as in a death,
What cannot you and I perform upon
The unguarded Duncan? what not put upon
His spongy officers, who shall bear the guilt
Of our great quell?

Macb.

Bring forth men-children only!
For thy undaunted mettle should compose
Nothing but males. Will it not be receiv'd
When we have mark'd with blood those sleepy two
Of his own chamber, and us'd their very daggers,
That they have done't?

Lady M.

Who dares receive it other,
As we shall make our griefs and clamour roar
Upon his death?

Macb.

I am settled; and bend up
Each corporal agent to this terrible feat.
Away, and mock the time with fairest show:
False face must hide what the false heart doth know.

[Exit]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Same. Court within the Castle.
Enter BANQUO, and FLAMANCE, with a torch before him.
Ban. How goes the night, boy?
Fl. The moon is down: I have not heard the clock.
Ban. And she goes down at twelve.
Fl.
Ban. Hold, take my sword.—There's husbandry in heaven;

Their candles are all out.—Take thee that too.
A heavy summons lies like lead upon me,
And yet I would not sleep: merciful powers!
Restrain in me the cursed thoughts, that nature
Gives way to in repose!—Give me my sword.—

Enter MACBETH, and a Servant with a torch.
Who's there?

Macb. A friend.
Ban. What, sir, not yet at rest? The king's a-bed

He hath been in unusual pleasure, and
Sent forth great largess to your offices.
This diamond he giveth your wife withal,
By the name of most kind hostess, and shut up
In measureless content.

Macb. Being unprepar’d
Our will became the servant to defect,
Which else should have free wrou’t.

Ban. All’s well.
I dreamt last night of the three weird sisters:
To you they show’d some truth.

Macb. I think not of them:
Yet, when we can entreat an hour to serve,
We would spend it in some words upon that business,
I: you would grant the time.

Ban. At your kindlest leisure.

Macb. If you shall cleave to my consent, when’t is,
It shall make honour for you.

Ban. So I lose none
In seeking to augment it, but still keep
My bosom franchis’d, and allegiance clear,
I shall be counsel’d.

Macb. Good repose, the while.

Ban. Thanks, sir: the like to you.

[Exit Banquo and Fleance.

Macb. Go; bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready,
She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed.

[Exit Servant.

Is this a dagger which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee:
I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
Art thou nothing but a dream within my soul,
Or art thou some spirit that walk’st with Melchior?
Thou hast made me a better man than I was.
I am more than what I am when I am not.
My mere imaginings, my dreams, are true
And their reality sets me to thinking,
Which then, being thought upon, appear true.

What’s the business?

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. That which hath made them drunk hath made me bold:
[Peace!]
What hath quench’d them hath given me fire.—Hark!—

It was the owl that shriek’d, the fatal bellman,
Which gives the sternest good-night. He is about it.
The doors are open; and the servile grooms
Do mock their charge with snores: I have drugg’d then posses;
That death and nature do contend about them,
Whether they live, or die.

Macb. [Within.] Who’s there?—what, ho!
Lady M. Alack! I am afraid they have awak’d,
And’t is not done:—the attempt, and not the deed,
Confounds us. Hark!—I laid their daggers ready,
He could not miss them. Had he not resemble
My father as he slept, I had done’t.—My husband?

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. I have done the deed.—Didst thou not hear a noise?

Lady M. I heard the owl screech, and the crickets cry.
Did not you speak?

Lady M. When?

Lady M. Ay.

Macb. Hark!—

Who lies’t the second chamber?

Lady M. Donalbain.

Macb. This is a sorry sight. [Shewing his hands
Lady M. A foolish thought to say a sorry sight.

Lady M. There’s one did laugh in’s sleep, and one cried, "murder!"

That they did wake each other: I stood and heard them;
But they did say their prayers, and addres’d them
Again to sleep.

Lady M. There are two lodg’d together.

Macb. One cried "God bless us!" and "Amen," the other.

As they had seen me with these hangman’s hands,
Listening their fear, I could not say amen,
When they did say God bless us.

Lady M. Consider it not so deeply
Macb. But wherefore could not I pronounce amen?
I had most need of blessing, and amen
Sneak in my throat.

Lady M. These deeds must not be thought
After these ways: so, it will make us mad.

Macb. Methought, I heard a voice cry, "Sleep no more!"

Macbeth does murder sleep,"—the innocent sleep;
Sleep, that knits up the ravell’d sleave of care,
The death of each day’s life, sore labour’s bath,
Balm of hurt minds, great nature’s second course,
Chief nourisher in life’s feast.—

Lady M. What do you mean?

Lady M. Still it cried, "Sleep no more!" to all the house:

"Glamis hath murder’d sleep, and therefore Cawdor Shall sleep no more; Macbeth shall sleep no more!"

Lady M. Who was it that thus cried? Why worthy thane,
You do unbend your noble strength, to think
So brainstirck of things. Go, get some water,
And wash this filthy witness from your hand.

Why did you bring these daggers from the place?
They must lie there: go, carry them, and smear
The sleepy grooms with blood.

Macb. I’l go no more:
I am afraid to think what I have done;
Look on’t again, I dare not.

Lady M. Infirm of purpose!

Give me the daggers. The sleeping, and the dead,
Are but as pictures: 'tis the eye of childhood
That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed,
I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal,
For it must seem their guilt. [Exit.—Knocking within.]

Macb. Whence is that knocking?—
How is 't with me when every noise appeals me?
What hands are here! Ha! they pluck out mine eyes,
Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood
Clean from my hand? No; this my hand will rather
The multitudinous seas incarnadine,
Making the green one red.

Re-enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. My hands are of your colour; but I shame
To wear a heart so white. [Knock] I hear a knocking
At the south entry:—retire we to our chamber.

A little water clears us of this deed:
How easy is it, then? Your constancy
Hath left you unattended.—[Knock.] Hark! more knocking.

Get on your nightgown, last occasion call us,
And show us to be watchers.—Be not lost
So poorly in your thoughts.

Macb. To know my deed, 't were best not know myself.

Wake Duncan with thy knocking: I would thou couldst not!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same.

Enter a Porter. [Knocking within.

Port. Here's a knocking, indeed! If a man were porter of hell-gate, he should have old turning the key.

[Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock. Who's there, for the name of Beelzebub?—Here's a farmer, the hanged himself on the expectation of plenty; come in time; have napkins enough about you; here you'll sweat for. [Knock] Knock, knock, knock. Who's there, in the other devil's name?—Faith, here's an equivocator, that could swear in both the scales against either scale; who committed treason enough for God's sake, yet could not equivocate to heaven: O! come in equivocator. [Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock. Who's there?—Faith, here's an English tailor come hither for stealing out of a French hose; come in tailor; here you may roast your goose. [Knocking] Knock, knock. Never at quiet! What are you?—But this place is too cold for hell. I'll devil-porter it no farther; I had thought to have let in some of all professions, that go the primrose way to the everlasting bonfire. [Knocking.] Anon, anon: I pray you, re-member the porter.

[Opens the gate.]

Enter Macduff and Lenox.

Macc. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to bed, That you do lie so late?

Port. Faith, Sir, we were carousing till the second cock; and drink, sir, is a great provoker of three things.

Macc. What three things doth drink especially provoke?

Port. Marry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine. Leechery, sir, it provokes, and unprovokes: it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance. Therefore, much drink may be said to be an equivocator with leechery: it makes him, and it mars him; it sets him on, and it takes him off; it persuades him, and dishearts him; makes him stand to, and not stand to; in conclusion, equivocates him a-sleep, and, giving him the lie, leaves him.

Macc. I believe, drink gave thee the lie last night.

Port. That it did, sir; 't the very throat on me: but I requited him for his lie; and, I think, being too strong for him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I made a shift to cast him.

Macc. Is thy master stirring?—

Enter Macbeth, in his night-gown.

Our knocking has awak'd him; here he comes.

Len. Good-morrow, noble sir.

Macc. Good-morrow, both.

Macc. Is the king stirring, worthy thane?

Len. Not yet.

Macc. He did command me to call timely on him: I have almost slipp'd the hour.

Macc. I'll bring you to him.

Macc. I know, this is a joyful trouble to you;
But yet, 't is one,

Macc. The labour we delight in physics pain.

This is the door.

Macc. I'll make so bold to call.

For 'tis my limited service. [Exit Macduff.]

Len. Goes the king hence to-day?

Macc. He does:—he did appoint so
Len. The night has been unruly: where we lay,
Our chimneys were blown down; and, as they say,
Lamentings heard 't the air; strange sacrements of death
And prophesying with accents terrible
Of dire combustion, and confus'd events,
New hatch'd to the woeful time. The obscure bird
Clamour'd the fifelone night: some say, the earth
Was feverous, and did shake.

Macc. 'T was a rough night.

Len. My young remembrance cannot parallel
A fellow to it.

Re-enter Macduff.

Macc. O horror! horror! horror! Tongue, nor heart.
Cannot conceive, nor name thee.

Macc. Len. What is the matter?

Macc. Confusion now hath made his master-piece.

Most sacrilegious murder hath broke ope
The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence
The life of the building.

Macc. What is 't you say? the life?

Len. Mean you his majesty?

Macc. Approach the chamber, and destroy your sight
With a new Gorgon.—Do not bid me speak:
See, and then speak yourselves. —Awake! awake!—

[Exeunt Macbeth and Lenox.

Ring the alarum-bell! Murder, and treason!
Banquo, and Donalbin! Malcolm, awake!
Shake o'er this doomy sleep, death's counterfeit,
And look on death itself: up, up, and see
The great doom's image!—Malcolm! Banquo!—
As from your graves rise up, and walk like sprites
To countenance this horror. Ring the bell! [Bell rings—

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. What's the business, that such a hideous trumpet calls to parley
The sleepers of the house? speak, speak, speak!

Macc. O, gentle lady
'T is not for you to hear what I can speak:
The repetition, in a woman's ear,

Enter Banquo unready.

Would murder as it fell.—O Banquo! Banquo!
Our royal master's murder'd!

Lady M. Woe, alas!

What! in our house?

Ban. Too cruel, any where.

Dear Duff, I pr'ythee, contradict thyself,

---End of the Project Gutenberg EBook of Shakespeare's Complete Works---
And say, it is not so.

Macb. Had I but died an hour before this chance, I had liv'd a blessed time, for from this instant There's nothing serious in mortality; All is but toys: renown and grace are dead; The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees left this vault to brag of.

Enter Malcolm and Donalbain.

Don. What is amiss?

Macb. You are, and do not know 't; The spring, the head, the fountain of your blood is stopp'd; the very source of it is stopp'd. Macd. Your royal father's murder'd. Mal. O! by whom? Len. Those of his chamber, as it seem'd, had done it. Their hands and faces were all badg'd with blood; So were their daggers, which, unwip'd, we found Upon their pillows: they star'd, and were distracted. No man's life was to be trusted with. Macb. O! yet I do repent me of my fury, That I did kill them.

Macd. Wherefore did you so? Macb. Who can be wise, amaz'd, temperate and furious, Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man: The expedition of my violent love Out-ran the pauser reason.—Here lay Duncan, His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood: And his gash'd stabbs look'd like a breach in nature For ruin's wasteful entrance; there, the murderers, Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers Unmannerly break'd with gore. Who could restrain, That had a heart to love, and in that heart Courage to make's love known?

Lady. Help me hence, ho!

Lady M. Look to the lady. [Lady Macbeth swoons.]

Mal. Why do we hold our tongues, That most may claim this argument for ours? Don. What should be spoken Here, where our fate, hid in an auger-hole, May rush, and seize us? Let's away: our tears Are not yet brev'd.

Mal. Nor our strong sorrow Upon the foot of motion.

Ban. Look to the lady.—[Lady Mecb. is borne out. And when we have our naked frailties hid, That suffer in exposure, let us meet, And question this most bloody piece of work, To know it farther. Fears and scruples shake us: In the great hand of God I stand; and, thence, Against the undivul'd pretence I fight Of treasonous malice.

Macb. And so do I.

All. So all.

Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readiness, and meet i' the hall together.

AK. Well contented. [Exeunt all but Mal. and Don.]

Mal. What will you do? Let's not consort with them: To show an unfelt sorrow is an office Which the false man does easy. I'll to England. Don. To Ireland, I: our separated fortune Shall keep us both the safer, where we are, There's daggers in men's smiles: the near in blood, The nearer bloody.

Mcb. This murderous shaft that's shot Hath not yet lighted, and our safest way Is to avoid the aim; therefore, to home; And let us not be dainty of leave-taking, But shift away. There's warrant in that theft Which steals itself, when there's no mercy left. [Exeunt]

SCENE IV.—Without the Castle.

Enter Ross and an Old Man.

Old M. Three score and ten I can remember well; Within the volume of which time I have seen Hours dreadful, and things strange, but this sore night Hath trifled former knowings.

Rosse. Ah! good father, Thou seest, the heavens, as troubled with man's act, Threaten his bloody stage: by the clock 'tis day, And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp. Is't night's predominance, or the day's shame, That darkness does the face of earth entomb, When living light should kiss it?

Old M. 'Tis unnatural, Even like the deed that's done. On Tuesday last, A falcon, towering in her pride of place, Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at, and kill'd. Rosse. And Duncan's horses (a thing most strange and certain), Beauteous and swift, the minions of their race, Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls, flung out, Contending against obedience, as they would Make war with mankind.

Old M. 'T is said, they eat each other. Rosse. They did so; to th' amazement of mine eyes, That look'd upon 't. Here comes the good Macduff.—[Enter Macduff.]

How goes the world, sir, now?

Macb. Why, see you not? Rosse. Is 't known who did this more than bloody deed? Macb. Those that Macbeth hath slain. Rosse. Alas, the day! What good could they pretend?

Macb. They were suborn'd. Malcolm, and Donalbain, the king's two sons, Are stol'n away and fled; which puts upon them Suspicion of the deed.

Rosse. 'Gainst nature still: Thrillless ambition, that will ravin up Thine own life's means!—Then, 't is most like, The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth.

Macb. He is already nam'd, and gone to Scone To be invested. Rosse. Where is Duncan's body? Macb. Carried to Colme-kill; The sacred store-house of his predecessors, And guardian of their bones. Rosse. Will you to Scone? Macb. No, cousin; I'll to Fife. Rosse. Well, I will thither— Macb. Well, may you see things well done there:—adieu—Lest our old robes sit easier than our new! Rosse. Farewell, father.

Old M. God's benison go with you; and with those, That would make good of bad, and friends of foes! [Exeunt]
ACT III.

SCENE I.—Fores. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Banquo.

Ban. Thou hast it now, king, Cawdor, Glamis, all,
As the weird women promis’d: and I fear,
Thou play’st most foully for’t: yet it was said,
It should not stand in thy posterity;
But that myself should be the root, and father
Of many kings. If there come truth from them,
(As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches show)
Why, by the verities on thee made good,
May they not be my oracles as well,
And set me up in hope? But, hush! no more.

Senet. Enter Macbeth as King; Lady Macbeth, as Queen; Lenox, Rosse, Lords, Ladies, and Attendants.

Macb. Here’s our chief guest.

Lady M. If he had been forgotten,
It had been as a gap in our great feast,
And all things unbecoming.

Macb. To-night we hold a solemn supper, sir,
And I’ll request your presence.

Ban. Lay your highness.

Command upon me, to the which my duties
Are with a most indissoluble tie
For ever knelt.

Macb. Ride you this afternoon?

Ban. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. We should have else desir’d your good advice
(Which still hath been both grave and prosperous)
In this day’s council; but we’ll take to-morrow.
Is’t far you ride?

Ban. As far, my lord, as will fill up the time.

‘Twixt this and supper: go not my horse the better,
I must become the borrower of the night
For a dark hour, or twain.

Macb. Fail not our feast.

Ban. My lord, I will not.

Macb. We hear, our bloody cousins are bestow’d
In England, and in Ireland: not confessing
Their cruel paraside, filling their hearers
With strange invention. But of that to-morrow;
When, therewithal, we shall have cause of state
Craving us jointly. Hie you to horse: adieu.
Till you return at night. Goes Flence with you?

Ban. Ay, my good lord, our time does call upon us.

Macb. I wish your horses swift, and sure of foot;
And so I do commend you to their backs.

Farewell.—[Exit Banquo.

Let every man be master of his time
Till seven at night. To make society
The sweeter welcome, we will keep ourselves
Till supper time alone: while then, God be with you.

[Exeunt Lady Macbeth, Lords, Ladies, &c.

Sirrah, a word with you. Attend those men.
Our pleasure?

Attent. They are, my lord, without the palace gate.

Macb. Bring them before us.—[Exit Attent.] To be thus is nothing,

But to be safely thus,—Our fears in Banquo
Stick deep, and in his royalty of nature
Reigns that which would be fear’d: ’tis much he dares:
And to that dauntless temper of his mind,
He hath a wisdom that doth guide his valour
To act in safety. There is none but he Whose being I do fear, and under him

My genius is rebuk’d, as it is said,
Mark Antony’s was by Caesar. He chid the sisters
When first they put the name of king upon me,
And bade them speak to him; then, prophet-like,
They hail’d him father to a line of kings.
Upon my head they plac’d a fruitless crown,
And put a barren sceptre in my grasp,
Thence to be wrenched with an unlineal hand,
No son of mine succeeding. It’s to be so,
For Banquo’s issue have I hid my mind,
For them the gracious Duncan have I murder’d;
Put rancours in the vessel of my peace
Only for them; and mine eternal jewel
Given to the common enemy of man.

To make them kings, the seed of Banquo kings!
Rather than so, come, fate, into the list.

And champion me to the utterance?—Who’s there?
Re-enter Attendant, with two Murderers.

Now, go to the door, and stay there till we call.

Was it not yesterday we spoke together?

1 Mur. It was, so please your highness.

Macb. Well then, now have you consider’d of my speeches?
Know, that it was he, in the times past, who held you
So under fortune; which, you thought, had been
Our innocent self. This I made good to you
In our last conference; pass’d in probation with you.
How you were borne in hand; how cross’d; the instruments;
Who wrought with them; and all things else, that might
To half a soul, and to a notion craz’d,
Say, “Thus did Banquo.”

1 Mur. You made it known to us.

Macb. I did so: and went farther, which is now
Our point of second meeting. Do you find
Your patience so predominant in your nature.
That you can let this go? Are you so gospel’d
To pray for this good man, and for his issue,
Whose heavy hand hath bow’d you to the grave,
And beggar’d yours for ever?

1 Mur. We are men, my liege

Macb. Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men,
As hounds, and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels, eurs.
Shongs, water-rugs, and demi-wolves, are cleft
All by the name of dogs: the valued file
Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle,
The house-keeper, the hunter, every one
According to the gift which bounteous nature
Hath in him clos’d, whereby he does receive
Particular addition, from the quill
That writes them all alike; and so of men.
Now, if you have a station in the file
Not i’ the worst rank of mankind, say it,
And I will put that business in your bosoms,
Whose execution takes your enemy off,
Grapples to your heart and love of us.
Who wear our health but sickly in his life,
Which in his death were perfect.

2 Mur. I am one, my liege.

Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world
Have so incens’d, that I am reckless what
I do to spite the world.

1 Mur. And I another,

So wearied with disasters, tuss’d with fortune,
That I would set my life on any chance,
To mend it, or be rid on’t.

_Macb._

Know Banquo was your enemy.

2 _Mur._

True, my lord.

_Macb._

So is he mine; and in such bloody distance, That every minute of his being thrusts Against my near’st of life. And though I could With bare-fac’d power sweep him from my sight, And bid my will avouch it, yet I must not, For certain friends that are both he and mine, Whose love I may not drop, but wait his fall Whom I myself struck down: and thence it is, That I to your assistance do make love, Masking the business from the common eye For sundry weighty reasons.

2 _Mur._

We shall, my lord, Perform what you command us.

1 _Mur._

Your spirits shine through you. Within this hour, at most, will advise you where to plant yourselves, Acquaint you, with a perfect spy, o’ the time, The moment on’t; for’t must be done to-night, And something from the palace: always thought, That I require a clearness: and with him, (To leave no rubs, nor botches, in the work) Fleance his son, that keeps him company, Whose absence is no less material to me Than is his father’s, must embrace the fate Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart: I’ll come to you anon.

2 _Mur._

We are resolv’d, my lord, _Macb._ I’ll call upon you straight: abide within. (Exeunt Murderers.)

if it be concluded: Banquo, thy soul’s flight,

If it find heaven, must find it out to-night.) _Exit._

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Room.

_Enter Lady Macbeth and a Servant._

2 _Mur._

But who did but thee join with us?

1 _Mur._

Macbeth. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest chuck

Till thou applaud the deed. Come, see, sleeping night, Scarf up the tender eye of pitiful day,

And with thy bloody and invisible hand,

Cancel, and tear to pieces, that great bond Which keeps me pale!—Light thickens; and the crow Makes wing to the rocky wood:

Good things of day begin to droop and drowse,

Whiles night’s black agents to their preys do rouse.

Thou marvell’st at my words; but hold thee still:

Things, bad begun, make strong themselves by ill.

So, pr’ythee, go with me. _Exeunt._

SCENE III.—The Same. A Park, with a road leading to the Palace.

_Enter three Murderers._

2 _Mur._

He needs not our mistrust; since he delivers our offices, and what we have to do,

To thy direction just.

1 _Mur._

Then stand with us.

The west yet glimmers with some streaks of day,

Now spurs the lated traveller apace,

To gain the timely inn; and here approaches The subject of our watch.

3 _Mur._

Hark! I hear horses._Ban._ [Within.] Give us a light there, ho!

2 _Mur._

Then, ’tis he: the rest That are within the note of expectation, Already are i’ the court.

1 _Mur._

His horses go about.

3 _Mur._

Almost a mile: but he does usually, So all men do, from hence to the palace gate

Make it their walk.

_Enter Banquo and Fleance with a torch._

2 _Mur._

A light, a light!

3 _Mur._

’Tis he.

1 _Mur._

Stand to’t._Ban._ It will be rain to-night.

1 _Mur._

Let it come down. _Strikes Banquo._

Ban. O, treachery! Fly, good Fleance, fly, fly! Thou may’st revenge—O slave! _Dies._

Fle._ Escapes._

3 _Mur._

Who did strike out the light?

1 _Mur._

Was not the way?

3 _Mur._

There’s but one down: the son is fled.

2 _Mur._

We have lost best half of our affair.

1 _Mur._

Well, let’s away, and say how much is done.

_Exit._

1 Scalp winged 2 Blinding 3 near: in t e.
SCENE IV. — A Room in State in the Palace.

A Banquet prepared. Enter Macbeth, Lady Macbeth, Ross, Lenox, Lords, and Attendants.

Macb. You know your own degrees; sit down: at first and last the hearty welcome.

Lords. Thanks to your majesty.

Macb. Ourself will mingle with society, and play the humble host.

Our hostess keeps her state; but in best time we will require her welcome.

Lady M. Pronounce it for me, sir, to all our friends; for my heart speaks, they are welcome.

Macb. See, they encounter thee with their hearts' thanks.

Both sides are even: here I'll sit in the midst.

Be large in mirth: anon, we'll drink a measure.

Enter first Murderer, to the door.

The table round. — There's blood upon thy face.

Mur. 'Tis Banquo's then.

Macb. 'Tis better thee without, than him within.

Mur. Your lord, his throat is cut; that I did for him.

Macb. Thou art the best of the cut-throats; yet he is good, that didst like for Fleance: if thou didst it, thou art the unpard.

Mur. Most royal sir, Fleance is 'scap'd.

Macb. Then comes my fit again: I had else been whole as the marble, founded as the rock, [pierced; as broad and general as the casing air; but not, I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd, bound in to sauce doubts and fears. — But Banquo's safe?

Mur. Ay, my good lord, safe in a ditch he bides, with twenty trench'd gashes on his head. The least a death to nature.

Macb. Thanks for that.

There the grown serpent lies: the worm, that's fled, Hath nature in that time will venom breed, No teeth for the present. — Get thee gone: to-morrow We'll hear ourselves again. [Exit Murderer.

Lady M. My royal lord,

You do not give the cheer: the feast is sold, That is not often vouch'd the while 'tis making: 'Tis given with welcome. To feed were best at home; From thence the sauce to meat is ceremony; Meeting were bare without it.

Macb. Sweet remembrance!

Now, good digestion wait on appetite, And health on both.

Len. May it please your highness sit?

[The Ghost of Banquo enters, and sits in Macbeth's place.

Macb. Here had we our country's honour roof'd, Were the grav'd person of our Banquo present; Who may I rather challenge for unkindness, Than pity for miscarriage!

Rosse. His absence, sir,

Lays blame upon his promise. Please it your highness To grace us with your royal company?

Macb. The table's full.

Len. Here is a place reserv'd, sir.

[Painting to the Ghost?

Macb. Where?

Len. Here, my good lord. What is't that moves your highness?

Macb. Which of you have done this?

Lords. What, my good lord?

Macb. Thou canst not say; I did it: never shake My gory locks at me.

Rosse. Gentlemen, rise; his highness is not well.

Lady M. Sit, worthy friends. My lord is often thus, And hath been from his youth: pray you, keep seat. The fit is momentary; upon a thought He will again be well. If much you note him, You shall offend him, and extend his passion; Feed, and regard him not. — Are you a man? [Coming to Macbeth: aside to him

Macb. Ay, and a bold one, that dare look on that Which might appal the devil.

Lady M. O, proper stuff! This is the very painting of your fear: This is the air-drawn dagger, which you said, Led you to Duncan. O! these flaws, and starts, (Impostors to true fear) would well become A woman's story at a winter's fire. Authoriz'd by her grandam. Shame itself! Why do you make such faces? When all's done, You look but on a stool.

Macb. Pr'ythee, see there! behold! look! lo! how say you?—

Why, what care I? If thou canst not speak too,— If charnel-houses, and our graves, must send Those that we bury back, our monuments Shall be the maws of kites. [Exit Ghost.

Lady M. Macb. Blood hath been shed ere now, i' th' olden time. Ere human statute purg'd the gentle weal; Ay, and since too, murders have been perform'd Too terrible for the ear: the times have been. That when the brains were out the man would die, And there an end: but now, they rise again With twenty mortal murders on their crowns, And push us from our stools. This is more strange Than such a murder is.

Lady M. My worthy lord, [Going back to her state

Your noble friends do lack you.

Macb. I do forget —

Do not muse at me, my most worthy friends; I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing To those that know me. Come, love and health to all: Then, I'll sit down. — Give me some wine: fill full. — I drink to the general joy of the whole table, And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss:

Re-enter Ghost.

Would he were here! to all, and him, we thirst And all to all.

Lords. Our duties, and the pledge.

Macb. Avant! and quit my sight. Let the earth hide thee! Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold; Thou hast no speculation in those eyes, Which thou dost glare with.

Lady M. Think of this, good peers, But as a thing of custom: 'tis no other; Only it spoils the pleasure of the time.

Macb. What man dare, I dare:

Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear, The arm'd rhinoceros, or the Hyrcan tiger: Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves Shall never tremble: or, be alive again, And dare me to the desert with thy sword; If trembling I exhibit, then protest me The baby of a girl. Hence, horrible shadow! [Exit Ghost.

Unreal mockery, hence! — Why, so — being gone.
I am a man again.—Pray you, sit still.

Lady M. You have displac’d the mirth, broke the good meeting.

With most admir’d disorder.

Macb. Can such things be, and overcome us like a summer’s cloud, without our special wonder? You make me strange, even to the disposition that I owe, when now I think you can behold such sights, and keep the natural ruby of your cheeks, when mine are blanch’d with fear.

Ros. What sights, my lord?

Lady M. I pray you, speak not: he grows worse and worse.

Ouestion arranges him. At once, good night: stand not upon the order of your going, but go at once.

Len. Good night; and better health attend his majesty.

Lady M. A kind good night to all! [Exit Lords and Attendants.

Macb. It will have blood, they say; blood will have blood.

Stones have been moved to move, and trees to speak; augurs, and understood relations, have by magot-pies, and choughs, and rooks, brought forth the secret’st man of blood.—What is the night?

Lady M. Almost at odds with morning, which is which.

Macb. How say’st thou, that Macduff denies his person.

At our great bidding?

Lady M. Did you send to him, sir?

Macb. I hear it by the way; but I will send.

There’s not one of them, but in his house
I’ll keep a servant fee’d. I will to-morrow,
And betimes I will) to the weird sisters:
More shall they speak; for now I am bent to know,
By the worst means, the worst. For mine own good,
All causes shall give way: I am in blood
Stept in so far, that, should I wade no more,
Returning were as tedious as go o’er.

Strange things I have in head, that will to hand,
Which must be acted ere they may be scan’d.

Lady M. You lack the season of all natures, sleep.

Macb. Come, we’ll to sleep. My strange and self-abuse
Is the initiating, that wants hard use;
We are yet but young in deed. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—The Heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting Hecate.

1 Witch. Why, how now, Hecate! you look angrily.

Hec. Have I not reason, beldams as you are, saucy and over-bold? How did you dare to traffic and traffic with Macbeth, in riddles, and affairs of death;
And I, the mistress of your charms,
the sole contriver of all harms, was never call’d to bear my part,
or show the glory of our art?
And, which is worse, all you have done hath been but for a wayward son, spiteful, and wrathful; who, as others do,
loves for his own ends, not for you.
But make amends now: get you gone,
and at the pit of Acheron meet me in the morning: thither he will come to know his destiny.
Your vessels, and your spells, provide,
your charms, and every thing beside.
I am for the air: this night I’ll spend unto a dismal and a fatal end:
great business must be wrought ere moon.
Upon the corner of the moon
there hangs a vaporous drop profound;
I’ll catch it ere it come to ground:
and that, distill’d by magic sleights,
shall raise such artificial sprites,
as by the strength of their illusion,
shall draw him on to his confusion.
He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and bear his hopes ’bove wisdom, grace, and fear; and, you all know, security is most of a chiefest enemy.

Song. [Within.] Come away, come away, &c.

Hark! I am call’d: my little spirit, see, sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me. [Exit Hecate.

1 Witch. Come, let’s make haste: she’ll soon be back again.

[Exeunt Witches.

SCENE VI.—Fore’s. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Lenox and another Lord.

Len. My former speeches have but hit your thoughts.

Which can interpret farther: only, I say,

Things have been strangely borne. The gracious

Duncan,

Was piti’d of Macbeth—marry, he was dead;

And the right valiant Banquo walk’d too late;

Whom, you may say, if’t please you, Fleance kill’d,

For Fleance fled. Men must not walk too late.

Who cannot want the thought, how monstrous

It was for Malcolm, and for Donalban,

To kill their gracious father? damned fact!

How it did grieve Macbeth! did he not straight,

In pious rage the two delinquents tear,

That were the slaves of drink, and thralls of sleep;

Was not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely, too;

For ‘t would have anger’d any heart alive,

To hear the men deny ‘t. So that, I say,

He has borne all things well; and I do think,

That had he Duncan’s sons under his key,

(As, an’t please heaven, he shall not) they should find

What ‘t were to kill a father; so should Fleance.

But, peace!—for from broad words, and ‘cause he fail’d

His presence at the tyrant’s feast, I hear,

Macduff lives in disgrace. Sir, can you tell

Where he bestows himself?

Lord. The son of Duncan,

From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth,

Lives in the English court; and is receiv’d

Of the most pious Edward with such grace,

That the malice of fortune nothing

Takes from his high respect. Thither Macduff

Is gone, to pray the holy king upon his aid

To wake Northumberland, and warlike Siward;

That by the help of these, (with Him above

To ratify the work) we may again

Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights,

Free from our feasts and banquets bloody knaves,

Do faithful homage, and receive free honours,

All which we pine for now. And this report

Hath so exasperate the king, that he

Prepares for some attempt of war.

Len. Sent he to Macduff?

Lord. He did: and with an absolute, “Sir, not I;

The cloudy messenger turns me his back;

And hums, as who should say, “You’ll rue the time

That clogs me with this answer.”
ACT IV.

(SCENE I.—A dark Cave. In the middle, a Cauldron.)

Macb. Howe'er you come to know it) answer me:
Though you unite the winds, and let them fight
Against the churches; though the pestilential waves
Confound and swallow navigation up;
Though bleaded corn be lodg'd, and trees blown down,
Though castles topple o'er their warders' heads;
Though palaces and pyramids do stoop!
Their heads to their foundations; though the treasure
Of nature's germains tumble all together,
Even till destruction sicken, answer me
To what I ask you

1 Witch. Speak.
2 Witch. Demand.
3 Witch. We'll answer.

1 Witch. Say, if thou'dst rather hear it from our mouths,
Or from our masters?

Macb. Call 'em; let me see 'em.

1 Witch. Pour in sowl's blood, that hath eaten
Her nine farrows; grease, that's sweated
From the sufferer's gibbet, throw
Into the flame.

2 Witch. Come high, or low;

Macb. Let me, and office, defily show.

3 Witch. Apparition, an armed Head.

Macb. Tell me, thou unknown power,—

2 Witch. He knows thy thought
Hear his speech, but say thou nought.

1 App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth! beware Macduff;
Beware the thane of Fife.—Dismiss me:—enough.

[Descends.

Macb. Whate'er thou art, for thy good caution thanks:
Thou hast harp'd my fear aright.—But one word more.—

1 Witch. He will not be commanded. Here's another,
More potent than the first.

2 Apparition, a bloody Child.

Mac. App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!—

Macb. Had I three ears, I'd hear thee.

App. Be bloody, bold, and resolute: laugh to scorn
The power of man, for none of woman born
Shall harm Macbeth.

[Descends.

Macb. Then live, Macduff: what need I fear of thee?
But yet I'll make assurance double sure,
And take a bond of fate: thou shalt not live,
That I may tell pale-hearted fear it lies.
And sleep in spite of thunder.—What is this,

Thunder. 3 Apparition, a Child crowned, with a Tree in his Hand.

That rises like the issue of a king:
And wears upon his baby brow the round
And top of sovereignty?

2 App. Be lion-mettled, proud, and take no care
Who chafes, who frets, or where conspirers are:
Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be, until

1 Harpeir: in f. e. 2 Entrails. The rest of this direction is not in f. e. The song is probably the same as that in Middleton's Witsb
Black spirits and white,
Red spirits and grey;

3 bladed: in f. e. on: in f. e. 4 slope: in f. e. 5 Germinating seeds. Folio reads: germaines.
Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane hill
Shall come against him.  [Descends.

Macb. That will never be:
Who can impress the forest; bid the tree
Unfix his earth-bound root? sweet bodements! good!
Rebellion's head, rise never, till the wood Of Birnam rise; and our high-place'd Macbeth
Shall live the lease of nature, pay his breath
To time and mortal custom.  Yet my heart
Throbs to know one thing: tell me, [if your art
Can tell so much] shall Banquo's issue ever
Reign in this kingdom?

All. Seek to know no more.

Macb. I will be satisfied: deny me this,
And an eternal curse fall on you!  Let me know,—
Why sinks that eaudron? and what noise is this?

[The cauldron descends.  Haubroys sound.

1 Witch. Show!  2 Witch. Show!  3 Witch. Show!

All. Show his eyes, and grieve his heart;
Come like shadows.  so depart.
A show of eight Kings, and Banquo first and last, with a Glass in his Hand.

Macb. Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo: down!
Thy crown doth bear mine eye-balls; and thy hair.
Thou onother gold-bound brow art like the first:—
A third is like the former:—Filthy bags!

Why do you show me this?—A fourth?—Start, eyes!
What! will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?

Another yet?—A seventh?  I'll see no more:
And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass,
Which shows me many more; and some I see,
That two-fold balls and treble sceptres carry.

Horrible sight!—Now, I see, 'tis true;
For the blood-bolter d' Banquo smiles upon me,
And points at them for his.—What! is this so?

1 Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so: but why
Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?

Come, sisters, cheer we up his spirits,
And show the best of our delights.
I'll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform your antic round;
That this great king may kindly say,
Our duties did his welcome pay.

[Music.  The witches dance, and vanish.

Macb. Where are they?  Gone?—Let this peregrine hour
Stand awe accursed in the calendar!—
Come in!  without there!

Enter Lenox.

Len. What's your grace's will?

Macb. Saw you the weird sisters?

Len. No, my lord.

Macb. Came they not by you?

Len. No, indeed, my lord.

Macb. Infected be the air whereon they ride,
And damn'd all those that trust them!—I did hear
The galloping of horse: who was't came by?

Len. 'Tis two or three, my lord, that bring you word,
Macduff is fled to England.

Macb. Fled to England?

Len. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. Time, thou anticipat'st my dread exploits:
The flighty purpose never is o'ertook,
Unless the deed go with it.  From this moment,
The very firstlings of my heart shall be
The firstlings of my hand.  And even now,
To crow—my thoughts with acts, be it thought and done:
The castle of Macduff I will surprise;

Seize upon Fife: give to the edge o' the sword
His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate souls
That trace him in his line.  No boasting like a fool;
This deed I'll do, before this purpose cool:
But no more flights.—Where are these gentlemen?
Come; bring me where they are.  [Exeunt

SCENE 11.—Fife.  A Room in MACDUFF'S Castle.

Enter Lady Macduff, her Son, and Rosse.

L. Macd. What had he done to make him fly the land?

Rosse. You must have patience, madam.

L. Macd. He had none of his flight was madness.  When our actions do not,
Our fears do make us traitors.

Rosse. You know not,
Whether it was his wisdom, or his fear.

L. Macd. Wisdom! to leave his wife, to leave his
His mansion, and his titles, in a place

[From whence himself does fly?  He loves us not:
He wants the natural touch; for the poor wren,
The most diminutive of birds, will fight,
Her young ones in her nest, against the owl.
All is the fear, and nothing is the love:
As little is the wisdom, where the flight
So runs against all reason.

Rosse. My dearest coz',
I pray you, school yourself: but, for your husband,
He is noble, wise, judicious, and best knows
The fits o' the season.  I dare not speak much farther
But cruel are the times, when we are traitors,
And do not know 't ourselves: when we hold rumour
From what we fear, yet know not what we fear,
But float upon a wild and violent sea,
Each way and move.—I take my leave of you:
'T shall not be long but I'll be here again.

Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward
To what they were before.—My pretty cousin,
Blessing upon you!

L. Macd. Father'd he is, and yet he's fatherless.

Rosse. I am so much a fool, should I stay longer,
It would be my disgrace, and your discomfort.
I take my leave at once.  [Exit Rosse.

L. Macd. Sirrah, your father's dead:
And what will you do now?  How will you live?

Son. As birds do, mother.

L. Macd. What, with worms and flies?

Son. With what I get, I mean; and so do they.

L. Macd. Poor bird! thou dost never fear the net, or line,
The pit-fall, nor the gin.

Son. Why should I, mother?  Poor birds they are not set for.

My father is not dead, for all your saying.

L. Macd. Yes, he is dead: how will thou do for a father?

Son. Nay, how will you do for a husband?

L. Macd. Why, I can buy me twenty at any market
Son. Then you'll buy 'em to sell again.

L. Macd. Thou speak'st with all thy wit;
And yet i' faith, with wit enough for thee.

Son. Was my father a traitor, mother?

L. Macd. Ay, that he was.

Son. What is a traitor?

L. Macd. Why, one that swears and lies.

Son. And be all traitors that do so?

L. Macd. Every one that does so is a traitor, and must be hanged.
SCENE III.

MACBETH.

Son. And must they all be hanged that swear and lie?
L. Macd. Every one.
Son. Who must hang them?
L. Macd. Why, the honest men.
Son. Then the liars and swearers are fools: for there are liars and swearers enough to beat the honest men, and hang up them.
L. Macd. Now God help thee, poor monkey! But how will thou do for a father?
Son. If he were dead, you'd weep for him: if you would not, it would a good sign that I should quickly have a new father.
L. Macd. Poor pratter, how thou talk'st!
Enter a Messenger.
Mess. Bless you, fair dame. I am not to you known,
Though in your state of honour I am perfect.
I doubt some danger does approach you nearly:
If you will take a homely man's advice,
Be not found here; hence, with your little ones.
To fright you thus, methinks. I am too savage,
To do worse to you were felt cruelty.
Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you!
I dare abide no longer.
[Exit Messenger.
L. Macd. Whither should I fly?
I have done no harm; but I remember now
I am in this earthly world, where to do harm
Is often laudable; to do good sometime
Accounted dangerous folly! why then, alas!
Do I put up that womanly defence.
To say, I have done no harm?—What are these faces?
Enter Murderers.
Mur. Where is your husband?
L. Macd. I hope, in no place so unsanctified,
Where such as thou may'st find him.
Mur. He's a traitor.
Son. Thou liest, thou shag-eared villain.
Young fry of treachery.
Son. He has kill'd me, mother.
Run away, I pray you.
[Dies.
[Exit Lady Macduff, crying murder, and pursued by the Murderers.

SCENE III.—England. A Room in the King's Palace.

Enter Malcolm and Macduff.
Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there
Weep our sad bosoms empty.
Macd. Let us rather
Hold fast the mortal sword, and like good men
Bestride our down-fall'n birthdom. Each new morn
New widows howl, new orphans cry; new sorrows
Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds
As if it felt with Scotland, and yell'd out
Like syllable of dolour.
Mal. What I believe, I'll wait;
What know, believe; and what I can redress,
As I shall find the time to friend, I will:
What you have spoke, it may be so, perchance.
This tyrant, whose sole name blisters our tongues,
Was once thought honest: you have lov'd him well;
He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young; but something
You may deserve of him through me, and wisdom
To offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb
To appease an angry god.
Macd. I am not treacherous.
Mal. But Macbeth is.

A good and virtuous nature may recoil
In an imperial charge. But I shall crave you pardon
That which you are my thoughts cannot transpose;
Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell:
Though all things foul would wear the brows of grace,
Yet grace must still lock so.

Mal. I have lost my hopes.
Mal. Perchance, even there, where I did find my

Why in that rawness left you wife, and child,
Those precious motives, those strong knots of love,
Without leave-taking?—I pray you,
Let not my jealousies be your dishonours,
But mine own safeties: you may be rightly just,
Whatever I shall think.

Mal. Be not offended:
I speak not as in absolute fear of you.
I think our country sinks beneath the yoke;
It weeps, it bleeds; and each new day a gash
Is added to her wounds: I think, withal,
There would be hands uplifted in my right;
And here, from gracious England, have I offer'd [Shewing a Paper.
Of goodly thousands; but, for all this
When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head,
Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country
Shall have more vices than it had before,
More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever,
By him that shall succeed.

Mal. What should he be?
Mal. It is myself I mean; in whom I know
All the particulars of vice so grafted,
That, when they shall be ripen'd, black Macbeth
Will seem as pure as snow; and the poor state
Esteem him as a lamb, being compar'd
With my confineless harms.

Mal. Not in the legions
Of horrid hell can come a devil more damn'd
In evils to top Macbeth.

Mal. I grant him bloody,
Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,
Sudden, malicious, squeaking of every sin
That has a name; but there's no bottom, none,
In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daughters,
Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill up
The cistern of my lust; and my desire
All continent impediments would o'er-bear,
That did oppose my will. Better Macbeth,
Than such a one to reign.

Mal. Boundless intemperance
In nature is a tyranny: it hath been
Th' untimely emptying of the happy throne,
And fall of many kings. But fear not yet
To take upon you what is yours: you may Enjoy your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seem cold, the time you may so hoodwink
We have willing dames enough; there cannot be
That vulture in you to devour so many
As will to greatness dedicate themselves,
Finding it so inclin'd.
Macduff. This avarice

Sticks deeper, grows with more pernicious root,
Than summer-seeming lust; and it hath been
The sword of our slain kings: yet do not fear;
Scotland hath poison* to fill up your will,
Of your more own. All these are portable
With other graces weigh'd.

Macb. But I have none. The king-becoming graces,
As justice, verity, temperance, stableness,
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, loveliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
I have no relish of them; but abound
In the division of each several crime,
Acting it many ways. Nay, had I power, I should Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell,
Uproar the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.

Macb. O Scotland, Scotland!

Macb. If such a one be fit to govern, speak:
I am as I have spoken.

Macb. Fit to govern!
No, not to live.—O, nation miserable!
With an untitled tyrant, bloody-scepter'd,
When shall thou see thy wholesome days again,
Since that the truest issue of thy throne
By his own interdiction stands accur'd,
And does blaspheme his breed?—Thy royal father
Was a most sainted king: the queen, that bore thee,
Oft her upon her knees than on her feet,
Died every day she lived. Fare thee well.
These evils thou repeat'st upon thyself
Have banish'd me from Scotland.—O, my breast!
Thy hope ends here.

Macb. Macduff: this noble passion,
Child of integrity, hath from my soul
Wip'd the black scruples, reconcile'd my thoughts
To thy good truth and honour. Devilish Macbeth
By many of these trains hath sought to win me
Into his power, and modest wisdom plucks me
From over-credulous haste; but God above
Deal between thee and me, for even now
I put myself to thy direction, and Unspoke mine own detraction: here abjure
The taints and blames I laid upon myself,
For strangers to my nature. I am yet
Unknown to woman; never was forsworn;
Scarceley have coveted what was mine own;
At no time broke my faith; would not betray
The devil to his fellow, and delight
No less in truth, than life: my first false speaking
Was this upon myself. What I am truly
Is thine, and my poor country's, to command:
Whither, indeed, before thy here-approach,
Old Siward, with ten thousand warlike men,
Already at a point, was setting forth.
Now, we'll together; and the chance of good
Be like our warranted quarrel. Why are you silent?

Macb. Such welcome and unwelcome things at once,

Enter a Doctor.

Macb. Well; more anon.—Comes the king forth, I pray you?

Doc. Ay, sir: there are a crew of wretched souls,
That stay his cure: their malady convinces?

Macb. Great assay of heart; but at his touch,
Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand,
They presently amend.

Macb. I thank you, doctor.

[Exit Doctor.

Macb. What's the disease he means?

Macb. A most miraculous work in this good king,

Which often, since my time remain in England,
I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven,
Himself best knows; but strangely-visited people,
All sworn and warts, pitiful to the eye,
The melancholy of despair, he cures;
Hanging a golden stamp about their necks,
Put on with holy prayers; and 'tis spoken,
To the succeeding royalty he leaves
The healing benediction. With this strange virtue,
He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy,
And sundry blessings hang about his throne,
That speak him full of grace.

Enter Rosse.

Macb. See, who comes here?

Rosse. My countryman; but yet I know him not.

Macb. My ever-gentle cousin, welcome hither.

Macb. I know him now. Good God, at times remove
The means that make us strangers!

Rosse. Sir, amen.

Rosse. Stands Scotland where it did?

Rosse. Alas, poor country!
Almost afraid to know itself. It cannot
Be call'd our mother, but our grave; where nothing,
But who knows nothing, is once seen to smile:
Where sighs, and groans, and shrieks that rend the air
Are made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow seems
A modern ecstasy: the dead man's knell
Is there scarce ask'd for; whom for; and good men's lives
Expires before the flowers in their caps,
Dying or ere they stiffen.

Rosse. O, relation,
Too nice, and yet too true!

Macb. What is the newest grief?

Rosse. That of an hour's age doth hiss the speaker.

Each minute teens a new one.

Rosse. How does my wife?

Rosse. Why, well.

Macb. And all my children?

Rosse. Well, too.

Macb. The tyrant has not batter'd at their peace?

Rosse. No; they were well, at peace, when I did leave them.

Macb. Be not a niggard of your speech: how goes it?

Rosse. When I came hither to transport the tidings,
Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumour
Of many worthy fellows that were out:
Which was to my belief witness'd the rather,
For that I saw the tyrant's power a-foot.
Now is the time of help. Your eye in Scotland
Would create soldiers, make our women fight,
To doff their dire distresses.

Macb. Be it their comfort,
We are coming thither. Gracious England hath
Lent us good Siward, and ten thousand men:
An older, and a better soldier; none
That Christendom gives out.
Rosse.
Would I could answer is comfort with the life! But I have words, that would be how I'd out in the desert air
Where hearing should not latch1 them.
Macd.
What concern they?
The general cause, or is it a fee-grief,
Due to some single breast?
Rosse.
No mind that's honest
But in it shares some woe, though the main part
Perrains to you alone.
Macd.
If it be mine,
Keep it not from me; quickly let me have it.
Rosse. Let not your ears despire my tongue for ever,
Which shall possess them with the heaviest sound,
That ever yet they heard.
Macd. Humph! I guess at it.
Rosse. Your castle is surpris'd; your wife, and babes,
Savagely slaughter'd: to relate the manner
Were, on the quarry2 of these murder'd deer,
To add the death of you.
Mal.
Merciful heaven! —
What, man! ne'er pull your hat upon your brows:
Give sorrow words; the grief, that does not speak,
Whispers the o'er-traught heart, and bids it break.
Macd. My children too?
Rosse.
Wife, children, servants, all
That could be found.
Macd. And I must be from thence!
Rosse.
My wife kill'd too?
I have said.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter a Doctor of Physic, and a waiting Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two nights watched with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walked?

Gent. Since his majesty went into the field, I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her night-gown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon it, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return because, none while, in a most fast sleep.

Doct. A great perturbation in nature, to receive at once the benefit of sleep, and do the effects of watching. In this stumbly agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances, what at any time have you heard her say?

Gent. That, sir, which I will not report after her.

Doct. You may, to me; and 'tis most meet you should.

Gent. Neither to you, nor any one, having no witess to confirm my speech.

Enter Lady Macbeth, with a Taper.

Lo you! here she comes. This is her very guise, and upon my life fast asleep. Observe her; stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light?

Gent. Why, it stood by her: she has light by her continually; 'tis her command.

Doct. You see, her eyes are open.

Gent. Ay, but their sense is shut.

Doct. What is it she does now? Look, how she rubs her hands.

Gent. It is an accustomed action with her to seem thus washing her hands: I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Rosse.

Mal. Be comforted.

Lady M. Yet here's a spot.

Doct. Hark! she speaks. I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly.

Lady M. Out, damned spot! out, I say!—One; two; why, then 'tis time to do't. —Hell is myrky! —
Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and afeard? What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account? —Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him?

Doct. Do you mark that?

Lady M. The thane of Fife had a wife: where is she now? — What, will these hands ne'er be clean? —
No more o' that, my lord; no more o' that; you mar
all with this starting.

Doct. Go to, go to: you have known what you should not.

Gent. She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that: Heaven knows what she has known.

Lady M. Here's the smell of the blood still: all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand.
Oh! oh! oh!

Doct. What a sigh is there! The heart is sorely charged.

Gent. I would not have such a heart in my bosom, for the dignity of the whole body.

Doct. Well, well, well —

Gent. Pray God, it be, sir.

Doct. This disease is beyond my practice: yet I have known those which have walked in their sleep, who have died holily in their beds.

Lady M. Wash your hands, put on your night-gown.
look not so pale. — I tell you yet again, Banquo's buried: he cannot come out on 's grave.

Doct. Will she go now to bed?

Gent. Directly.

Doct. Fool whisperings are abroad. Unnatural deeds Do breed unnatural troubles: infected minds To their deep pillows will discharge their secrets. More needs she the divine, than the physician.— God. God, forgive us all! Look after her: Remove from her the means of all annoyance, And still keep eyes upon her.—So, good night: My mind she has mated, and amaz’d my sight. I think, but dare not speak.

Gent. Good night, good doctor. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Country near Dunsinane.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, Menteith, Cathness, Angus, Lenox, and Soldiers.

Menteith. The English power is near, led on by Malcolm, His uncle Siward, and the good Macduff. Revenues burn in them; for their dear causes Would, to the bleeding and the grim alarm, Excite the mortified man.

Angus. Near Birnam wood Snail we well meet them: that way are they coming.

Cathness. Who knows, if Donaldbain be with his brother?

Lenox. For certain, sir, he is not. I have a file Of all the gentry: there is Siward’s son, And many untouch’d youths, that even now Protest their first of manhood.

Menteith. What does the tyrant?

Cathness. Great Dunsinane he strongly fortifies. Some say, he’s amad; others, that lesser hate him, Do call it violent fury; but, for certain, He cannot buckle his dissembler’d course within the belt of rule.

Angus. Now does he feel His secret murders sticking on his hands; Now minutely revolts upbraid his faith-breath: Those he commands move only in command, Nothing in love: now does he feel his title Hang loose about him, like a giant’s robe Upon a dwarfish thief.

Menteith. Who, then, shall blame His pester’d senses to recoil and start, When all that is within him does condemn itself, for being there?

Cathness. Well; march we on, To give obedience where ’tis truly ow’d: Meet we the medicine of the sickly weal! And with him pour we, in our country’s purge, Each drop of us.

Lenox. Or so much as it needs To dew the sovereign flower, and drown the weeds. Make we our march towards Birnam. [Exeunt, marching.

SCENE III.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Menteith, Doctor, and Attendants.

Menteith. Bring me no more reports; let them fly all: Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsinane, I cannot taint with fear. What’s the boy Malcolm? Was he not born of woman? The spirits that know All mortal consequences have promis’d me thus:— "Fear not, Macbeth; no man that’s born of woman Shall e’er have power upon thee.”—Then fly, false And mingle with the English epices: [thanes. The mind I sway by, and the heart I bear, Shall never sag with doubt, nor shake with fear.

Enter a Servant.

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-fac’d loon! Where get’st thou that goose look?

Servant. There is ten thousand.—

Macbeth. Geese, villain?

Servant. Soldiers, sir.

Macbeth. Go, prick thy face, and over-red thy fear, Thou lily-liver’d boy. What soldiers, patch’r? Death of thy soul! those linen cheeks of thine Are counsellors to fear. What soldiers, whey-face?

Servant. The English force, so please you.

Macbeth. Take thy face hence. [Exit Servant.] Seyton!—I am sick at heart.

When I behold—Seyton, I say!—This push Will chair’s me ever, or disembark me now. I have liv’d long enough: my May, of life Is fall’n into the sea, the yellow leaf; And that which should accompany old age. As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends, I must not look to have; but, in their stead, Curses, not loud, but deep, mouth-honour, breath, Which the poor heart would fain deny, and dare not.

Seyton!—

Enter Seyton.

Seyton. What is your gracious pleasure?

Macbeth. What news more?

Seyton. All is confirm’d, my lord, which was reported. Macbeth. I’ll fight, till from my bones my flesh be hack’d.

Give me my armour. Seyton. ’Tis not needed yet. Send out more horses, stir the country round; Hang those that talk of fear. Give me mine armour. How does your patient, doctor?

Doctor. Not so sick, my lord, As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies, Which keep her from her rest.

Macbeth. Cure her of that. Canst thou not minister to a mind diseas’d, Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow, Raze out the written troubles of the brain, And with some sweet oblivion antidote Cleanse the stuff’d bosom of that perilous grief, Which weighs upon the heart?

Doctor. Therein the patient Must minister unto himself.

Macbeth. Throw physic to the dogs; I’ll none of it. Come, put mine armour on; give me my staff. Seyton, send out. —Doctor, the thanes fly from me._ Come, sir, despatch. —If thou couldst doctor, east The water of my hand: find her disease, And purge it to a sound and pristine health, I would applaud thee to the very echo. That should applaud again.—Pull it off, I say.— What rhubarb, senna, or what purgative drug, Would sear these English hence? —Hearst thou of them?

Doctor. Ay, my good lord: your royal preparation Makes us hear something.

Macbeth. Bring it after me. —I will not be afraid of death and bane, Till Birnam forest come to Dunsinane. [Exit

Doctor. Were I from Dunsinane away and clear, Profit again should hardly draw me here. [Exit SCENE IV.—Country near Dunsinane: A Wood in view.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, Malcolm, old Siward, and his Son, Macduff, Menteith, Cathness, Angus, Lenox, Rosse, and Soldiers marching.

Macb. Cousin, I hope, the days are near at hand, That chambers will be safe.

Ment. We doubt it nothing.

Siw. What wood is this before us?

Ment. The wood of Birnam.

Macb. Let every soldier hew him down a bough, And bear’t before him: thereby shall we shadow The numbers of our host, and make discovery

Err in report of us.

Sold. It shall be done.

Siw. We learn no other but the confident tyrant Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure Our setting down before’t.

Macb. 'Tis his main hope; For where there is advantage to be gotten, Both more and less have given him the revolt, And none serve with him but constrained things, Whose hearts are absent too.

Macb. Let our just censures Attend the true event, and put we ou industrious soldiership.

Siw. The time approaches, That will with due decision make us know What we shall say we have, and what we owe. Thoughts speculative their unsure hopes relate, But certain issue strokes must arbitrate; Towards which, advance the war. [Exeunt, marching.

SCENE V.—Dunsinane. Within the Castle.

Enter, with Drums and Colours, Macbeth, Seyton, and Soldiers.

Macb. Hang out our banners on the outward walls: The cry is still, “They come!” Our castle’s strength Will laugh a siege to scorn: here let them lie, Till famine and the ague eat them up. Were they not fare’d with those that should be ours, We might have met them careful, heard to be heard.

[Re-enter Seyton.

Se7. It is the cry of women, my good lord. [Exit.*

Macb. I have almost forgot the taste of fear.
The time has been, my senses would have quail’d To hear a night-shriek; and my fell’st hair Would at a dismali treatise rune. and stir, As life were in’t. I have sup’d full with horrors: Direness, familiar to my slaughtered thoughts, Cannot once start me.

Enter a Messenger.

Thou com’st to use thy tongue; thy story quickly.

[Exeunt.阿尔拉姆斯 continues]

SCENE VII.—The Same. Another Part of the Plain.

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake: I cannot fly But, bear-like, I must fight the course. —What’s he, That was not born of woman? Such a one Am I to fear, or none.

Enter young Siward.

Yo. Siw. What is thy name?

Macb. Thou’lt be afraid to hear it

Yo. Siw. No; though thou call’st thyself a hotter name, Than any is in hell.

Macb. My name’s Macbeth.

Yo. Siw. The devil himself could not pronounce a title More hateful to mine ear.

Macb. No, nor more fearful.

Yo. Siw. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant. with my sword I’l prove the lie thou speakest.

[They fight, and young Siward is slain.

Macb. Thou wast born of woman:—

But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn, Brandish’d by man that’s of a woman born. [Exeunt.阿尔拉姆斯. Enter Macduff.

Macb. That way the noise is.—Tyrant, show thy face!

---

1. green in f e. 2 Greatr 3 Ford’s: in f e. 4 Not in f e.
5. cool’d: in f e. 6 Skin. 7 Not in f e.
It thou be slain, and with no stroke of mine,
My wife and children's ghosts will haunt me still.
I cannot strike at wretched kinsmen, whose arms
Are hir'd to bear their staves: either thou, Macbeth,
Or else my sword, with an unbattered edge,
I sheathe again undecid. There thou shouldst be:
By this great clatter, one of greatest note
Seems bruited. Let me find him, fortune,
And more I beg not. [Exit. Alarum.]

Enter Malcolm and old Siward.

Siw. This way, my lord.—The castle's gently render'd:
The tyrant's people on both sides do fight;
The noble thanes do bravely in the war.
The day almost itself professes yours,
And little is to do.

Mal. We have met with foes
That strike beside us.

Siw. Enter, sir, the castle. [Exit. Alarum.]

Re-enter Macbeth.

Macb. Why should I play the Roman fool, and die
On mine own sword? whilst I see lives, the gashes
Do better upon them.

Re-enter Macduff.

Macd. Turn, hell-hound, turn.

Macb. Of all men else I have avoided thee;
But get thee back: my soul is too much charg'd
With blood of thine already.

Macd. I have no words;
My voice is in my sword: thou bloody villain
Than terms can give thee out! [They fight.]

Macb. Thou lostest labour.
As easy may'st thou the intrenchant air
With thy keen sword impress, as make me bleed.
Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests;
I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
To one of woman born.

Macd. Despair thy charm;
And let the angel, whom thou still hast serv'd,
Tell thee, Macduff was from his mother's womb
Untimely ripp'd.

Macb. Accursed be that tongue that tells me so,
For it hath cow'd my better part of man:
And be these fiends no more believ'd,
That paller with us in a double sense;
That keep the word of promise to our ear,
And break it to our hope.—I'll not fight with thee.

Macd. Then, yield thee, coward,
And live to be the show and gaze of the time:
We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters are,
Painted upon a pole, and underwrit,
"Here may you see the tyrant."

Macb. I will not yield,
To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's feet,
And to be baited with the rabble's curse.
Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane,
And thou oppos'd be of no woman born,
Yet I will try the last. Before my body

I throw my warlike shield: lay on, Macduff,
And damn'd be he that first cries, "Hold enough!"

Retreat. Flourish. Re-enter, with Drum and Colours.

Malcolm, old Siward, Rosse, Thanes, and Soldiers.

Mal. I would, the friends we miss were safe arriv'd.
Siw. Some must go off; and yet, by these I see,
So great a day as this is cheaply bought.

Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble son,
Rosse. Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's debt
He only liv'd but till he was a man,
The which no sooner had his prowess confirm'd
In the unshrinking station where he fought,
But like a man he died.

Siw. Then he is dead?

Rosse. Ay, and brought off the field. Your cause of sorrow
Must not be measure'd by his worth, for then
It hath no end.

Siw. Had he his hurts before?

Rosse. Ay, on the front.

Siw. Why then, God's soldier be he,
Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fairer death:
And so, his knell is knoll'd.

Mal. He's worth more sorrow,
And that I 'll spend for him.

Siw. He's worth no more:
They say, he parted well, and paid his score,
And God be with him!—Here comes newer comfort.

Re-enter Macduff, with Macbeth's Head, on a Pike.

Macd. Hail, king! for so thou art. Behold, where stands
[Sticking the Pike in the ground.]

The usurper's cursed head: the time is free.
I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's pearl,
That speak my salutation in their minds:
Whose voices I desire aloud with mine,—

Hail, king of Scotland!
All. Hail, king of Scotland! [Flourish.]

Mal. We shall not spend a large expense of time,
Before we reckon with our several loves,
And make us even with you. My thanes and kinsmen.
Henceforth be ears: the first that ever Scotland
In such an honour nam'd. What's more to do,
Which would be planted newly with the time,—
As calling home our exil'd friends abroad,
That fled the snares of watchful tyranny;
Producing forth the cruel ministers
Of this dead butcher, and his fiend-like queen,
Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent hands
Took off her life:—this, and what needful else
That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace,
We will perform in measure, time, and place.
So, thanks to all at once, and to each one,
Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Scone.

[Flourish. Exit.]

SCENE, Elsinore.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Elsinore. A Platform before the Castle.

Francisco on his Post. Enter to him Bernardo.

Ber. Who's there?

Fran. Nay, answer me: stand, and unfold Yourself.

Ber. Long live the king!

Fran. Bernardo?

Ber. He.

Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.

Ber. 'Tis new' struck twelve; get thee to bed, Francisco.

Fran. For this relief much thanks. 'Tis bitter cold, and I am sick at heart.

Ber. Have you had quiet guard?

Fran. Not a mouse stirring.

Ber. Well, good night.

If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus, the rivals of my watch, bid them make haste. Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Fran. I think I hear them.—Stand, ho! Who is there?

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And liegenmen to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good night.

Mar. O! farewell, honest soldier: Who hath reliev'd you?

Fran. Bernardo has my place.

Give you good night. [Exit Francisco.

Ber. What! Is Horatio there?

Hor. A piece of him.

Ber. Welcome, Horatio: welcome, good Marcellus.

Hor.* What, has this thing appear'd again to-night?

Ber. I have seen nothing.

Mar. Horatio says, 'tis but our fancy,

And will not let belief take hold of him. Touching this dreaded sight twice seen of us:

Therefore, I have entreat'd him along

With us, to watch the minutes of this night;

That, if again this apparition come,

He may approve our eyes, and speak to it.

Hor. Tush, tush! 't will not appear.

Ber. Sit down a while

And let us once again assault your ear,

That are so furnish'd against our story,

What we two nights have seen.

Hor. Well, sit we down and hear Bernardo speak of this.

Ber. Last night of all,

When yond star, that is westward from the pole,

Had made his course, it illum'd that part of heaven

Where now it burns, Marcellus, and myself,

The bell then beating one.

Mar. Peace! break thee off: look, where it comes again!

Enter Ghost, armed.*

Ber. In the same figure, like the king that's dead.

Mar. Thou art a scholar; speak to it, Horatio.

Ber. Looks it not like the king? mark it, Horatio.

Hor. Most like: it harrowes me with fear, and wonder.

Ber. It would be spoke to.

Mar. Question it, Horatio.

Hor. What art thou, that usurp'st this time of night

Together with that fair and warlike form,

In which the majesty of buried Denmark

Did sometimes march? by heaven I charge thee, speak!

Mar. It is offended.

Ber. See! it walks away.

Hor. Stay! speak, speak! I charge thee, speak!

[Exit Ghost.
The graves stood tenantless, and the sheathed dead
Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets:
As stars with trains of fire and dews of blood,
Disasters in the sun; and the moist star,
Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands.
Was sick almost to dooms-day with eclipse:
And even the like precurse of fierce events—
As harbingers preceding still the fates,
And prologue to the men coming on—
Have heaven and earth, together demonstrated
Unto our climatures and countrymen.—

Re-enter Ghost.

But, soft! behold! lo, where it comes again!
I'll cross it, though it blast me.—Stay, illusion!
If thou hast any sound, or use of voice,
Speak to me:
If there be any good thing to be done,
That may to thee do case, and grace to me,
Speak to me:
If thou art privy to thy country's fate,
Which happily foreknowing may avoid,
O, speak!
Or, if thou hast upbraided in thy life
Exerted treasure in the womb of earth,
For which, they say, you spirits oft walk in death.

Cock crowes

Speak of it: stay, and speak!—Stop it, Marcellus.

Mar. Shall I strike it at it with my partisan?

Hor. Do, if it will not stand.

Ber. 'Tis here!

Hor. 'Tis here!

Mar. 'T is gone.

[Exit Ghost

We do it wrong, being so majestical,
To offer it the show of violence;
For it is, as the air, invulnerable,
And our vain blows malicious mockery.

Ber. It was about to speak, when the cock crew.

Hor. And then it started, like a guilty thing
Upon a fearful summons. I have heard,
The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn.13
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat
Awake the god of day; and at his warning,
Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,
Th' extravagant and erring spirit hies
To his confine; and of the truth herein
This present object made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock.

Some say, that ever 'gainst that season comes
Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
This bird of dawning singeth all night long:
And then, they say, no spirit dares stir abroad:
The nights are wholesome; then no planets strike,
No fairy takes,12 nor witch hath power to charm,
So hallow'd and so gracious is that time.

Hor. So have I heard, and do in part believe it.
But, look, the morn, in russet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yon' high eastern hill,
Break we our watch up; and, by my advice,
Let us impart what we have seen to-night
Unto young Hamlet: for, upon my life,
This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him.
Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it,
As needful in our loves, fitting our duty?

Mar. Let's do't, I pray; and I this morning knew
Where we shall find him most conveniently. [Exeunt
SCENE II.—The Same. A Room of State.

Sonn. Enter the King, Queen, Hamlet, Polonius, Laertes, Voltimand, Cornelius, Lords, and Attendants. The King takes his Seat.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's death The memory be green, and that it us befitted To bathe our hearts in grief, and our whole kingdom To be contracted in one brow of woe; Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature, That we'll not, in our wits, to what we look, Together with remembrance of ourselves. Therefore, our sometime sister, now our queen, Th' imperial jointress of this warlike state, Have we, as 't were with a defeated joy,— With one auspicious, and one dropping eye, With mirth in funeral, and with dirge in marriage, In equal scale weighing delight and dolore,— Taken to wife: nor have we here band'd Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone With this affair along: for all, our thanks. Now follows, that you know, young Fortinbras, Holding a weak supposal of our worth. Or thinking, by our late dear brother's death Our state to be disjoint and out of frame, Colleagued with the dream of his advantage, He hath not fail'd to pester us with message, Importing the surrender of those lands Lost by his father, with all bands of law, To our most valiant brother.—So much for him. Now for yourself, of your time of meeting. Thus much the business is; we have here writ To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras,— Who, impatient and bed-ridden, scarce hears Of this his nephew's purpose,—to suppress His farther gait herein, in that the levies, The lists, and full proportions, are all made Out of his subject: and we here despatch You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimand, For bearers* of this greeting to old Norway; Giving to you no further personal power To business with the king, more than the scope Of these dilated articles allow. (Giving them.) Farewell; and let your haste commend your duty. Cor. Fol. In that, and all things, will we show our duty. King. We doubt it nothing: heartily farewell. (Exit Voltimand and Cornelius.)

And now, Laertes, what's the news with you? You told us of some suit; what is't, Laertes? You cannot speak of reason to the Dane, And lose your voice: what would you beg, Laertes, That shall not be my offer, not thy asking? The head is not more native to the heart, The hand more instrumental to the mouth, Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father. What wouldst thou have, Laertes? Laet. My dread lord.

Your leave and favour to return to France: From whence though willingly I came to Denmark, To show my duty to your coronation. Yet now, I must confess, that duty done, My thoughts and wishes bend again toward France, And bow them to your gracious leave and pardon. King. Have you your father's leave? What says Polonius? Pol. He hath, my lord, wrong from me my slow leave, By laboursome petition; and, at last, Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent:

1 The rest of this direction is not in f. e. 2 to in quarto. 3 The preceding part of this speech is not in quarto, 1603. 4 bearing is folio 5 Not in f. e. 6 This and the two following lines, are not in folio. 7 nighted: in f. e. 8 As at obscurities.
But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell,
And the king's rouse the heaven shall bruit again,
And speaking earthly thunder. Come away.

[Flourish. Exit King, Queen, Lords, &c.]

Polonius, and Laertes.

Ham. O! that this too, too solid flesh should melt,
Thaw, and resolve itself into a dew;
Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter. O God! O God!
How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seem to me all the uses of this world.
Fie on 't! O fie! 'tis an unweeded garden,
That grows to seed; things rank, and gross in nature,
Possess it merely. That it should come to this!
But two months dead!—nay, not so much, not two:
So excellent a king; that was, to this,
Hyperion to a satyr: so loving to my mother,
That he might not beteem the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth!
Must I remember? why, she would hang on him,
As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on: and yet, within a month.—
Let me not think on't. —Frailty, thy name is woman!
A little month; or ere those shoes were old,
With which she follow'd my poor father's body,
Like Niobe, all tears.—why she, even she,
(O God! a beast, that wants discourse of reason,
Would have mourn'd longer)—married with my uncle,
My father's brother; but no more like my father,
Than I to Hercules: within a month;
Ere yet the salt of most unkin'd tears
Had left the flushing in her galled eyes,
She married.—O, most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to insecions sheets!
It is not, nor it cannot come to, good;
But break, my heart, for I must hold my tongue!

Eector Horatio, Barnardo, and Marcellus.

Hor. Hail to your lordship!

Ham.

Horatio,—or I do forget myself.

Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor servant ever.

Ham. Sir, my good friend; I'll change that name with you.

And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio?—

Marcellus?

Mor. My good lord.

Ham. I am very glad to see you; good even, sir.—

But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.

Ham. I would not hear! your enemy say so;
Nor shall you do mine ear that violence,
To make it truster of your own report
Against yourself: I know, you are no truant.

But what is your affair in Elsinore?

We'll teach you to drink deep, ere you depart.

Hor. My lord, I came to see my father's funeral.

Ham. I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow-student: think, it was to see my mother's wedding.

Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon

Ham. Sibrit, thrift, Horatio: the funeral bakers meat
Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.

'Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven
Ere ever I had seen that day, Horatio!—

My father.—methinks, I see my father.

Hor. O! where, my lord?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio.

Hor. I saw him once: he was a good king.
SCENE III.—A Room in POLONIUS'S House.

Enter LAERTES and OPHELIA.

Laer. My necessaries are embark'd; farewell: And, sister, as the winds give benefit, And convoy is assistant, do not sleep, But let me hear from you.

Oph. Do you doubt that?

Laer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his favour, Hold it a fashion, and a toy in blood; A violet in the youth of primy nature. Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting, The perfume and suppliance of a minute; No more.

Oph. No more but so?

Laer. Think it no more! For nature, crescent, does not grow alone In thews, and bulk: but, as this temple waxes, The inward service of the mind and soul Grows wide withal. Perhaps, he loves you now; And now no soil, nor cantle, doth besmirch The virtue of his will, but you must fear, His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own, For he himself is subject to his birth; He may not, as unvalued persons do, Carve for himself; for on his choice depends The safety and health of this whole state; And therefore must his choice be uncommon and Unto the voice and yielding of that body, Whereof he is the head. Then, if he says he loves you, It suits your wisdom so far to believe it, As he in his particular act and place May give his saying deed: which is no further, Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal. Then, weigh what loss your honour may sustain, It with too credent ear you list his songs, Or lose your heart, or your chaste treasure open To his unnatural importunity. Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister; And keep you in the rear of your affection, Out of the shot and danger of desire. The sharpest maid is prodigal enough, If she unmask her beauty to the moon. Virtue itself scarce escapes calamitous strokes: The canker calls the infants of the spring, Too oft before their buttons be disclos'd;

And in the morn and liquid dew of youth Contagious blastsmasts are most imminent. Be wary, then; best safety lies in fear: Youth to itself rebels, though none else near. Oph. I shall the effect of this good lesson keep, As watchman to my heart. But, good my brother. Do not, as some ungracious pastors do, Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven, Whiles, like a pull'd and reckless libertine, Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads, And recks not his own read.*

Laer. O! fear me not. I stay too long;—but here my father comes.

Enter Polonius.

A double blessing is a double grace; Occasion smiles upon a second leave. Pol. Yet here, Laertes? aboard, aboard, for shame! The wind sits in the shoulders of your sail, And you are stay'd for. There,—my blessing with you: [Laying his Hand on LAERTES'S Head And these few precepts in thy memory Look thou character. Give thy thoughts no tongue, Nor any unproportion'd thought his act. Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar: The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried, Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel; But do not dull thy palm with entertainment Of each new-hatch'd, unheld'd comrade. Beware Of entrance to a quarrel; but, being in, Bear't, that th' opposer may beware of thee. Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice; Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment. Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy, But not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy: For the apparel oft proclaims the man; And they in France, of the best rank and station, Are of a most select and generous choice* in that Neither a borrower, nor a lender be; For loan oft loses both itself and friend, And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry. This above all,—to thine own self be true; And it must follow, as the night the day, Thou canst not then be false to any man. Farewell: my blessing season this in thee! Laer. Most humbly, do I take my leave, my lord.

Pol. The time invites you: go; your servants tend Laer. Farewell, Ophelia; and remember well What I have said to you.

Oph. 'Tis in my memory lock'd.

And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Laer. Farewell.

[Exit LAERTES.

Pol. What is't, Ophelia, he hath said to you?

Oph. So please you, something touching the lord Hamlet.

Pol. Marry, well bethought:

'Tis told me, he hath very oft of late Given private time to you; and you yourself Have of your audience been most free and bounteous If it be so, (as so's is put on me, And that in way of caution) I must tell you, You do not understand yourself so clearly, As it behoves my daughter, and your honour. What is between you? give me up the truth.

Oph. He hath, my lord, of late made many tenders Of his affection to me.

Pol. Affection? pooh! you speak like a green girl. Unsifted in such perilous circumstance. Do you believe his tenders, as you call them?
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

ACT I.

Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think.

Pol. Marry, I'll teach you: think yourself a baby;
That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay,
Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly;
Or, not to crack the wind of the poor phrase,
Running your venom, you'll tender me a fool.

Oph. My lord, he hath importuned me with love,
In honourable fashion.

Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it; go to, go to.

Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech, my lord,
With almost all the holy vows of heaven.

Pol. Ay, springs to catch woodcocks. I do know,
When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Lends the tongue vows: these blazes, daughter,
Giving more light than heat,—extinct in both,
Even in their promise, as it is a making.—
You must not take for fire. From this time,
Be somewhat scanner of your maiden presence:
Set your entertainments at a higher rate,
Than a command to parley. For Lord Hamlet,
Believe so much in him, that he is young;
And with a larger tether may he walk,
Than may be given you. In few, Ophelia,
Do not believe his vows, for they are brokers
Not of that die which their investments show,
But mere importunes of unholy suits,
Breathing like sanctified and pious bawds,5
The better to beguile. This is for all,—
I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth,
Have you so squander any moment’s leisure.
As to give words or talk with the lord Hamlet.
Look to’t, I charge you; so now,6 come your ways.

Oph. I shall obey, my lord.

SCENE IV.—The Platform.

Enter Hamlet, Horatio, and Marcellus.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly; it is7 very cold.

Hor. It is a nipping, and an eager air.

Ham. What hour now?

Hor. No, it is struck.

Ham. Indeed? I heard it not: it then draws near
The season.

Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.

[Flourish of Trumpets, and Ornaments shot off; within.
What does this mean, my lord?

Ham. The king doth wake to-night, and takes his rousse,
Keeps wassail, and the swaggering up-spring roes;
And as he drinks his draughts of Rhinenish down,
The kettle-drum and trumpet thus bray out
The triumph of his pledge.

Hor. Is it a custom?

Ham. Ay, marry, is’t:
But to my mind,—though I am native here,
And to the manner born,—it is a custom
More honour’d in the breach, than the observance.
This heavy-headed revel, east and west8
Makes us traduce’9 and tax’d of other nations:
They clepe’10 us drunkards, and with swimish phrase
Soil our addition; and, indeed, it takes
From our achievements, though performed at height,
The pith and marrow of our attribute.

So, oft it chances in particular men.
That for some vicious mole of nature in them,

1 As, in their birth. (wherein they are not guilty,
Since nature cannot choose his origin)
By their o’ergrowth of some complexion,
Oft breaking down the pales and forts of reason;
Or by some habit, that too much o’er-leavers
The form of plausible manners, so that these men—
Carrying, I say, the stamp of one defect
Being nature’s lively, or fortune’s star,—
Their11 virtues else, be they as pure as grace,
As infinite as man may undergo,
Shall in the general censure take corruption
From that particular fault: the dram of ill12
Doth all the noble substance often don13,
To his own scandal.

Enter Ghost,14 armed as before.

Hor. Look, my lord! it comes.

Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend us!

[Pause 1

Be thou a spirit of health, or goblin damn’d,
Bring with thee airs from heaven, or blasts from hell,
Be thy intents wicked, or charitable,
Thou com’st in such a questionable shape,
That I will speak to thee. I’ll call thee, Hamlet,
King, Father, Royal Dane: O! answer me:
Let me not burst in ignorance; but tell,
Why thy canoniz’d bones, hearsed in death,
Have burst their cerements? why the sepulchre,
Wherein we saw thee quietly in-urn’d,17
Hath o’er’d thy ponderous and marble jaws,
To cast thee up again? What may this mean,
That thou, dead corse, again in complete steel,
Revis’st thus the glimpses of the moon.
Making night hideous; and we feel of nature,
So horribly to shake our disposition.

With thoughts beyond the reachess of our souls?

Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we do?

[The Ghost beckons HAMLET

Hor. It beckons you to go away with it,
As if it some impartment did desire
To you alone.

Mar. Look, with what courteous action
It waves18 you to a more removed ground:
But do not go with it.

Hor. No, by no means.

Ham. It will not speak; then, will I follow it.

Hor. Do not, my lord.

Ham. Why, what should be the fear?

I do not set my life at a pin’s5 fee;
And, for my soul, what can it do to that,
Being a thing immortal as itself?—
It waves me forth again:—I’ll follow it.

Hor. What, if it tempt you toward the flood, my lord,
Or to the dreadful summit of the cliff,
That beetles o’er his base into the sea,
And there assume some other horrible form,
Which might deprive your sovereignty of reason,
And draw you into madness? think of it:
The very place puts toys of desperation,19
Without more motive, into every bra; r
That looks so many fathoms to the sea,
And hears it roar beneath.

Ham. It waves me still.—Go on

I’ll follow thee.

Mar. You shall not go, my lord.

Ham. Hold off your hands.

Hor. Be rul’d: you shall not go. [They struggle.16

So to seduce! won to his shameful lust
The will of my most seeming virtuous queen.
O, Hamlet, what a falling-off was there!
From me, whose love was of that dignity,
That it went hand in hand even with the vow
I made to her in marriage; and to decline
Upon a wretch, whose natural gifts were poor
To those of mine!
But virtue, as it never will be mov’d,
Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven,
So lust, though to a radiant angel link’d,
Will sate itself in a celestial bed,
And prey on garbage.
But, soft! methinks, I scent the morning air:
Brief let me be.—Sleeping within mine orchard,
My custom always in the afternoon,
Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,
With juice of cursed hebenon in a phial,
And in the porches of mine ears did pour
The leprous distillment; whose effect
Holds such an emmin with blood of man.
That, swift as quicksilver, it courses through
The natural gates and alleys of the body;
And with a sudden vigour it doth posset.
And end, like eager’ droppings into milk.
The thin and wholesome blood: so did it mine:
And a most instant, bitter bark’d about,
Most lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust
All my smooth body.
Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother’s hand.
Of life, of crown, of queen, at once despoil’d.
Cut off even in the blossom of my sin,
Unhouse’d, disappointed, unman’d:
No reckoning made, but sent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head:
O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible!
If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not;
Let not the royal bed of Denmark be
A couch for luxury and damned incest.
But, howsoever thou pursuest this act,
Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive
Against thy mother aught: leave her to heaven,
And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,
To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once.
The glow-worm shows the matin to be near,
And gias to pale his uneffectual fire:
Adieu, adieu! Hamlet, remember me.
Exit Hamlet. O, all you host of heaven! O earth! What else?
And shall I couple hell?—O fie!—Hold, heart;
And you, my sinews, grow not instant old,
But bear me stiffly up.—Remember thee?
Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat
In this distracted globe. Remember thee?
Yea, from the table of my memory
I’ll wipe away all trivial fond records,
All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past,
That youth and observation copied there,
And thy commandment all alone shall live
Within the book and volume of my brain,
Unmix’d with baser matter: yes, my heaven.
O, most pernicious and peridious woman!
O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain!
My tables,—meet it is, I set it down,
That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain,
At least, I am sure, it may be so in Denmark—

[Writing.]
So, uncle, there you are. Now to my word;
It is, "Adieu, adieu! remember me!
"I have sworn it.
Hor. [Within.] My lord! my lord!
Mar. [Within.] Lord Hamlet!
Hor. [Within.] Heaven secure him!
Mar. [Within.] So be it!
Hor. [Within.] I'llo, ho, ho! my lord!
Ham. Hillo, ho! boy! come, bird, come.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Mar. How is't, my noble lord?
Hor. What news, my lord?
Ham. O, wonderful!
Hor. Good my lord, tell it.
Ham. No;

You'll reveal it.
Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven.
Mar. Nor I, my lord.
Ham. How say you, then; would heart of man once think it?

But you'll be secret.
Hor. Mar. Ay, by heaven, my lord.
Ham. There's ne'er a villain dwelling in all Denmark,
But he's an arrant knave.
Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave.

To tell us this.
Ham. Why, right: you are i'the right;
And so, without more circumstance at all,
I hold it fit that we shake hands and part:
You, as your business and desire shall point you,
For every man hath business and desire,
Such as it is; and, for mine own poor part,
Look you, I'll go pray.
Hor. These are but wild and whirling words, my lord.
Ham. I am sorry they offend you, heartily; yes,
Faith, heartily.
Hor. There's no offence, my lord.
Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is, Horatio,
And much offence too. Touching this vision here,
It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you:
For your desire to know what is between us,
O'er-master'd as you may. And now, good friends,
As you are friends, scholars, and soldiers,
Give me one poor request.
Hor. What is't, my lord?
Mar. We will.
Ham. Never make known what you have seen toight.

Hor. Mar. My lord, we will not.
Ham. Nay, but swear 't.
Hor. In faith,

My lord, not I.
Mar. Nor I, my lord, in faith.
Ham. Upon my sword.
Mar. We have sworn, my lord, already
Ham. Indeed, upon my sword, indeed.
Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.
Ham. Ha, ha! boy! say'st thou so? art thou there true-penny?
Come on,—you hear this fellow in the cellarage,—
Consent to swear.
Hor. Propose the oath, my lord.
Ham. Never to speak of this that you have seen,
Swear by my sword.
Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.
Ham. Hie et ubique? then, we'll shift our ground.—
Come hither, gentlemen,
And lay your hands again upon my sword:
Never to speak of this that you have heard,
Swear by my sword.
Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.
Ham. Well said, old mule! cannot work it 'ere the earth:
so fast?
A worthy pioneer!—Once more remove, good friends.
Hor. O day and night, but this is wondrous strange;
Ham. And therefore as a stranger give it welcome.
There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,
Than are dreamt of in your philosophy. But come;—
Here, as before, never, so help you mercy,
How strange or odd so'er I bear myself,—
As I, perchance, hereafter shall think meet
To put an antic disposition on,—
That you, at such times seeing me, never shall,
With arms enencumber'd thus, or this head-shake,
Or by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase,
As, "Well, well, we know?"—or, "We could, an if we would?"—

Or, "If we list to speak?"—or, "There be, an if they might?"—
Or such ambiguous giving out, to note;
That you know aught of me:—this not to do,
So grace and mercy at your most need help you,
Swear.
Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.
Ham. Rest, rest, perturbed spirit!—So, gentlemen,
With all my love I do command me to you:
And what so poor a man as Hamlet is
May do, t' express his love and friendly to you,
God willing, shall not lack. Let us go in together
And still your fingers on your lips. I pray,—
The time is out of joint; O cursed spite!
That ever I was born to set it right.—

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Room in Polonius's House.

Enter Polonius and Reynaldo.

Pol. Give him this money, and these notes, Reynaldo.
Reyn. I will, my lord.
Pol. You shall do marvellously well, good Reynaldo,
Before you visit him, to make inquiry
Of his behaviour.
Reyn. My lord, I did intend it.
Pol. Marry, well said: very well said. Look you, sir,
Inquire me first what Danesker are in Paris;
And how, and who, what means, and where they keep,

1 bu'mg: in folio 2 ground: in folio 3 our: in folio.

What company, at what expense; and finding,
By this encompassment and drift of question,
That they do know my son, come you more nearer
Than your particular demands will touch it.
Take you, as 't were, some distant knowledge of him
As thus,—"I know his father, and his friends,
And, in part, him?"—do you mark this, Reynaldo?
Reyn. Ay, very well, my lord.
Pol. "And, in part, him; but," you may say, "not well;

But, if 't be he I mean, he's very wild,
Addicted so and so?"—and there put on him

1 bu'mg: in folio 2 ground: in folio 3 our: in folio.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

What forgeries you please; marry, none so rank
As may dishonour him: take heed of that;
But, sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips,
As are companions noted and most known
To youth and liberty.

Rey. As gaming, my lord.

Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing, quarrelling, itraubing—you may go so far.

Rey. My lord, that would dishonour him.

Pol. *Faith, no: as you may season it in the charge.
You must not put another scandal on him,
That he is open to incontinency:
That's not my meaning; but breathe his faults so
quantly,
That they may seem the taints of liberty;
The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind;
A savageness in unreclaimed blood,
Or general assault.

Rey. But, my good lord,—

Pol. Wherefore should you do this?

Rey. I would know that.

Pol. Marry, sir, here's my drift;
And, I believe, it is a fetch of warrant.
You laying these slight snibes on my son,
As 't were a thing a little soil'd i' the working,
Mark you,
Your party in converse, him you would sound,
Having ever seen in the prenominate crimes
The youth you breathe of guilty, be assur'd,
He closes with you in this consequence:
"Good sir," or so; or "friend," or "gentleman,"—
According to the phrase, or the addition
Of man, and country.

Rey. Very good, my lord.

Pol. And then, sir, does he this,—he does—
What was I about to say?—By the mass, I was About to say something,—where did I leave?

Rey. At closes in the consequence,
As "friend or so," and "gentleman."

Pol. At, closes in the consequence,—say, marry;
He closes thus:—"I know the gentleman;
I saw him yesterday, or 't other day,
Or then, or then; with such, or such; and, as you say,
There was he gaming; there o'erlook'd in his house;
There falling out at tennis: or perchance,
I saw him enter such a house of sale,
Vindicated, a brothel? or so forth.—
See you now;
Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth:
And thus do we of wisdom and of reach,
With windlasses, and with assays of bias,
By indirections find directions out:
So, by my former lecture and advice,
Shall you my son. You have me, have you not?

Rey. My lord, I have.

Pol. God be wi' you; fare you well.

Rey. Good my lord.

Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself.

Rey. I shall, my lord.

Pol. And let him ply his music.

Rey. Well, my lord. [Exit.

Enter Ophelia.

Pol. Farewell!—How now, Ophelia? what's the matter?

Oph. Alas, my lord! I have been so affrighted!

Pol. With what, in the name of God?

Oph. My lord, as I was seeing in my chamber,
Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk’d of you:
And, sure I am, two men there are not living,
To whom he more adheres. If it will please you
To show us so much gentry, and good will,
As to expend your time with us a while;
For the supply and profit of our hope
Your visitation shall receive such thanks
As fits a king’s remembrance.

Ros. Both your majesties
Might, by the sovereign power you have of us,
Put your dread pleasures more into command
Than to entreaty.

Guilt. But we both obey;
And here give up ourselves, in the full bent,
To lay our service freely at your feet,
To be commanded.

King. Thanks, Rosencrantz, and gentle Guildenstern.

Queen. Thanks, Guildenstern, and gentle Rosencrantz.
And I beseech you instantly to visit [erants:
My too much changed son.—Go, some of you,
And bring these gentlemen where Hamlet is.

Guilt. Heavens make our presence, and our practices,
Pleasant and helpful to him!

Queen. Ay, amen!

[Enter ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDESTERN, AND SOME ATTENDANTS.

Pol. Thy ambassadors from Norway, my good lord,
Are joyfully return’d.

King. Thou still hast been the father of good news.

Pol. Have I, my lord? Assure you, my good liege,
I hold my duty, as I hold my soul.

Both to my God, one to my gracious king:
And I do think, (or else this brain of mine
Hunts not the trail of policy so sure
As it hath us’d to do) that I have found
The very cause of Hamlet’s lunacy.

King. O! speak of that; that do I long to hear.

Pol. Give first admittance to the ambassadors;
My news shall be the fruit to that great feast.

King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in.

[Exit Polonius.

He tells me, my dear Gertrude, he hath found
The head and source of all your son’s distemper.

Queen. I doubt, it is no other but the main,
His father’s death, and our o’erhasty marriage.

Re-enter Polonius, with VOLTMANN AND CORNELIUS.

King. Well, we shall sift him. — Welcome, my good friends.

Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway?

Volt. Most fair return of greetings, and desires.

Upon our first, he sent out to suppress
His nephew’s levies; which to him appear’d
To be a preparation ‘gainst the Polack.

But, better look’d into, he truly found
It was against your highness; whereat griev’d,—
That so his sickness, age, and impotence,
Was falsely borne in hand,—sends out arrests
On Fortinbras; which he in brief obeyes.

Receives rebuke from Norway, and, in fine,
Makes vow before his uncle, never more
To give th’ assay of arms against your majesty.

Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy,
Gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee,
And his commission to employ those soldiers,
So levied as before, against the Polack:
With an entreaty, herein farther shown.

[Giving a Paper.

That it might please you to give quiet pass
Through your dominions for this enterprise,
On such regards of safety, and allowance,
As therein are set down.

King. It likes us well;
And, at our more consider’d time, we ’ll read,
Answer, and think upon this business;
Mean time, we thank you for your well-looked labour.
Go to your rest: at night we ’ll feast together;
Most welcome home.

[Exit Voltimand and Cornelius.

Pol. This business is well ended.

My liege, and madam; to expostulate
What majesty should be, what duty is,
Why day is day, night night, and time is time,
Were nothing but to waste day, night, and time.
Therefore, since brevity is the soul of wit,
And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes
I will be brief. Your noble son is mad:
Mad call I it; for, to define true madness,
What is’t, but to be nothing else but mad:
But let that go.

Queen. More matter, with less art.

Pol. Madam, I swear, I use no art at all.

That he is mad, ’t is true; ’t is true, ’t is pity,
And pity ’t is ’t is true: a foolish figure;
But farewell it, for I will use no art.

Mad let us grant him, then; and now remains,
That we find out the cause of this effect;
Or rather say, the cause of this defect.
For this effect defective comes by cause:
Thus it remains, and the remainder thus.

Perpend.

I have a daughter; have, while she is mine;
Who, in her duty and obedience, mark,
Hath given me this. Now gather, and surmise.

[Reads.

"To the celestial, and my soul’s idol, the most beautiﬁed Ophelia;"—

That’s an ill phrase, a vile phrase; "beautiﬁed" is a vile phrase; but you shall hear.—Thus:

"In her excellent white bosom, these;" &c.

Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her?

Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will be faithful.—

"Doubt thou the stars are fire," [Reads

Doubt, that the sun doth move;

Doubt truth to be a liar,

But never doubt I love.

"O dear Ophelia! I am ill at these numbers: I have not art to reckon my years; but that I love thee best, O! most best, believe it.

Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him, Hamlet."

This in obedience hath my daughter shown me;

And more above, hath his solicitings,
As they fell out by time, by means, and place,
All given to mine ear.

King. But how hath she received his love?

Pol. What do you think of me?

King. As of a man faithful, and honorable.

Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might you think
When I had seen this hot love on the wing,
(As I perceived it, I must tell you that,
Before my daughter told me) what might you,
Or my dear majesty, your queen here, think,
If I had play’d the desk, or the book:

Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumb
Or look'd upon this love with idle sight:
What might you think? no, I went round to work,
And my young mistress thus I did bespeak:

"O Hamlet, most let the in method no,
This must not be;" and then I precepts gave her.
That she should lock herself from his resort,
Admit no messengers, receive no tokens.
Which done, she took the fruits of my advice;
And he, repulsed, a short tale to make,
Fell into sadness; then into a fast;
Thence to a watch; thence into a weakness;
Thence to a lightness; and by this declension,
Into the madness wherein now he raves,
And we all wait for her.

King. Do you think 'tis this?

Quean. It may be, very likely.

Pol. Hath there been such a time, I'd fain know that,
That I have positively said, "T is so?"
When it prov'd otherwise?

King. Not that I know.

Pol. Take this from this, if this be otherwise.
[Pointing to his Head and Shoulder]
If circumstances lead me, I will find
Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed
Within the centre.

King. How may we try it farther?

Pol. You know, sometimes he walks for hours
* together.
Here in the lobby.

Queen. So he doth, indeed.

Pol. At such a time I 'll loose my daughter to him:
Be you and I behind an arm, then:
Mark the encounter; if he love her not,
And be not from his reason fallen thence,
Let me be no assistant for a state,
But keep a farm and carter.

King. We will try it.

[Enter Hamlet, reading.]

Queen. But, look, where sadly the poor wretch comes reading.

Pol. Away! I do beseech you, both away,
I'll board him presently:—O! give me leave.

[Exeunt Queen, King, and Attendants.]

How does my good lord Hamlet?

Ham. Well, god-a-mercy.

Pol. Do you know me, my lord?

Ham. Excellent well; you are a fishmonger.

Pol. Not I, my lord.

Ham. Then, I would you were so honest a man.

Pol. Honest, my lord?

Ham. Ay, sir: to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.

Pol. That's very true, my lord.

Ham. For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, being a good kissing carrion,—Have you a daughter?

Pol. I have, my lord.

Ham. Let her not walk i' the sun: conception is a blessing;
but as your daughter may conceive:—friend, look to't.

Pol. [Aside.] How say you by that? Still harping on my daughter:—yet he knew me not at first; he said,
I was a fishmonger. He is far gone, far gone: and truly in my youth I suffered much extremity for love;
very near this. I'll speak to him again.—What do you read, your lordship?

Ham. Words, words, words.

Pol. What is the matter, my lord?

Ham. Between whom?

Pol. I mean, the matter that you read, my lord.

Ham. Slanders, sir! for the satirical rogue says here that old men have grey beards; that their faces are wrinkled; their eyes purging thick amber, and plum tree gum; and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak limbs; all of which, sir, though I most powerfully and potently believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down; for you yourself, sir, should be old as I am, if it like a crab
you could go backward.

Pol. Though this be madness, yet there is method in't. [Aside.] Will you walk out of the air, my lord?

Ham. Into my grave?

Pol. Indeed, that is out of the air. [Aside.] How pregnant sometimes his replies are! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanity could not so prosperously be delivered of. I will leave him, and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter.—[To him.] My honourable lord, I will most humbly take my leave of you.

Ham. You cannot, sir, take from me any thing that I will more willingly part withal: except my life; except my life, except my life.

Pol. Fare you well, my lord.

Ham. These tedious old fools!

[Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.]

Pol. You go to seek the lord Hamlet; there he is.

Ros. God save you, sir! [To Polonius]

[Exit Polonius]

Guil. Mine honour'd lord!—

Ros. My most dear lord!

Ham. My excellent good friends! How dost thou, Guidenstern? Ah, Rosencrantz! Good lads, how do ye both?

Ros. As the indifferant children of the earth.

Guil. Happy, in that we are not overhapp'ry

On fortune's cap we are not the very button.

Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe?

Ros. Neither, my lord.

Ham. Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favour's?

Guil. Faith, her privates we.

Ham. In the secret parts of fortune? O! most true, she is a strumpet. What news?

Ros. None, my lord, but that the world's grown honest.

Ham. Then is dooms-day near; but your news is not ture. Let me question more in particular: what have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of fortune, that she sends you to prison hither?

Guil. Prison, my lord!

Ham. Denmark's a prison.

Ros. Then, is the world one.

Ham. A goodly one: in which there are many confined, wards, and dungeons, Denmark being one of the worst.

Ros. We think not so, my lord.

Ham. Why, then 'tis none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so:
to me it is a prison.

Ros. Why then, your ambition makes it one: 'tis too narrow for your mind.

Ham. O God! I could be bounded in a nut-shell, and count myself a king of infinite space, were it not that I have bad dreams.

Guil. Which dreams, indeed, are ambition; for the very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream.

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.

Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality, that it is but a shadow's shadow.

Ham. Then are our baggers bodys, and our monarchs, and outstretched heroes, the baggers' shadows. Shall we to the court? for, by my say, I cannot reason.

Ros. Guild. We'll wait upon you.

Ham, No such matter: I will not sort you with the rest of my servants; for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore?

Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion.

Ham. Baggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks;
but I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear a halfpenny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, come; deal justly with me: come, come; nay, speak.

Guil. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Why any thing but to the purpose. You were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks, which your modesties have not craft enough to colour: I know, the good king and queen have sent for you.

Ros. To what end, my lord?

Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you, by the rights of our fellowship, by the consomancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more dear a better proposer could charge you withal, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for, or no.

Ros. What say you?

Ham. Nay, then I have an eye of you. [Aside.]—If you love me, hold not off.

Guil. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen moult no feather. I have of late (but wherefore I know not) lost all my worth, foregone all custom of exercisings: and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o'erianding firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fires, why,
I think nothing to me, but a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculties! in form, and moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals!
And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delight not me; [Ros. smiles;] no, nor woman neither, though by your smiling you seem to say so.

Ros. What say you?

Guil. My lord, there was no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh, then, when I said, man delight not me?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenter entertainment the players shall receive from you; we cozed them on the way, and hither are they coming to offer you service.

Ham. He that plays the king, shall be welcome;
his majesty shall have tribute of me: the adventurors knights shall use his foil, and target: the lover shall not sigh grats: the humorous man shall end his part players; mark it.—You say right, sir: o' Monday morning; it was then, indeed.

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you.

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you. When Recess was an actor in Rome.—

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Buzz, buzz!

Pol. Upon my honour.—

Ham. Then came each actor on his ass.—

Pol. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral-comical, historical-pastoral, tragical-historical, tragic-comical-historical-pastoral, scene indivisible, or poem unlimited: Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light. For the law of Brutus, and the liberty, these are the only men.

Ham. O Jephtha, Judge of Israel, what a treasure hast thou!

Pol. What treasure had he, my lord?

Ham. Why—

One fair daughter, and no more, The which he loved passing well."

Pol. Still on my daughter.

Ham. Am I not i' the right, old Jephtha?

Pol. If you call me Jephtha, my lord, I have a daughter that I love passing well.

Ham. Nay, that follows not.

Pol. What follows, then, my lord?

Ham. Why, As by lot, God wot,

And then, you know,

It came to pass, as most it was.

The first row of the piants chanson will show you more; for look, where my abridgment comes. [Aside.

Enter Four or Five Players.

You are welcome, masters: welcome all.—I am glad to see thee well—welcome, good friends.—O, old friend! why, thy face is valanced since I saw thee last: com' st thou to hear me in Denmark?—What, my young lady and mistress! By'r Lady, your ladyship is nearer to heaven, than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chopine. Pray God your voice, like a piece of uncurrent gold, be not craggy within the ring.—Masters, you are all welcome. We 'll e'en to't like French falconers, fly at anything we see: we'll have a speech straight. Come, give us a taste of your quality. come, a passionate speech.

1 Play. What speech, my good lord?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once.—but it was never acted; or, if it was, not above once, for the play! I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas cavil to the general: but it was (as I received it, and others, whose judgments in such matters cried in the top of mine) an excellent play; well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning. I remember, one said, there was no salt in the lines to make it savour; nor matter, in the phrase that might indite the author of affectation, but called it an honest method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly loved: it was 'Electra' tale to Dido; and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priam's slaughter. If it live in your memory, begin at this line:—let me see, let me see;

"The rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hyrcanian beast,"

—It is not so; it begins with Pyrrhus.

"The rugged Pyrrhus,—he, whose sable arms,

Black as his purpose, did the night resemble

When he lay couched in the ominous horse,

Hath now this dread and black complexion smeared

With heraldry more dismal: head to foot

Now is he total gules; horribly trick'd

With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters, sons;

Bak'd and impasted with the parching streets,

That lend a tyrannous and a damned light

To their lord's murder, roasted in wrath, and fire.

And thus o'er-sized with congeulate gore,

With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus

Old grandsire Priam seeks?—

So proceed you.

Pol. 'Fore God, my lord. well spoken; with good accent, and good discretion.

1 Play. "Anon he finds him

Striking too short at Greeks: his antique sword,

Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls,

Repugnant to command. Unequal match'd;" 14

Pyrrhus at Priam drives; in rage strikes wide,

But with the whiff and wind of his fell sword

The unarmed father falls. Then senseless Ilion.

Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top

Stoops to his base; and with a hideous crash

Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear: for, lo! his sword

Which was declining on the milky head

Of reverend Priam, seem'd i' the air to stick:

So, as a painted tyrant. Pyrrhus stood:

And, like a neutral to his will and matter,

Did nothing.

But, as we often see, against some storm,

A silence in the heavens, the rack stand still.

The bold winds speechless, and the orb below

As hush as death, anon the dreadful thunder

Doth rend the region; so, after Pyrrhus' pause,

Aroused vengeance sets him now a-work,

And never did the Cyclops' hammer's fall

On Mars' armour, forg'd for proof eterno,

With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword

Now falls on Priam.—

Out, out, thou strangler. Fortune! All you gods.

In general synod, take away her power;

Break all the spake and fellows from her wheel.

And bowl the round nave down the hill of heaven

As low as to the fiends!"

Pol. This is too long.

Ham. It shall to the barber's, with your beard—

Pr'ythee, say on: he's for a jig, 13 or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps. Say on: come to Heebua.

1 Play. "But who, O I who had seen the mobled' queen?"

Ham. The mobled' queen?

Pol. That's good; mobled queen is good.

1 Play. "Run barefoot up and down threat'ning the flames

With bison rheum; a clout upon that head,

Where the diadem stood; and, for a robe

About her lank and all d'el terned loins,

A blanket, in' th' alarm of fear caught up;

Who this had seen, with tongue in venom steep'd.

Gainst fortune's state would treason have pronounc'd

But if the gods themselves did see her then,

When she saw Pyrrhus make malicious sport

In mining with his sword her husband's limbs,

The instant burst of clamour that she made,

(Unless things mortal move them not at all)

Would have made milch the burning eyes of heaven,

And passionate the gods."
Pol. Look, whether he has not turned his colour, and has tears in his eyes!—Pr'ythee, no more.
Ham. 'Tis well; I'll have thee speak out the rest of this soon.—Good my lord, wilt you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear, let them be well used: for they are the abstracts, and brief chronicles, of the time;
after your death you were better have a bad epitaph,
than their ill report while you live.
Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their desert.
Ham. God's bodkin, man, much better! use every man after his desert, and who should 'scape whipping?
Use them after your own honour and dignity: the less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.
Pol. Come, sirs.
[Exit POLONIUS, with some of the Players.
Ham. Follow him, friends: we'll have a play to-morrow.—Dost thou hear me, old friend? can you play the murder of Gonzago?
1 Play. Ay, my lord.
Ham. We'll have it to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines, which I would set down and insert in 't. could you not?
2 Play. Ay, my lord.
Ham. Very well.—Follow that lord; and look you mock him not. [Exit Player.] My good friends, [To Ros. and GUIL.] I'll leave you till night: you are welcome to Elsinore.
Ros. Good my lord!
[Exit ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.
Ham. Ay, so, good bye you*.—Now I am alone.—
O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I!
Is it not monstrous, that this player here,
But in a fiction, in a dream of passion,
Could force his soul so to his own* conceit,
That from his working all his visage wann'd*;
Tears in his eyes, distraction in his aspect,
A broken voice, and his whole function suitting
With forms to his conceit? and all for nothing:
For Hecuba!
What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba,
That he should weep for her? What would he do,
Had he the motive and the cue for passion,
That I have? He would drown the stage with tears,
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

The fair Ophelia.—Nymph, in thy orisons,
Be all my sins remember'd.

Oph. [Coming forward.] Good my lord.

How does your honour for this many a day?

Ham. I humbly thank you; well, well, well.

Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of yours,
That I have longed long to re-deliver;
I pray you, now receive them.

Ham. No, not 1; I never gave you any.

Oph. My honour'd lord, I know right well you did;
And with them words of so sweet breath conjur'd
As made the things more rich: their perfume lost,
Take these again; for to the noble mind,
Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind.

There, my lord.

Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest?

Oph. My lord!

Ham. Are you fair?

Oph. What means your lordship?

Ham. That if you be honest, and fair, your honesty should admit no discourse to your beauty.

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with 1 honesty?

Ham. Ay, truly; for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd, than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness:
this was some time a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.

Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe so.

Ham. You should not have believed me; for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock, but we shall relish of it. I loved you not.

Oph. I was the more deceived.

Ham. Get thee to a nunnery: why wouldst thou be a brother of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest; but yet I could accuse me of such things, that it were better, my mother had not borne me. I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious; with more offence at my back than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in. What should such fellows as I do, crawling between heaven and earth? We are arrant knaves, all: believe none of us.

Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where's your father?

Oph. At home, my lord.

Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him, that he may play the fool no where 12 but in his own house. Farewell.

Oph. O! help him, you sweet heavens!

Ham. If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry: be thou as chaste as ice: as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny. Get thee to a nunnery; farewell 13. Or, if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool, for wise men know well enough what monsters you make of them. To a nunnery, go; and quickly too. Farewell.

Oph. Heavenly powers, restore him!

Ham. I have heard of your paintings 10 too, well enough: God hath given you one face 14: and you make yourselves another: you jar, you amble, and you lip, and nickname God's creatures, and make your wantonness your ignorance. Go to; I'll no more on't: it shall have life; the rest shall keep as they are. To a nunery, go.

[Exit Hamlet.

Oph. O, what a noble mind is here o'erthrown!

The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's, eye, tongue, sword:
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

ACT III

It is expectancy and rose of the fair state.
The glass of fashion, and the mould of form,
Th' observ'd of all observers, quite, quite down!
And I, of ladies most deject and wretched,
That suck'd the honey of his music vows,
Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,
Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh;
That unmacht'd form and feature of blown youth.
Blasted with censures. O, woe is me!

To have seen what I have seen, see what I see!

Re-enter King and Polonius.

King. Love! his affections do not that way tend;
Nor what he spake, though it lack'd form a little,
Was not like madness. There's something in his soul,
O'er which his melancholy sits on brood;
And, I doubt, the hatch, and the discourse,
Will be some danger: which for to prevent,
I have, in quick determination,
Thus set it down. He shall with speed to England,
For the demand of our neglected tribute:
Haply, the ces, and countries different,
With variable objects, shall expel
This something settled matter in his heart,
Whereon his brain still beating puts him thus
From fashion of himself. What think you on't?

Pol. It shall do well: but yet do I believe,
The origin and commencement of his grief
Sprung from neglected love.—How now, Ophelia!
You need not tell us what lord Hamlet said:
We heard it all.—My lord, do as you please;
But, if you hold it fit, after the play
Let his queen mother all alone entertain
To show his griefs: let her be round^ with him;
And I'll be place'd, so please you, in the ear
Of all their conference. If she find him not,
To England send him; or confine him where Your wisdom best shall think.

King.

It shall be so: in great ones must not unwatch'd go. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Same.

Enter Hamlet, and certain Players, unread.

Ham. Speak the speech. I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue; but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus; but use all gently: for in the very torrent, tempest, and (as I may say) whirlwind of passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance, that may give it smoothness. O! it offends me to the soul, to hear^ a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings; who, for the most part, are capable of nothing but inexpressible dumb shows, and noise: I would have such a fellow whipped for o'er-doing Ternagant; it out-heros Herod: pray you avoid it.

1 Play. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor: suit the action to the word, the word to the action, with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature; for any thing so overdone is from the purpose of playing. whose end, both at the first, and now, was, and is, to hold, as it were, the mirror up to nature: to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time, his form and pressure. Now, this overdone, or come tardy off, though it make the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of which^ one must, in your allowance, overweigh a whole theatre of others. O! there be players, that I have seen play,—and heard others praise, and that highly,—not to speak it profanely, that, neither having the accent of Christians, nor the gait of Christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutted, and bellowed, that I have thought some of nature's journeymen had made men, and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

1 Play. I hope, we have reformed that indifferently with us.

Ham. O! reform it altogether. And let those, that play your clowns, speak no more than is set down for them: for there be of them, that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too; though in the mean time some necessary question of the play be then to be considered: that's villainous, and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, make you ready.—[Exit Polonius. Enter Polonius, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

Ham. Now, my lord! will the king hear this piece of Pol. And the queen too, and that presently: [work] Ham. Bid the players make haste. —[Exit Polonius. Will you two help to hasten them?

Both. We will, my lord. —[Exit Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Ham. What, ho! Horatio! Enter Horatio!

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service.

Ham. Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man As e'er my conversation coped withal.

Hor. O! my dear lord,—

Hor. Nay, do not think I flatter
For what advancement may I hope from thee,
That no revenue hast, but thy good spirits,
To feed and clothe thee? Why should the poor be flatter'd?

No; let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp,
And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee,
Where thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou hear?
Since my dear soul was mistress of her choice,
And could of men distinguish, her election
Hath seal'd thee for herself: for thou hast been
As one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing;
A man, that fortune's buffets and rewards
Hast ta'en with equal thanks: and bless'd are those,
Whose blood and judgment are so well commingled,
That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger
To sound what stop she please. Give me that man
That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him
In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart,
As I do thee.—Something too much of this. —

There is a play to-night before the king: One scene of it comes near the circumstance, Which I have told thee, of my father's death:
I pr'ythee, when thou seest that act a-foot,
Even with the very comment of thy soul
Observe mine uncle: if he occulted guilt
Do not itself unkennel in one speech,
It is a damned ghost that we have seen,
And my imaginations are as foul
As Vulcan's sithly. Give him heedful note; For I mine eyes will rivet to his face,
And, after, we will both our judgments join
In censure of his seeming.

Hor.

Hor. Well, my lord;

If he steal aught whilst the play is playing,
And snake detecting, I will pay the theft.
Scene II.

Ham. They are coming to the play; I must be idle; get you a place.

Senet. Danish March. Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and others.

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet? *

Ham. Excellent, i' faith; of the camelion's dish: I eat the air, promise-creamed. You cannot feed casons so.

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet: these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine now.—My lord, you played once in the university, you say? [To Polonius.

Pol. That did I, my lord; and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. And what did you enact? [To Polonius.

Pol. I did enact Julius Caesar: I was killed i' the Capitol; Brutus killed me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him to kill so capital a calf there. —Be the players ready?

Rox. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience. Queen. Come hither, my dear 4 Hamlet; sit by me.

Ham. No, good mother, here's metal more attractive.

Pol. O ho! do you mark that? [To the King.

Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap?

[LYING DOWN AT OPHELIA'S FEET.

Oph. No, my lord.

Ham. I mean, my head upon your lap?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Do you think I mean country matters?

Oph. I think nothing, my lord.

Ham. That's a fair thought to lie between maids' legs.

Oph. What is, my lord?

Ham. Nothing.

Oph. You are merry, my lord.

Ham. Who, I?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. O God! your only jig-maker. What should a man do, but be merry? For, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within these two hours,

Ham. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord.

Ham. So long? Nay then, let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. O heavens! die two months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there's hope, a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year; but, by 'r-lady, he must build churches then, or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse; whose epitaph is, 'For, O! for, O! the hobby-horse is forgot.'

Trumpets sound. The dumb Show enters.

Enter a King 2d and Queen, very lovingly; the Queen embracing Ham. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him. He takes her up, and declines her hand upon her neck; lays him down upon a bank of flowers: she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. Anon comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses him, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exit. The Queen returns, finds him, and makes passionate action. The Poisoner, with some two or three Mutes, comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away. The Poisoner teaches the Queen with gifts: she seems loth and unwilling awhile, but in the end accepts his love. [Exeunt.

Oph. What means this, my lord?

Ham. Marry, this is mewing mallecho; it means mischief.

Oph. Belike, this show imports the argument of the play.

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow: the players cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all.

Oph. Will he tell us what this show meant?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you will show him: be not you ashamed to show, he'll not shame to tell you what it means.

Oph. You are naught, you are naught. I'll mock the play.

Pro. "For us, and for our tragedy,

Here stooping to your element,

We beg your hearing patiently."

Ham. Is this a prologue, or the poetie of a ring?

Oph. 'Tis brief, my lord.

Ham. As woman's love.

Enter the Player King and Player Queen.

P. King. Full thirty times has Phoebus' car gone round

Neptune's salt wash, and Tellus' orb'd ground;

And thirty dozen moons, with borrow'd sheen,

About the world have times twelve threesies been;

Since love our hearts, and Hymen did our hands,

Unite emunual in most sacred bands.

P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon

Make us again count o'er, ere love be done.

But, woe is me! you are so sick of late,

So far from cheer, and from your former state,

That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust,

Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must;

For women's fear and love hold quantity;

In neither aught, or in extremity.

Now, what my love is, proof hath made you know,

And as my love is siz'd, my fear is so

Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear;

Where little fears grow great, great love grows there.

P. King. 'Faith, I must leave thee, love, and shortly too;

My operant powers' functions leave to do:

And thou shalt live in this fair world behind,

Honour'd, belov'd; and, haply, one as kind

For husband shalt thou—

P. Queen. O, confound the rest! Such love must needs be treason in my breast:

In second husband let me be secure;

None wed the second, but who kill'd the first.

Ham. [Aside.] Wormwood, wormwood. P. Queen. The instances, that second marriage move

Are base respects of thrift, but none of love:

A second time I kill my husband dead,

When second husband kisses me in bed.

P. King. I do believe you think what now you speak,

But what we do determine oft we break.

Purpose is but the slave to memory,

Of violent birth, but poor validity;

Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree,

But fall, unshaken, when they mellow be.

Most necessary 't is, that we forget

To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt:

What to ourselves in passion we propose,

The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.

The violence of either grief or joy

Their own enactors with themselves destroy:

Where joy most revels, grief doth most lament,

Grief joys, joy grieves, on slander accident.

This world is not for aye; nor 't is not strange,
That even our loves should with our fortunes change;
For't is a question left us yet to prove,
Whether love lead fortune, or else fortune love.
The great man down, you mark his favourite thies;
The poor advance'd makes friends of enemies:
And hitherto doth love on fortune tend.
For who not judges shall never lack a friend;
And who in want a hollow friend doth try,
Directly seasons him his enemy.
But, orderly to end where I began,
Our wills and fates do so contrary run,
That our devices still are overthrowed;
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own:
So think thou wilt no second husband wed,
But die thy thoughts, when thy first lord is dead.

P. Queen. Nor earth to me give\(^1\) food, nor heaven light!
Sport and repose look from me, day and night!
To desperation turn my trust and hope!
An anchor\(^2\)'s cheer in prison be my soope!
Each opposite, that blanks the face of joy,
Meet what I would have well, and it destroy!
Both here, and hence, pursue me lasting strife,
If, once a widow, ever I be wise!

Ham. If she should break her vow,—

P. King. 'T is deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here a while:
My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile
The tedious day with sleep. [Sleeps.

P. Queen. Sleep rock thy brain:
And never come mischiefs between us twain! [Exit.

Ham. Madam, how like you this play?
Queen. The lady doth protest\(^3\) too much, methinks!

Ham. O! but she'll keep her word.
King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in't?

Ham. No, no; they do but jest, poison in jest: no offence i'the world.

King. What do you call the play?

This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna:
Gonzago is the duke's name; his wife, Baptista. You shall see anon: 't is a knavish piece of work; but what of that? your majesty, and we that have free souls, it touches us not: let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung.

Enter Lucius.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king.

Oph. You are as good as a chorum,\(^4\) my lord.

Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying.

Oph. You are keen, my lord, you are keen.

Ham. It would cost you a groaning to take off my edge.

Oph. Still better, and worse.

Ham. So you must take\(^5\) your husbands.—Begin, murderer: leave thy damnable faces, and begin.
Come.—The croaking raven doth bellow for revenge.

Luc. Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing:
Confederate season, else no creature seeing;
Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected.
With Hecate's ban thrice blessed, thrice infected.
Thy natural magic and dire property,
On wholesome life usurp immediately.

[Enters the Poison into the Sleeper's Ears.

Ham. He poisons him i'the garden for his estate.

His name's Gonzago: the story is extant, and written in very\(^6\) choice Italian. You shall see anon, how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

Oph. The king rises.

Ham. What! frighted with false fire?

Queen. How fares my lord?

Pol. Give o'er the play.

King. Give me some light!—away!

All. Lights, lights, lights!

[Exeunt all but HAMLET and HORATIO.

Ham. Why, let the stricken deer go weep,
The hart ungalled play;
For some must watch, while some must sleep:
Thus runs the world away.—

Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers. (If the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me) with two Provincial roses on my raised shoes, get me a fellowship in a cry\(^7\) of players, sir?

Hor. Half a share.

Ham. A whole one, I.

For thou dost know, O Damon dear!
This realm dismantled was
Of Jove himself: and now reigns here
A very, a very——peacock.

Hor. You might have rhymed.

Ham. O good Horatio! I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning,—

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, ha!—Come! some music! come; the recorders!

For if the king like not the comedy,
Why, then, belike,—he thinks it not, perdy.—

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Come; some music!

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Guil. The king, sir,—

Ham. Ay, sir, what of him?

Guil. Is in his retirement marvellous destempered.

Ham. With drink, sir?

Guil. No, my lord,\(^8\) with choler.

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more richly, to signify this to his doctor; for, for me to put him in his purgation would, perhaps, plunge him into\(^9\) more choler.

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from the affair.

Ham. I am tame, sir; pronounce.

Guil. The queen your mother, in most great afflic-tion of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment: if not, your pardon and my return shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guil. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseased: but, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or, rather, as you say, my mother—therefore no more, but to the matter. My mother, you say—

Ros. Then, thus she says. Your behaviour has struck her into amazement and admiration.

---
Scene III.

Hamlet, Prince of Denmark.

Ham. O wonderful son, that can so astonish a mother!—But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother’s admiration? importune.

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet, ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any farther trade with us?

Ros. My lord, you once did love me.

Ham. And do still, by these pickers andsteaders.

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper? you do surely, but bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend.

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be, when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark?

Ham. Ay, sir, but "while the grass grows,"—the proverb is something musty.

Enter one with a Recorder.

O! the recorder:—let me see one.—To withdraw with you:—why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

Guil. O, my lord! if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmanfully.

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beseech you.

Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. It is as easy as lying: govern these ventages with your finger and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops.

Guil. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony: I have not the skill.

Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me. You would play upon me; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass; and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ, yet cannot you make it speak.

"Blood! do you think I am easier to be played on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me.—

Enter Polonius.

God bless you, sir!

Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you, and presently.

Ham. Do you see yonder cloud, that’s almost in shape of a camel?

Pol. By the mass, and ’t is like a camel, indeed.

Ham. Methinks, it is like a weasel.

Pol. It is backed like a weasel.

Ham. Or, like a whale?

Pol. Very like a whale.

Ham. Then, will I come to my mother by and by.—They fool me to the top of my bent.—I will come by and by.

Pol. I will say so.

Ham. By and by is easily said.—Leave me, friends.

[Exit Ros., Guil., Hor., &c.]

'Tis now the very witching time of night. When churchyards yawn, and hell itself breathes out Contagion to this world: now could I drink hot blood, And do such bitter business as the day

Would quake to look on. Soft! now to my mother.—

O! heart! lose not thy nature; let not ever

The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom:

Let me be cruel, not unnatural.

I will speak daggers to her, but use none:

My tongue and soul are as this be hypocrites:

How in my words soever she be silent,

To give them seals never, my soul, consent!—

[Exit.

Scene III.—A Room in the Same.

Enter King, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. I like him not; nor stands it safe with us, To let his madness range. Therefore, prepare you; I your commission will forthwith despatch, And he to England shall along with you.

The terms of our estate may not endure

Hazard so dangerous 13, as doth hourly grow

Out of his incencies.

Guil. We will ourselves provide.

Most holy and religious fear it is,

To keep those very many bodies safe,

That live, and feed, upon your majesty.

Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound,

With all the strength and armour of the mind,

To keep itself from 'nourance; but much more

That spirit, upon whose weality depend

The lives of many. The cease of majesty

Dyes not alone; but like a gulf doth draw

What’s near it with it: it is a massy wheel,

Fix’d on the summit of the highest mount,

To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things

Are mortis’d and adjoin’d; which, when it falls,

Each small annexment, petty consequence,

Attends the boisterous ruin. Never alone

Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

King. Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy voyage.

For we will letters put upon this fear,

Which now goes too free-footed.

Ros. and Guil. We will haste us.

[Exit Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. My lord, he’s going to his mother’s closet.

Behind the arras I’ll convey myself,

To hear the process: I’ll warrant, she’ll tax him home

And, as you said, and wisely was it said, "It’s meet that some more audience than a mother,

Since nature makes them partial, should o’erhear

The speech of vantage. Fare you well, my liege:

I’ll call upon you thee you go to bed,

And tell you what I know.

King. Thanks, dear my lord.

[Exit Polonius.

O! my offence is rank, it smells to heaven;

It hath the primal eldest curse upon’t;

A brother’s murder!—Pray can I not,

Though inclination be as sharp as will:

My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent;

And, like a man to double business bound,

I stand in pause where I shall first begin,

And both neglect. What if this cursed hand

Were thicker than itself with brother’s blood,

Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens,

To wash it white as snow? Where to serveth mercy,

But to confront the visage of offence?

And what’s in prayer, but this two-fold force,—

To be forestalled, ere we come to fall.

Or pardon’d, being down? Then, I’ll look up:

My fault is past. But, O! what form of prayer
Can serve my turn? Forgive me my foul murder!—
That cannot be; since I am still possess'd
Of those effects for which I did the murder,
My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen. May
One be pardon'd, and retain th' offence? In
The corrupted currents of this world,
Offence's gilded hand may move by justice,
And o't is seen, the wicked purse itself
Buys out the law; but 'tis not so above:
There is no шuffling, there the action lies
In his true nature; and we ourselves compell'd,
Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults,
To give in evidence. What then? what rests?
Try what repentance can; what can it not?
Yet what can it, when one cannot repent?
O wretched state! O bosom, black as death!
O limed soul, that struggling to be free,
Art more engaged! Help, angels! make assay:
Bow, stubborn knees; and, heart, with strings of steel,
Be soft as sinews of the newborn babe.
All may be well. [Kneels.]

Enter Hamlet, behind, his Sword drawn.

Ham. Now might I do it, pat, now he is praying;
And now I'll do't;—and so he goes to heaven,
And so am I reveng'd. That would be scann'd:
A villain kills my father; and for that,
I, his sole son, do this same villain send
To heaven.

Why, this is hire and salary, not revenge.
He took my father grossly, full of bread;
With all his crimes broad blown, as flush'd as May,
And how his audit stands, who knows, save heaven?
But, in our circumstance and course of thought,
'T is heavy with him; and am I then reveng'd,
To take him in the purging of his soul,
When he is fit and season'd for his passage?

No,
Up, sword; and know thou a more horrid hent.
When he is drunk, asleep, or in his rage;
Or in th' incestuous pleasures of his bed;
At gaming, swearing; or about some act,
That has no relish of salvation in it;
Then trip him, that his heels may kick at heaven,
And that his soul may be as damn'd, and black,
As hell, whereto it goes. My mother stays:
This physic but prolongs thy sickly days,
[Exit.]

King. [Rising.] My words fly up, my thoughts remain below;
Words without thoughts never to heaven go. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—A Room in the Same.

Enter Queen and Polonius.

Pol. He will come straight. Look, you lay home to him;
Tell him, his pranks have been too broad to bear with,
And that your grace hath screen'd and stood between Much heat and him. I'll scence me even here.
Pray you, be round with him.

Ham. [Within.] Mother, mother, mother!

Queen. I'll warrant you;
Fear me not:—withdraw, I hear him coming.

[Exit Polonius behind the Arras.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now, mother: what's the matter?

Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.

Ham. Mother, you have my father much offended.

Queen. Come, come; you answer with an idle tongue
Ham. Go, go; you question with a wicked tongue
Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet!

Ham. What's the matter now?

Queen. Have you forgot me?

Ham. No, by the rood, not so
You are the queen, your husband's brother's wife;
And,—would it were not so,—you are my mother.

Queen. Nay then, I'll send those to you that can speak

Ham. Come, come, and sit you down; you shall not

You go not, till I set you up a glass
[budge, Where you may see the inmost part of you.

Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murder me.

Help, help, ho!

Pol. [Behind.] What, ho! help! help! help!

Ham. How now! a rat? [Draws.] Dead for a ducat, dead.

[Hamlet makes a pass through the Arras.

Pol. [Behind.] O! I am slain.

[ Falls and dies.

Queen. O me! what hast thou done?

Ham. [Coming forward.] Nay, I know not:
Is it the king?

[ Lifts the Arras, and draws forth Polonius.

Queen. O, what a rash and bloody deed is this!

Ham. A bloody deed; almost as bad, good mother, As kill a king, and marry with his brother.

Queen. As kill a king!

Ham. Ay, lady, 't was my word.—
Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farowell.

[ Seeing the body of Polonius I took thee for thy better; take thy fortune:
Thou find'st to be too busy is some danger.—
Leave wringing of your hands. Peace! sit you down,
And let me wring your heart: for so I shall,
If it be made of penetrable stuff;
If damned custom have not braw'd it so,
That it is proof and bulwark against sense.

Queen. What have I done, that thou dar'st wag thy tongue
In noise so rude against me?

Ham. Such an act,
That bruises the grace and blush of modesty;
Calls virtue, hypocrite; takes off the rose
From the fair forehead of an innocent love,
And sets a bluster there; makes marriage vows
As false as dicer's oaths: O! such a deed,
As from the body of contraction plucks
The very soul; and sweet religion makes
A rhapsody of words: Heaven's face doth glow,
Yea, this solidity and compound mass,
With tristful visage, as against the doom,
Is thought-sick at the act.

Queen. Ah me! what act,
That roars so loud, and thunders in the island
Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on this;
The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.
See, what a grace was seated on this brow:
Hyperion's curls; the front of Jove himself;
An eye like Mars, to threaten and command;
A station like the herald Mercury,
New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill;
A combination, and a form, indeed,
Where every god did seem to set his seal,
To give the world assurance of a man.
This was your husband: look you now, what follows
Here is your husband: like a mildew'd ear,
Blasting his wholesome brother, Have you eyes?

Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,
And batten't on this moor? Ha! have you eyes? You cannot call it, love: for, at your age, The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble, And waits upon the judgment; and what judgment Would stoop from this to this? Sense, but, sure, you have, Else, could you not have motion; but, sure, that sense Is apoplex'd: for madness would not err. Nor sense to care was ne'er so thrall'd, But it reserved some quantity of choice. To serve in such a difference, What devil was 't That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind? Eyes, without feeling, feeling without sight, Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans all, Or but a sickly part of one true sense Could not so mope. O shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious hell, If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones, To flame youth let virtue be as wax, And melt in her own fire: proclaim no shame. When the compulsive ardour gives the charge, Since frost itself as actively doth burn, And reason ponders will.

Queen. O Hamlet! speak no more.

Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul; And here I see such black and grained spots, As will not leave their tint.

Ham. Nay, but to live In the rank sweat of an un Alsed bed; Sweat'd in corruption; honeying, and making love Over the nasty stye:— O, speak to me no more! These words, like daggers enter in mine ears: No more, sweet Hamlet.

Ham. A murderer, and a villain; Of your precedent lord: a vice of kings! A cutpurse of the empire and the rule, That from a shelf the precious diadem stole, And put it in his pocket:

Queen. Enter Ghost, unarmed.

Ham. A king of shreds and patches. — Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings, You heavenly guards! — What would you, gracious Queen. Alas! he's mad.

Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to chide, That, lape'd in frame and passion, lets go by Th' important acting of your dread command? O, say, what figure?

Ghost. Do not forget. This visitation Is but to what thy almost blunted purpose. But, look! amazement on thy mother sits: O! step between her and her fighting soul; Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works. Speak to her, Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you, lady? Queen. Alas! how is't with you, That you do bend your eyes on vacancy, And with th' incorporeal air do hold discourse? Forth at your eyes you spirits wildly peep; And, as the sleeping soldiers in th' alarm, You bedded hair, like life in excrement, Starts up, and stands on end. O gentle son! Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper Sprinkle cool patience. Wherefore do you look? Ham. On him, on him! Look you, how pale he glares!

His form and cause conjoin'd, preaching to stones, Would make them capable: — Do not look upon me; Lest with this piteous action you convert My stern effects: then, what I have to do Will want true colour: tears, peregrine, for blood.

Ham. To whom do you speak this?

Queen. Nothing at all: yet all, that is, I see. Ham. Nor did you nothing hear?

Queen. No, nothing but ourselves. Ham. Why, look you there? look, how it steals away My father, in his habit as he liv'd! Look, where he goes, even now, out at the portal!

Queen. This is the very coinage of your brain: This bodiless creation ecstasy Is very cunning in.

Ham. Ecstasy! My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep, time, And makes as healthful music. It is not madness That I have utter'd: bring me to the test, And I the matter will re-word, which madness Would gambol from. Mother, for love of grace, Lay not that flattery enticement to your soul. That not your trespass, but my madness stirs: It will but skin and film the ulcerous place. Whilst rank corruption, mining all within, Doth from my bones infect and carry heaven: Repent what's past; avoid what is to come, And do not spread the compost on the weeds, To make them ranker. Forgive me this my virtue: For in the fatness of these pursy times, Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg.

Yea, curb14 and woo, for leave to do him good.

Queen. O Hamlet! thou hast left my heart in two Ham. O throw away the worse part of it, And live the purer with the other half. Good night; but go not to mine uncle's bed: Assume a virtue, if you have it not. That monster, custom, who all sense doth eat Of habits, devil, is angel yet in this; That to the use of actions fair and good He likewise gives a frowk, or lively,

That aptly is put on: refrain to-night; And that shall lend a kind of easiness To the next abstinence: the next more easy; For use almost can change the stamp of nature, And master the devil, or throw him out With wondrous petency. Once more, good night: And when you are desirous to be bless'd, I'll blessing beg of you. — For this same lord, Pointing to Polonius I do repent: but heaven hath pleas'd it so, To punish me with this, and this with me, That I must be their scourge and minister. I will bestow him. and will answer well The death I gave him. So, again, good night. — I must be cruel, only to be kind: Thus bad begins, and worse remains behind. — One word more, good lady.

Queen. What shall I do? Ham. Not this, by no means, that I bid you do: Let the bloat king tempt you again to bed; Pinch wanton on your cheek; call you his mouse; And let him, for a pair of recey kisses, Or paddling in your neck with his dam'd fingers, Make you to ravel all this matter out.

That I essentially am not in madness,
But mad in craft: 'T were good, you let him know;
For who, that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise,
Would from a paddock5, from a bat, a gib,3
Such dear concernings hide? who would do so?
No, in despite of sense and secrecy,
Unpeg the basket on the house's top,
Let the birds fly, and, like the famous ape,
To try conclusions in the basket creep,
And break your own neck down.
Queen. Be thou assured, if words be made of breath,
And breath of life, I have no life to breathe.
What thou hast said to me.
Ham. I must to England; you know that.
Queen. Alack! I had forgot: 'tis so concluded on.
Ham. There's letters seal'd, and my two school-
Whom I will trust, as I will adders fang'd,—
They bear the mandate; they must sweep my way,
And marshal me to knavery. Let it work;
For 'tis the sport, to have the engineer
Holst with his own petar, and it shall go hard,
But I will delve one yard below their mines,
And blow them at the moon. O! 'tis most sweet,
When in one line two crafts directly meet—
This man shall set me packing:
I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room.—
Mother, good night.—Indeed, this counsellor
Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,
Who was in life a foolish prating knave—
Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you —
Good night, mother.
[Exeunt severally; Hamlet dragging in Polonius.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same.
Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. There's matter in these sights: these profound heaves
You must translate; 'tis fit we understand them.
Where is your son?
Queen. Bestow this place on us a little while. — [Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Ah, my good lord, what have I seen to-night!—
King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?
Queen. Mad as the sea and wind, when both contend
Which is the mightier. In his lawless fit,
Behind the arras hearing something stir,
He whips his rapiers out, and cries, "A rat! a rat!"
And in his brainish apprehension kills
The unseen good old man.
King. O heavy deed! It had been so with us, had we been there.
His liberty is full of threats to all;
To you yourself, to us, to every one.
Alas! how shall this bloody deed be answer'd?
It will be laid to us, whose providence
Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt,
This mad young man; but so much was our love,
We would not understand what most was fit,
But, like the owner of a foul disease,
To keep it from divulging, let it feed
Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?
Queen. To draw apart the body he hath kill'd;
Of whom his very madness, like some ore
Among a mineral of metals base,
Shows itself pure: he weeps for what is done.

King. O, Gertrude! come away,
The sun no sooner shall the mountains touch,
But we will ship him hence: and this vile deed
We must, with all our majesty and skill,
Both countenance and excuse.—I'll go! Guildenstern!
[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Friends both, go join you with some farther aid.
Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain,
And from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd him:
Go, seek him out: speak fair, and bring the body
Into the chapel. I pray you, haste in this.
[Exeunt Ros. and Guil.]

Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends;
And let them know, both what we mean to do,
And what's untimely done: so, happily, slander,—
Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,
As level as the cannon to his blank,
Transports his poison'd shot,—may miss our name,
And hit the woundless air.—O, come away!
My soul is full of discord, and dismay.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another Room in the Same.
Enter Hamlet.

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body?

Ham. Compound it with dust, where'er 'tis kien.
Ros. Tell us where 'tis; that we may take it thence,
And bear it to the chapel.
Ham. Do not believe it.
Ros. Believe what?
Ham. That I can keep your counsel, and not mine own.
Besides, to be demanded of a sponge, what replication should be made by the son of a king?
Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord?
Ham. Ay, sir; that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end; he keeps them, like an ape, in the corner of his jaw, first mouthed, to be last swallowed: when he needs what you have gleaned, it is but squeezing you, and, sponge, you shall be dry again.
Ros. I understand you not, my lord.
Ham. I am glad of it: a knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.
Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is,
and go with us to the king.
Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing—

Guil. A thing, my lord?
Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him. Hide fox, and all after.
[Exeunt.
SCENE IV.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter King, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body. How dangerous is it, that this man goes loose! Yet must not we put the strong law on him: He’s lov’d of the distracted multitude, Who like not in their judgment, but their eyes; And where ’tis so, th’ offender’s scourge is weight’d, But never the offenser. To bear all smooth and even, This sudden sending him away must seem Deliberate pause: diseases, desperate grown,
By desperate appliance are reliev’d,

Enter Rosencrantz.

Or not at all.—How now! what hath befallen?
Ros. Where the dead body is bestow’d, my lord,
We cannot get from him.

King. But where is he?
Ros. Without, my lord; guarded, to know your pleasure.

King. Bring him before us.
Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in my lord.

Enter Hamlet and Guildenstern.

Ham. Now, Hamlet, where’s Polonius?
Ham. At supper.
King. At supper! Where?
Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten; a certain convocation of palated worms are en at him.
Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else to fat us, and we fat ourselves for maggot’s. Your fat king, and your lean beggar, is but service variable; two dishes, but to one table: that’s the end.

King. Alas, alack!²
Ham. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king; and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

King. What dost thou mean by this?
Ham. Nothing, but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.

King. Where is Polonius?
Ham. In heaven: send thither to see; if your messenger find him not there, seek him i’ the other place yourself. But, indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.

King. Go seek him there. [To some Attendants. Ham. He will stay till you come. [Exit Attendants. King. Hamlet, this deed, for thine especial safety,— Which we do tender, as we dearly love— For that which thou hast done,—must send thee hence With fiery quickness: therefore, prepare thyself. The bark is ready, and the wind at help, Th’ associates tend, and every thing is bent

For England.

Ham. For England?

King. Good.
Ham. So is it, if thou knew’st our purposes.
Ham. I see a cherub that sees them. —But, come; for England! —Farewell, dear mother.
King. Thy loving father, Hamlet.
Ham. My mother: father and mother is man and wife. man and wife is one flesh; and so, my mother.
Come, for England! [Exit.
King. Follow him at foot; tempt him with speed aboard: Delay it not, I’ll have him hence to-night.

Away, for every thing is seal’d and done, That else leans on th’ affair: pray you, make haste.

[Exit Ros. and Guildenstern.

And, England, if my love thou hold’st at aug’nt, (As my great power thereof may give thee sense, Since yet thy civetrie looks raw and red After the Danish sword, and thy free awe Pays homage to us) thou may’st not coldly see Our sovereign process, which imports at full, By letters conjuring⑤ to that effect, The present death of Hamlet. Do it, England; For like the hectic in my blood he rages, And thou must cure me. Till I know 'tis done, How’er my hopes, my joys were never begun. [Exit

SCENE IV.—A Plain in Denmark.

Enter Fortinbras, and Forces, Marching.

For. Go, captain; from me greet the Danish king— Tell him, that by his licence Fortinbras Claims⁶ the conveyance of a promis’d march Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous. If that his majesty would aught with us, We shall express our duty in his eye; And let him know so.

Cap. I will do’t, my lord.
For. Go safely⁷ on. [Exit Fortinbras and Forces

Enter° Hamlet, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, & c.

Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these?
Cap. They are of Norway, sir.

Ham. How purpos’d, sir, I pray you?

Cap. Against some part of Poland.

Ham. Who Commands them, sir?

Cap. The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras.

Ham. Goes it against the main of Poland, sir, Or for some frontier?

Cap. Truly to speak, and with no addition, We go to gain a little patch of ground, That hath in it no profit but the name. To pay five ducats, live, I would not farm it; Nor will it yield to Norway, or the Pole, A ranker rate, should it be sold in fee.

Ham. Why, then the Polack never will defend it.

Cap. Yes, ’tis already garrison’d.

Ham. Two thousand souls, and twenty thousand ducats,
Will not debate the question of this straw: This is th’ imposthume of much wealth and peace, That inward breaks, and shows no cause without Why the man dies.—I humbly thank you, sir.

Cap. God be wi’ you, sir. [Exit Captain

Ros. Will ’t please you go, my lord?

Ham. I’ll be with you straight. Go a little before.

[Exit Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

How all occasions do inform against me, And spur my dull revenge! What is a man, If his chief good, and market of his time, Be but to sleep, and feed? a beast, no more. Sure, he, that made us with such large discourse, Looking before and after, gave us not That capability and godlike reason, To lust in us unwise’d. Now, whether it be Bestial oblivion, or some craven Surfeiture of thinking too precisely on th’ event,— A thought, which quarter’d, hath but one part wisdom, And ever three parts coward,—I do not know

For that which thou hast done,—must send thee hence
With fiery quickness: therefore, prepare thyself.
The bark is ready, and the wind at help,
Th’ associates tend, and every thing is bent
For England.

Ham. For England?

King. Ay, Hamlet.

Ham. Good.

Ham. So is it, if thou knew’st our purposes.

Ham. I see a cherub that sees them. 3—But, come, for England!—Farewell, dear mother.

Ham. Thy loving father, Hamlet.

Ham. My mother: father and mother is man and wife,
Men and wife is one flesh; and so, my mother.

Come, for England! 4 [Exit.

Ham. Follow him at foot; tempt him with speed aboard,
Delay not, I’ll have him hence to-night.

Away, for every thing is seal’d and done,
That else leans on th’ affair: pray you, make haste.
And, England, if my love thou hold’st at all,
(As my great power thereof may give thee sense,
Since yet thy cicatrice looks raw and red
After the Danish sword, and thy free awe
Pays homage to us) thou may’st not coldly see
Our sovereign process, which imports at full,
By letters conjuring 4 to that effect.
The present death of Hamlet! Do it, England;—
For like the hectic in my blood he rages,
And thou must cure me. Till I know’t is done,
How’er my hopes, my joys were never begun. [Exit

SCENE IV.—A Plain in Denmark.

Enter Fortinbras, and Forces, marching.

For. Go, captain; from me greet the Danish king.
Tell him, that by his license Fortinbras
Claims the conveyance of a premium march
Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous.
If that his majesty would aught with us,
We shall express our duty in his eye;
And let him know so.

Cap. I will do’t, my lord.

For. Go safely on.

Ham. The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras.

Ham. Goes it against the main of Poland, sir, or
For some frontier?

Cap. Truly to speak, and with no addition,
We go to gain a little patch of ground,
That hath in it no profit but the name.
To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it;
Nor will it yield to Norway, or the Pole,
A ranker rate, should it be sold in fee.

Ham. Why, then the Polack server will defend it.

Cap. Yes, ’tis already garrison’d.

Ham. Two thousand souls, and twenty thousand ducats,
Will not debate the question of this straw;
This is th’ imposthume of much wealth and peace,
That inward breaks, and shows no cause without.
Why the man dies.—I humbly thank you, sir.

Cap. God be wi’ you, sir. [Exit Captain Ros.

Ham. Will ’t please you go, my lord?

Ham. I’ll be with you straight. Go a little before.

[Exit Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Ham. How all occasions do inform against me,
And spur my dull revenge! What is a man,
If his chief good, and market of his time,
Be but to sleep, and feed? a beast, no more.
Sure, he, that made us with such large discourse,
Looking before and after, gave us not
That capability and godlike reason.
To dust in us un做的事. Now, whether it be Bestial oblivion, or some craven scruple
Of thinking too precisely on th’ event,—
A thought, which quarter’d, hath but one part wisdom,
And ever three parts coward,—I do not know

1 politis: in fol. 2 This and the next speech, are not in folio. 3 deed of thine: in folio. 4 him: in folio. 4 congruing: in quarto.

2 Craven: in quarto. 3 softly: in quarto. 1 The rest of the scene is not in the folio, or quarto, 1603.
Why yet I live to say, "This thing's to do;"
Sith I have cause, and will, and strength, and means,
To do 't. Examples, gross as earth, exhort me:—
Witness this array, of such mass and charge,
Led by a delicate and tender prince,
Whose spirit, with divine ambition puff'd,
Makes mouths at the invisible event;
Exposing what is mortal and unsure,
To all that fortune, death, and danger, dare.
Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great,
Is not to stir without great argument,
But greatly to find quarrel in a straw,
When honour's at the stake. How stand I, then,
That have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd,
Excitement of my reason and my blood,
And let all sleep? while, to my shame, I see
The imminent death of twenty thousand men,
That for a fantasy, and trick of fame,
Go to their graves like beds; fight for a plot
Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause;
Which is not tomb enough, and continent.
To hide the slain?—O! from this time forth,
My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth! [Exit.

SCENE V.—Elsinore. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Queen, Horatio, and a Gentleman.¹

Queen. I will not speak with her.

Gent. She is importunate; indeed, distract;
Her mood will needs be pitied.

Queen. What would she have?

Gent. She speaks much of her father; says, she hears
There's tricks 't the world; and hems, and beats her heart;
Spurns evansiously at straws; speaks things in doubt,
That carry but half sense. Her speech is nothing,
Yet the unshaped use of it doth move
The hearers to collection; they aim² at it,
And both the words up fit to their own thoughts;
Which, as her winks, and nods, and gestures yield them,
Indeed would make one think, there might be thought.
Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily.

Hor.³ 'T were good she were spoken with, for she may strew
Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds.

Queen. Let her come in.—[Exit Horatio.

To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is,
Each toy seems prologue to some great amiss;
So full of artless jealousy is guilt,
It spills itself in fearing to be split.

Re-enter Horatio, with Ophelia, distracted.⁴

Oph. Where is the beauteous majesty of Denmark?

Queen. How now, Ophelia?

Oph. How should I your true love know [Singing.
From another one?—
By his cockle hat and staff,
And his sandy shoon.

Queen. Alas, sweet lady! what imports this song?

He is dead and gone, lady,
[ Singing.
He is dead and gone;
At his head a green grass turf;
At his heels a stone.

O. ho!⁵

Queen. Nay, but Ophelia,—Pray you, mark

White his shroud as the mountain snow, [Singing

Enter King.

Queen. Alas! look here, my lord.

Oph. Lorded with sweet flowers;
Which bequeath to the grave did go,
With true-love showers.

King. How do you, pretty lady?

Oph. Well, God's bless you! They say, the owl was a baker's daughter.⁶ Lord! we know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your table! [Kneel. Conceit upon her father.

Oph. Pray you, let's have no words of this, but when they ask you what it means, say you this:

To-morrow is Saint Valentine's day,
All in the morning betime,
And I a maid at your window,
To be your Valentine:
Then, up he rose, and don'd his clothes,
And dipp'd the chamber door;
Let in the maid, that out a maid
Never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia!

Oph. Indeed, ha! without an oath, I'll make an end on 't:
By Gis and by Saint Charity,
Out, and sic for shame!
Young men will do't, if they come to 't;
By cock, they are to blame.
Quoth she, before you tumbled me,
You promised me to wed:
He answers.

So would I ha' done, by yonder sun,
An thou hadst not come to my bed.

King. How long hath she been thus?

Oph. I hope, all well. We must be patient, but I cannot choose but weep, to think, they would⁷ lay him i' the cold ground. My brother shall know of it, and so I thank you for your good counsel. —Come, my coach! Good night, ladies; good night, sweet ladies: good night, good night.

[Exit King. Follow her close; give her good watch, I pray you.

[Exit Horatio.

O! this is the poison of deep grief; it springs
All from her father's death.⁸ And now, behold,
O Gertrude, Gertrude!

When sorrows come, they come not single spies,
But in battalions. First, her father slain;
Next, your son gone; and he most violent author
Of his own just remove: the people muddied,
Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whisper;
For good Polonius' death, and we have done but greenly
In hugger-mugger to inter him; poor Ophelia,
Divided from herself; and her fair judgment,
Without which we are pictures, or mere beasts:
Last, and as much containing as all these,
Her brother is in secret come from France,
Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds,
And wants not buzzers to infect his ear
With pestilent speeches of his father's death;
Wherein necessity, of matter beggar'd,
Will nothing stick to make us armain
In ear and ear. O! my dear Gertrude, this,
Like to a murdering piece, in many places
Gives me superfluous death. [A noise within.

¹ This character does not appear in the folio, where all his speeches in the text are given to Horatio. ² yawn: in quartos. ³ Queen: in folio. ⁴ Not in f. e. ⁵ plowing on a lane, with her hair down, singing: in quartos, 1603. ⁶ green-grass turf: in f. e. ⁷ Not in folio. ⁸ ground: in quartos, after 1603. ⁹ Yield, or reward. ¹⁰ Our Saviour went into a baker's shop where the people were baking, and asked for bread: the mistress put a piece of dough in the oven for him, which was taken out by her daughter, and reduced to a small lump. It immediately began to swell, and the daughter to cry 'hough, hough, hough,' which owl-like noise probably induced our Saviour to change her into this: bid.'—An old tradition, quoted by D'Urfey. ¹¹ Should: in folio. ¹² The rest of this line is not in folio.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

QUEEN. Alack! what noise is this?

KING. Attend! Where are my Switzers? Let them guard the door. What is the matter?

ENTER A GENTLEMAN, IN HASTE.

GENT. Save yourself, my lord; The ocean, overpeering of his list, Eats not the flat with more impetuous haste, Than young Laertes, in a riotous head, O'erbears your officers! The rabble call him, king; And, as the world were now but to begin, Antiquity forgot, custom not known, The ratifiers and props of every word, They cry, 'Choose we; Laertes shall be king!' Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds, 'Laertes shall be king, Laertes king!'

QUEEN. How cheerfully on the false trail they cry. O! this is counter, you false Danish dogs.

KING. The doors are broke.

ENTERT Laertes, with his sword drawn; Dames following.

LAER. Where is this king?—Sirs, stand you all without.

DAN. No, let's come in.

LAER. I pray you, give me leave.

DAN. We will, we will. [They retire without the Door.]

LAER. I thank you: keep the door.—O thou vile king!

QUEEN. Calmly, good Laertes.

LAER. That drop of blood that's calm proclaims me bastard;

Cries, cuckold, to my father: brands the harlot Even here, between the chaste unsmirched brow Of my true mother.

KING. What is the cause, Laertes, That thy rebellion looks so giant-like?— Let him go, Gertrude; do not fear our person: There's such divinity doth hedge a king, That treason can but peep to what it would, Acts little of his will. —Tell me, Laertes, Why thou art thus incens'd.—Let him go, Gertrude.— Speak, man.

LAER. Where is my father?

KING. Dead.

QUEEN. But not by him.

KING. Let him demand his fill.

LAER. How came he dead? I'll not be juggled with. To hell, allegiance! vows, to the blackest devil! Conscience, and grace, to the profoundest pit! I dare damnation. To this point I stand, That both the worlds I give to negligence, Let come what comes, only I'll be reveng'd Most thoroughly for my father.

KING. Whose shall you stay?

LAER. My will, not all the world's:
And, for my means, I'll husband them so well, They shall go far with little.

KING. Good Laertes.

If you desire to know the certainty Of your dear father's death, is't writ in your revenge, That, sweetstake, you will draw both friend and foe, Winner and loser?

LAER. None but his enemies.

KING. Will you know them, then?

LAER. To his good friends thus wide I'll ope my arms; And, like the kind life-rendering pelican,* Repast them with my blood.

KING. Why, now you speak Like a good child, and a true gentleman. That I am guiltless of your father's death, And am most sensibly in grief for it, It shall as level to your judgment 'pear,' As day does to your eye.

LAER. How now! what noise is that?

RE-ENTER OPHELIA, STILL DISTRACTED.

O heat, dry up my brains! tears seven times salt, Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye!— By heaven, thy madness shall be paid by weight, Till our scale turns the beam. 'O rose of May! Dear maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia!— O heavens! 'tis possible, a young maid's wits Should be as mortal as an old man's life? Nature is fine in love; and, where 'tis fine, It sends some precious instance of itself After the thing it loves.

OPH. They bore him bare-face'd on their bier; [Sings. Hey nonny, nonny, hey nonny: And in his grave rain'd many a tear;— Fare you well, my dove!

LAER. Hadst thou thy wits, and didst persuade revenge, It could not move thus.

OPH. You must sing: Down a-down, an you call him a-down-a. O, how the wheel becomes it! It is the false steward, that stole his master's daughter.

LAER. This nothing 's more than matter.

OPH. There's rosemary, that 's for remembrance; I pray you, love, remember: and there is pansies; that 's for thoughts.

LAER. A document in madness; thoughts and remembrance fitted.

OPH. There 's fennel for you, and columbines — There 's rue for you; and here 's some for me; we may call it, herb of grace o' Sundays; — you may wear your rue with a difference. — There 's a daisy: I would give you some violets; but they withered all when my father died. — They say, he made a good end.

For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy,—[Sings.

LAER. Thought and affliction; passion, hell itself; She turns to favour, and to prettiness.

OPH. And will he not come again? [Sings. And will he not come again? No, no, he is dead; Gone to his° death-bed, He never will come again.

His beard was white as snow, All fuxen was his poll; He is gone, he is gone, And we cast away mean: God ha! mercy° on his soul?

And of all christian souls! I pray God.—God be wi' you! [Exit OPHELIA,° dancing distractedly.

LAER. Do you see this, O God?

KING. Laertes, I must commune with your grief, Or you deny me right. Go but apart, Make choice of whom your wisest friends you will, And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and me. If by direct, or by collateral hand They find you touch'd, we will our kingdom give, Our crown, our life, and all that we call ours, To you in satisfaction; but if not, Be you content to lend your patience to us,
And we shall jointly labour with your soul
To give it due content.

_Laer._ Let this be so:
His means of death, his obscure funeral,
No trophy, sword, nor hatchment, o'er his bones,
No noble rites, nor formal ostentation,
Cry to be heard, as 't were from heaven to earth,
That I must call 't in question.

_King._ So you shall;
And, where th' offence is, let the great axe fall.
I pray you, so with me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Another Room in the Same.

_Enter Horatio, and a Servant._

_Hor._ What are they, that would speak with me?

_Serv._ Sailors, sir: they say, they have letters for you.

_Hor._ Let them come in. [Exit Servant.

I do not know from what part of the world
I should be grieved, if not from lord Hamlet.

_Exit Sailors._

1 Sait. God bless you, sir.

_Hor._ Let him bless thee too.

1 Sait. He shall, sir, an't please him. There's a letter for you, sir: it comes from the ambassador that was bound for England, if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is.

_Hor._ [Reads.] "Horatio, when thou shalt have overlooked this, give these fellows some means to the king:
they have letters for him. Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very warlike appomntment gave us chase. Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compelled valour; and in the grapple I boarded them:
on the instant they got clear of our ship, so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy; but they knew what they did: I am to do a good turn for them. Let the king have the letters I have sent; and repair thou to me with as much haste as thou wouldest fly death. I have words to speak in thine ear will make thee dumb; yet are they much too light for the bower of the matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am. Rosencrantz and Guilden-stern hold their course for England: of them I have much to tell thee. Farewell;

He that thou knowest thine, Hamlet."

Come, I will give you way for these your letters;
And do't the speedier, that you may direct me
To him from whom you brought them. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—Another Room in the Same.

_Enter King and Laerte._

_King._ Now must your conscience my acquittance seal,
And you must put me in your heart for friend,
Still have you heard, and with a knowing ear;
That he, which hath your noble father slain,
Purs'd my life.

_Laer._ It well appears. But tell me,
Why you proceeded not against these feet,
So criminal and so capital in nature,
As by your safety, greatness, wisdom, all things else,
You mainly were stirr'd up.

_King._ O! for two special reasons,
Which may to you, perhaps, seem much unsinew'd,
But yet to me they are strong. The queen, his mother,
Lives almost by his looks; and for myself,
(My virtue, or my plague, be it either which)
She's so conjunctive to my life and soul,
That, as the star moves not but in his sphere,
I could not but by her. The other motive,

Why to a public count I might not go,
Is the great love the general gender bear him;
Who, dipp'd all his faults in their affection,
Work like the spring that turneth wo'd to stone,
Convert his gyves to graces; so that my arrows
Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them.

_Laer._ And so have I a noble father lost,
A sister driven into desperate terms;
Who was, if praises may go back again,
Sole challenger on mount of all the age.

For her perfections. But my revenge will come.

_King._ Break not your sleeps for that: you must not think,
That we are made of stuff so flat and dull,
That we can let our beard be shook with danger,
And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear more:
I loved your father, and we love ourself;
And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine,—

How now! what news?

_Enter a Messenger._

_Mess._ Letters, my lord, from Hamlet
This to your majesty: this to the queen.

_King._ From Hamlet! who brought them?

_Mess._ Sailors, my lord, they say; I saw them not:
They were given me by Clandio, he receiv'd them.

Of him that brought them.

_King._ Leave us. [Exit Messenger.

[Reads.]"High and mighty, you shall know, I am set naked on your kingdom. To-morrow shall I beg leave to see your kingly eyes: when I shall, first ask, your pardon thereunto, recount the occasions of my sudden and more strange return.

_Hamlet._ What should this mean? Are all the rest come back
Or is it some abuse, and no such thing?

_Laer._ Know you the hand?

_King._ 'Tis Hamlet's character. "Naked,"
And, in a postscript here, he says, "alone."
Can you advise me?

_Laer._ I'm lost in it, my lord. But let him come:
It warms the very sickness in my heart,
That I shall live and tell him to his teeth,
"Thus diddest thou."

_King._ If it be so. Laertes,
(As how should it be so? how otherwise?)
Will you be ruled by me?

_Laer._ Ay, my lord; So you will not o'er-rule me to a peace.

_King._ To thine own peace. If he be now return'd,—
As liking not his voyage, and that he means
No more to undertake it.—I will work him
To an exploit, now ripe in my device,
Under the which he shall not choose but fall;
And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe,
But even his mother shall uncharge the practice,
And call it accident.

_Laer._ My* lord, I will be rul'd;
The rather, if you could devise it so,
That I might be the organ.

_King._ It falls right.
You have been talk'd of since your travel much,
And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality
Wherein, they say, you shine: your sum of parts
Did not together pluck such envy from him,
As did that one; and that, in my regard,
Of the unworthiest siege.

* Not in folio. * And; in folio. * This line is not in folio. * These three words are so in folio. * So the undated quarto; checking at a in folio. * This speech and all that follows, to "graveness," is not in folio.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

SCENE VII.

Lear. What part is that, my lord?

King. A very ramb in the cap of youth,
Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes
The light and careless livery that it wears,
Than settled age his sables, and his weeds,
Importing health and graveness.—Two months since,
Here was a gentleman of Normandy
I have seen myself, and serv'd against the French,
And they can well on horseback; but this gallant
Had witchcraft in't; he grew unto his seat;
And to such wonders doing brought his horse,
As he had been incorp'd and demi-natur'd
With the brave beast. So far he topp'd my thought,
That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks,
Come short of what he did.

Lear. A Norman, was he not?

King. No place. Indeed, should murder sanctuarize;
Revenge should have no bounds. But, good Laertes,
Will you do this, keep close within your chamber.
Hamlet, return'd, shall know you are come home:
We'll put on those shall praise your excellence,
And set a double varnish on the fame
The Frenchman gave you: bring you in fine together,
And wager on your heads: he, being remiss,
Most generous, and free from all contriving,
Will not pursue the foils; so that with ease,
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose
A sword unblunted, and in a pass of practice
Require him for your father.

Lear. I will do't;
And, for that purpose, I'll anoint my sword.
I bought an unction of a mountebank,
So mortal, that but dip it in a knife in it,
Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare,
Collected from all simples that have virtue
Under the moon, can save the thing from death,
That is but scratch'd withal: I'll touch my point
With this contagion, that if I gill him slightly,
It may be death.

King. Let's farther think of this;
Weigh, what convenience, both of time and means,
May fit us to our shape. If this should fail,
And that our drift look through our bad performance,
'T were better not assay'd: therefore, this project
Should have a back, or second, that might hold,
If this should blast in proof. Soft!—let me see:—
We'll make a solemn wager on your cunning,—
I ha't;
When in your motion you are hot and dry.
(As make your bouts more violent to that end)
And that he calls for drink. I'll have prefer'd him
A chalice for the nonce, whereon but sipping.
If he by chance escape your venom'd stick, 14
Our purpose may hold there. But stay! what noise?

Enter Queen.

How now, sweet queen! The King.

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,
So fast they follow.—Your sister's drown'd, Laertes.

Lear. Drown'd! O, where?

Queen. There is a willow grows aslant the brook,
That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy stream;
There with fantastical garlands did she make
Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples,
That liberal shepherds give a gosser name,
But our cold maids do dead men's fingers call them.
There, on the pendent boughs her coronet was Clamouring to hang, an envy-silver broke,
When down her weedy trophies, and herself,
Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide,
And, mermaid-like, a while they bore her up;
Which time she chantant snatch'd of old lauds;
As one inappable of her own distress,
Or like a creature native and reduc'd
Unto that element: but long it could not be.
Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,
Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay
To muddy death.

Lear. Alas! then, is she drown'd?

Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Lear. Too much of water hast thou, poor Ophelia,
And therefore I forbid my tears: but yet
It is our trick; nature her custom holds,
Let shame say what it will: when these are gone,
The woman will be out.—Adieu, my lord:
I have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze,
But that this folly drowns it.

[Exit King.

Enter Queen. Let's follow, Gertrude.

How much I had to do to calm his rage!
Now fear I, this will give it start again;
Therefore, let's follow.

SCENE I.—A Church Yard.

Enter two Clowns, with Spades, &c

1 Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial, that\(^1\) willfully seeks her own salvation?

2 Clo. I tell thee, she is; and therefore make her grave straight: the crown'er hath set on her, and finds it Christian burial.

1 Clo. How can that be, unless she drowned herself in her own defence?

2 Clo. Why, 'tis found so.

1 Clo. It must be so offendando; it cannot be else. For here lies the point: if I drown myself unwittingly, it argues an act, and an act hath three branches: it is, to act, to do, and to perform: argal, she drowned herself willingly.

2 Clo. Nay, but hear you, goodman deliver.

1 Clo. Give me leave. Here lies the water; good: here stands the man; good: if the man go to this water, and drown himself, it is, will he, will he, he goes, mark you that; but if the water come to him, and drown him, he drowns not himself: argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shortens not his own life.

2 Clo. But is this law?

1 Clo. Ay, marry, is 't; crown'er's guest-law.

2 Clo. Will you ha' the truth on 't? If this had not been a gentlewoman, she should have been buried out of Christian burial.

1 Clo. Why, there thou say'st; and the more pity, that great folk shall have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves, more than their even\(^2\) Christian. Come, my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers; they hold up Adam's profession.

2 Clo. Was he a gentleman?

1 Clo. He was the first that ever bore arms.

2 Clo. Why, he had none.

1 Clo. What, art a heathen? How dost thou understand the Scripture? The Scripture says, Adam digged: could he dig without arms? I'll put another question to thee: if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself—

2 Clo. Go to.

1 Clo. What is he, that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

2 Clo. The gallows-maker; for that frame\(^3\) outliveth a thousand tenants.

1 Clo. I like thy wit well, in good faith: the gallows does well; but how does it well? it does well to those that do ill: now, thou dost ill to say the gallows is built stronger than the church: argal, the gallows may do well to thee. To't again; come.

2 Clo. Who builds stronger that a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter?

1 Clo. Ay, tell me that, and unyoke.

2 Clo. Marry, now I can tell.

1 Clo. To't.

[Exit Hamlet and Horatio, at a distance.]

1 Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it, for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating; and, when you are asked this question next, say, a grave-maker: the houses that he makes, last till doomsday. Go, get thee to your;\(^4\) fetch me a steep of liquor.

[Exit 2 Clown.]

ACT V.

1 Clown digs, and sings.

In youth, when I did love, did love,
Methought it was very sweet,
To contract, O! the time, for, ah! my behove
O! methought, there was nothing met

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business, that he sings at grave-making?

Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

Ham. 'Tis e'en so: the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense.

1 Clo. But age, with his steeping steps,
Hath claw'd me in his clutch,
And hath stripped me intill the land,
As if I had never been such.

[Throws up a skull.

Ham. That skull had a tongue in it, and could sing once: how the knave joules it to the ground, as if it were Cain's jaw-bone, that did the first murder! This might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now o'er-reaches,\(^5\) one that would circumvent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my lord.

Ham. Or of a courtier, which could say, "Good-morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord?"

This might be my lord such-a-one, that praised my lord such-a-one's horse, when he meant to beg it, might it not?

Hor. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Why, 'e'en so, and now my lady Worm's; chapless, and Knocked about the mazzard\(^6\) with a sexton's spade. Here's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see't. Did these bones cost no more the breeding, but to play at loggates\(^7\) with them? mine ache to think on it.

1 Clo. A pick-axe, and a spade, a spade, [Sings.]
For—and a shrouding sheet:
O! a pit of clay for to be made
For such a guest is meet.

[Throws up another skull.

Ham. There's another: why may not that be the skull of a lawyer? Where be his quidits now, his quillet, his case, his tenures, and his tricks? why does he suffer this rude\(^8\) knave now to knock him about the scence with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Humph! This fellow might be in's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries; is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? The very conveyances of his lands will hardly\(^9\) lie in this box, and must the inheritor himself have no more? ha?

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep-skins?

Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calf-skins too.

Ham. They are sheep, and calves, which seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow.—Whose grave's this, sir?

1 Clo. Mine, sir.—
O! a pit of clay for to be made
For such a guest is meet.

[Ham. I think it be thine, indeed; for thou hast in't

EDWIN BOOTH.
HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

1 Clo. You lie out on't, sir, and therefore it is not yours: for my part, I do not lie in 't, and yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lie in 't, to be in 't, and say it is thine: 't is for the dead, not for the quick; therefore, thou liest.

1 Clo. 'Tis a quick lie, sir; 't will away again, from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

1 Clo. For no man, sir.

Ham. What woman then?

1 Clo. For none, neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in 't?

1 Clo. One, that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is: we must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us. By the lord! Horatio, these three years I have taken note of it; the age is grown so paeked, that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he calls his kibbe. How long hast thou been a grave-maker?

1 Clo. Of all the days of 't I came to 't that day that our last king Hamlet overcame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long is that since?

1 Clo. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that. It was the very day that young Hamlet was born; he that is mad, and sent into England.

Ham. Ay, marry; why was he sent into England?

1 Clo. Why, because he was mad: he shall recover his wits there; or, if he do not, 't is no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

1 Clo. 'T will not be seen in him there; there, the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

1 Clo. Very strangely, they say.

Ham. How strangely?

1 Clo. Faith, 'tis with losing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

1 Clo. Why, here in Denmark. I have been sexton here, man, and boy, thirty years.

Ham. How long will a man lie in the earth ere he rot?

1 Clo. Faith, if he be not rotten before he die, (as we have many pecky corse now-a-days, that will scarce hold the laying in) he will last you some eight year, or nine year: a tener will last you nine year.

Ham. Why lie he more than another?

1 Clo. Why, sir, his hide is so tanned with his trade, that he will keep out water a great while, and your water is a sore decayer of your whoreson dead body. Here's a skull now; thus skull hath lain i' the earth three-and-twenty years.

Ham. Whose was it?

1 Clo. A whoreson mad fellow's it was: whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

1 Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! a' poured a dragon of Rhenish on my head once. This same skull, sir, this same skull, sir, was Yorick's skull, the king's jestor.

Ham. This?

1 Clo. E'en that.

Ham. Let me see. Alas, poor Yorick!—I knew him, Horatio: a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy: he hath borne me on his back a thousand times: and now, how abhorred in my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips, that I have kissed I know not how oft. Where be your gloves now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own grinning?—quite chap-fallen? Now, get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come; make her laugh at that. —Pr'ythee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that, my lord?

Ham. Dost thou think, Alexander looked o' this fashion i' the earth?

Hor. E'en so.

Ham. And smell so? pah! [Puts down the Skull]

Hor. E'en so, my lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return, Horatio. Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

Hor. 'T were to consider too curiously, to consider so.

Ham. No, faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it: as thus; Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returned into dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make loam, and why of that loam, whereof he was converted, might they not stop a beer-barrel? "Imperial" Caesar dead, and turn'd to clay, Might stop a hole to keep the wind away: O! that that earth, which kept the world in awe, Should patch a wall 't expel the winter's flaw. But soft! but soft! aside. —Here comes the king.

Enter Priests, &c. in Procession; The Corpse of Ophelia, Laertes and Mourners following; King, Queen, and their Trains.

The queen, the courtiers. Who is that they follow? And with such maimed rites? This doth betoken, The corpse they follow did with desperate hand Fordo its own life: 't was of some estate. Coueuh we awhile, and mark.

[Retiring on one side with Horatio]

Laer. What ceremony else?

Ham. A very noble youth: mark.

Laer. What ceremony else?

1 Priest. Her obsequies have been as far enlarg'd As we have warrant: her death was doubtful; And but that great command o'erwaies the order. She should in ground unsanctified have lodg'd, Till the last trumpet; for charitable prayers, Shards, flints, and pebbles, should be thrown on her, Yet here she is allow'd her virgin crants. Her maiden strewnments, and the bringing home Of bell and burial.

Laer. Must there no more be done?

1 Priest. No more be done.

We should profane the service of the dead, To sing sad requiem, and such rest to her As to peace-parted souls.

Laer. Lay her i' the earth; And from her fair and unpolluted flesh, May violets spring! —I tell thee, charluse priest, A ministering angel shall my sister be, When thou hast howling.

Ham. What! the fair Ophelia? Queen. Sweets to the sweet: farewell. [Strewing flowers]

I hop'd thou shouldst have been my Hamlet's wife.
An hour of quiet thereby shall we see; Till then, in patience our proceeding be.

SCENE II. — A Hall in the Castle.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. So much for this, sir; now shall you see the other.

You do remember all the circumstance.

Hor. Remember it, my lord!

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting, That would not let me sleep: methought, I lay Worse than the mutines12 in the bilboes.13 Rashly,—

And prais'd be rashness for it,—let us own, Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well, When our deep14 plots do fail,15 and that should teach16 us,

There's a divinity that shapes our ends, Rough-hew them how we will.

Hor. That is most certain.

Ham. Up from my cabin,

My sea-gown scarlet'd about me, in the dark

Grappled to find out them; had my desire;

Finger'd their packet; and, in fine, withdrew

To mine own room again: making so bold,

My fears forgetting manners, to unfold?17

Their grand commission: where I found, Horatio,

O royal knavery! an exact command,

Larded with many several sorts of reasons,

Importing Denmark's health, and England's too,

With, he! such bugs and gobins in my life,—

That on the supervise, no leisure bated,

Nor, to stay the grinding of the axe,

My head should be struck off.

Hor. Is't possible?

Ham. Here's the commission: read it at more leisure.

But wilt thou hear me? how I did proceed?

Hor. I beseech you.

Ham. Being thus benetted round with villains,—

Ere I could make a prologue to my brains,

They had begun the play,—I sat me down,

Devis'd a new commission; wrote it fair.

I once did hold it, as our statists do,

A baseness to write fair, and labour'd much

How to forget that learning; but, sir, now

It did me yeoman's service: Wilt thou know

The effect of what I wrote?

Hor. Ay, good my lord.

Ham. An earnest conjuration from the king,—

As England was his faithful tributary,

As love between them like the palm might flourish,

As peace should still her wheaten Garland wear,

And stand a common bower between their amities,

And many such like as's of great charge,

That on the view and know20 of these contents,

Without debatement farther, more or less,

He should the bearers put to sudden death,

Not shirving time allow'd.

Hor. How was this seal'd?

Ham. Why, even in that was heaven ordain'd.21

I had my father's signet in my purse,

Which was the model of that Danish seal;

Folded the writ up in form of the other;

Enscry'd it; gave't th' impression; plac'd it safely,

The changeling never known. Now, the next day

Was our sea-fight, and what to this was sequent

HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Thou know'st already.

Hor. So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go to't.

Ham. Why, man, they did make love to this employment.¹

They are not near my conscience; their defeat

Does by their own insinuation grow.

'Tis dangerous, when a baser nature comes

Between the pass and fell incensed points

Of mighty opposites.

Hor. Why, what a king is this!

Ham. Does it not, think thee, stand me now upon—

He that hath kill'd my kinsman, and whor'd my mother;—

Opp'd in between th' election and my hopes;

His angle for my proper life thrown out,

And with such cozenage—is 't not perfect conscience.

To quit him with his own ² and is 't not to be damn'd,

To let this canker of our nature come

In further evil?

Hor. It must be shortly known to him from England,

What is the issue of the business there.

Ham. It will be short: the interim is mine;

And a man's life no more than to say, one.

But I am very sorry, good Horatio,

That to Laertes I forgot myself,

For by the image of my cause I see

The portraiture of his: I'll court his favours:

But, sure, the bribery of his grief did put me

Into a towering passion.

Ham. Pease! who comes here?

[Enter OSRIC.]

Osr. Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.

Ham. I humbly thank you, sir.—Dost know this Hor?

No, my good lord. [water-fly?]

Ham. They state is the more gracious, for 'tis a vice to know him. He hath much land, and fertile: let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess: 'tis a enough ³; but, as I say, spacious in the domestic of dirt.

Osr. Sweet lord, if your lordship were at leisure, I should impart a thing to you from his majesty.

Ham. I will receive it, sir, with all diligence of spirit. Your bonnet to his right use; 'tis for the head.

Osr. I thank your lordship, 'tis very hot.

Ham. No, believe me, 'tis very cold: the wind is northerly.

Osr. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.

Ham. But yet, methinks, it is very sultry, and hot for my complexion.

Osr. Exceedingly, my lord; it is very sultry, as
't were.—I cannot tell how.—But, my lord, his majesty bade me signify to you, that he has laid a great wager on your head. Sir, this is the matter,—

Ham. I beseech you, remember—

Osr. Nay, in good faith; for mine ease, in good faith. Sir, here is newly come to court, Laertes: believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent difficulties, of very soft society, and great showing:
indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the contrivance of what part a gentleman would see.

Ham. Sir, his deference suffers no perdition in you;
though, I know, to divide him inventorially, would dizzy
the arithmetic of memory; and yet but raw² neither, in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of exclam't, I take him to be a soul of great article; and his infusion of such dealrth and rareness, as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror; and who else would trace him, his umbrage, nothing more

Osr. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of him.

Ham. The concomitance, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath?

Osr. Sir?

Hor. Is 't not possible to understand in another tongue? You will do 't, sir, really.

Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Osr. Of Laertes?

Hor. Her purse is empty already: all his golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir.

Osr. I know, you are not ignorant—

Ham. I would, you did, sir; yet, in faith, if you did it would not much approve me.—Well, sir.

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence
Laertes is.

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but to know a man well were to know himself.*

Osr. I mean, sir, for his weapon; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his mood he's un-followed.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons: but, well.

Osr. The king, sir, hath wagered with him six Barbary horses: against the which he has imployed; as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with then assigns, as girdle, hangings, and so. Three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the style, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Hor. I know, you must be edified by the margin, ere you had done.¹²

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more germane to the matter, if we could carry a cannon by our sides: I would, it might be hangers till then. But, on: six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal-conceited carriages: that's the French bet against the Danish. Why is this imployed, as you call it?

Osr. The king, sir, hath laid, sir, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you three hits: he hath laid on twelve, for nine, and that would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How, if I answer, no?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall: if it please his majesty, it is the breathing time of day with me.

let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold his purpose, I will win for him, if I can, if not. I will gain nothing but my shame, and the odd hits.

Osr. Shall I deliver you²² so?

Ham. To this effect sir; after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship. [Exit.

Ham. Yours, yours.—He does well to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for 's turn.¹⁴

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did comply with his dog before he sucked it. Thus has he (and many more of the same breed that I know, the drowsy age dotes on) only got the tune of the time, and outward habit of one another, a kind of yesty collection, which carries them through and through the most fond and winnowed opinions; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commandeth him to you by young Osric, who brings back to him, that you attend him in the hall: he sends to know, if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes; they follow the king’s pleasure. If his fitness speaks, mine is ready; now, or whenever, provided I be so able as now.

Lord. The king, and queen, and all are coming down. Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes, before you fall to play. Ham. She well instructs me.

[Exit Lord.

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so: since he went into France, I have been in continual practice; I shall win at the odds. Thou wouldst not think, how ill all is here about my heart; but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord.

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gain-giving, as would, perhaps, trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike any thing, obey it: I will forestall their repair hither, and say you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defy augury: there is a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be not to come, it is not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all. Since no man, of aught he leaves, knows, what is ‘t to leave betimes? Let be.

[Enter King, Queen, Laertes, Lords, Osrick, and Attendants with Foils, &c.]

King. Come, Hamlet; come, and take this hand from me.

[The King puts the hand of Laertes into that of Hamlet.]

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir: I’ve done you wrong; but pardon’t, as you are a gentleman. This presence knows, and you must needs have heard, how I am punish’d with some distraction. What I have done, that might your nature, honour, and exception, roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness. Was’t Hamlet wrong’d Laertes? Never, Hamlet: if Hamlet from himself be ta’en away, and when he’s not himself done wrong Laertes, then Hamlet does it not; Hamlet denies it. Who does it then? His madness. If’t be so, Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong’d; his madness is poor Hamlet’s enemy. Sir, in this audience,

Let my discoursing from a purpose’d evil
Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,
That I have shot mine arrow o’er the house,
And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature,
Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most
To my revenge: but in my terms of honour,
I stand aloof, and will no recompence,
Till by some elder masters, of known honour,
I have a voice and precedent of peace.

To keep my name ungored. But till that time,
I do receive your offer’d love like love,
And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely;
And will this brother’s wager frankly play,—
Give us the foils; come on. [Foils brought.]

Laer. Come; one for me.

Ham. I’ll be your foil, Laertes: in mine ignorance
Your skill shall, like a star in the darkest night,
Stick fiery off indeed.

Laer. You mock me, sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osric. [Cousin
Hamlet,
You know the wager?

Ham. Very well, my lord;
Your grace hath laid the odds o’ the weaker side.

King. I do not fear it: I have seen, as both:
But since he is better, we have therefore odds.

Laer. This is too heavy; let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well. These foils have all a length?
[They prepare to play.

Osri. Ay, my good lord.

King. Set me the stoope of wine upon that table;—
If Hamlet give the first or second hit,
Or quit in answer of the third exchange,
Let all the battlements their ordinance fire;
The king shall drink to Hamlet’s better breath:
And in the cup an union shall he throw,
Riche than that which four successive kings
In Denmark’s crown have worn. Give me the cup,
And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,
The trumpet to the cannonner without,
The cannons to the heavens, the heavens to earth,
“Now the king drinks to Hamlet!”—Come, begin:—
And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on, sir.

Laer. Come, my lord. [They play.

Ham. One.

Laer. No.

Ham. Judgment.

Osri. A hit, a very palpable hit.

Laer. Well:—again.

King. Stay; give me drink. Hamlet, this pearl is thine;
Here’s to thy health.—Give him the cup.

[Trumps sound; and Cannon shot off within.]

Ham. I’ll play this bout first; set it by awhile.—

Come.—Another hit; what say you? [They play.

Laer. A touch; a touch, I do confess.

King. Our son shall win.

He’s fat, and scant of breath.—

Here is a napkin, rub thy brows, my son. [The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good madam,—

King. Gertrude, do not drink.

Queen. I will, my lord: I pray you, pardon me.

[She drinks.

King. It is the poison’d cup! it is too late. [Aside.

Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by and by.

Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.

Laer. My lord, I’ll hit him now.

King. I do not think it.

Laer. And yet it is almost against my conscience.

[Aside.

Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes. You but dally:
I pray you, pass with your best violence.
I am afraid, you make a wanton of me.

Lear. Say you so? come on. [They play.

Osr. Nothing, neither way.

Lear. Have at you now.

[Laertes wounds Hamlet: then, in scuffling they change Rapiers, and Hamlet wounds Laertes.

King. Part them! they are incensed.

Ham. Nay, come again. [The Queen falls.

Osr. Look to the queen there, ho?

Hor. They bleed on both sides.—How is it, my lord?

Osr. How is’t, Laertes?

Lear. Why, as a woodcock to mine own springe, sir.

Ham. Iam justly kill’d with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the Queen?

King. She swoons to see them bleed.

Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink.—O my dear Hamlet!

The drink, the drink: I am poison’d.

[Hamlet drinks.][Dies.

Ham. O villainy!—How? let the door be lock’d:
Treacherous! seek it out.

[Laertes falls.]

Lear. It is here, Hamlet. Hamlet, thou art slain;
No medicine in the world can do thee good:
In thee there is not half an hour of life;
The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,
Unbated, and envenом’d. The foul practice
Hath turn’d itself on me: lo! here I lie,
Never to rise again. Thy mother’s poison’d;
I can no more. The king, the king’s to blame.

Ham. The point

Envenom’d too!—Then, venom, to thy work.

All. Treason! treason!

King. O! yet defend me, friends; I am but hurt.

Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murderous, damned Dane,
Drink off this potion:—is thy union here?

Follow my mother.

Lear. He is justly serv’d;
It is a poison temper’d by himself.
Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet:
Mine and my father’s death come not upon thee,
Nor thine on me! [Dies.

Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.—
I am dead, Horatio.—Wretched queen, adieu!—
You that look pale and tremble at this chance,
That are but mutes or audience to this act,
Had I but time, (as this fell sergeant, death,
Is strict in his arrest) O! I could tell you,
But let it be.—Horatio, I am dead;
Thou liv’st: report me and my cause aright,
To the unsatisfied.

Hor. Never believe it: [Taking the Cup.]
I am more an antique Roman than a Dane:
Here’s yet some liquor left.

Ham. As thou’rt a man,
Give me the cup: let go; by heaven I’ll have it.

[Struggling: Hamlet gets the Cup.]

O God!—Horatio, what a woundéd name,
Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me!
If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,
Absent thee from felicity awhile,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain.
To tell my story.—[March after off, and Shot within.}

What warlike noise is this?

Osr. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland,
To the ambassadors of England gives
This warlike volley.

Ham. O! I die, Horatio;
The potent poison quite o’er-crowns my spirit:
I cannot live to hear the news from England;
But I do prophesy the election light;
On Fortinbras: he has my dying voice;
So tell him, with the occurrences, more and less,
Which have solicited—The rest is silence. [Dies.

Hor. Now cracks a noble heart.—Good night, sweet prince:
And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!
Why does the drum come hither? [March within.

Enter Fortinbras, the English Ambassadors, and others.

Fort. Where is this sight?

Hor. What is it yo would see?

If aught of woe, or wonder, cease your search.

Fort. This quarry cries on havoc.—O proud death!
What feast is toward in thine eternal cell,
That thou so many princes at a shot
So bloodily hast struck?

1 Amb. The sight is dismal,
And our affairs from England come too late:
The ears are senseless that should give us hearing.
To tell him his commandment is fulfill’d,
That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are dead.
Where should we have our thanks?

Hor. Not from his mouth
Hadh’st ability of life to thank you:
He never gave commandment for their death.
But since, so jump upon this bloody question,
You from the Polack wars, and you from England,
Are here arriv’d, give order that these bodies
High on a stage be placed to the view;
And let me speak to the yet unknown world,
How these things came about; so shall you hear
Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts.
Of accidental judgments, casual slaughters,
Of deaths put on by cunning, and fore’d cause,
And, in this upshot, purposes mistook
Fall’n on the inventors’ heads. All this can I Truly deliver.

Fort. Let us haste to hear it,
And call the noblest to the audience.
For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune:
I have some rights of memory in this kingdom,
Which now to claim my vantage doth invite me.

Hor. Of that I shall have also cause to speak,
And from his mouth whose voice will draw on more.
But let this scene be presently perform’d,
Even while men’s minds are wild, lest more mischance
On plots and errors, happen.

Fort. Let four captains
Bear Hamlet, like a soldier, to the stage;
For he was likely, had he been put on,
To have prov’d most royally: and for his passage,
The soldiers’ music, and the rites of war,
Speak loud for him.—Take up the body.—Such a sight as this Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss.
Go, bid the soldiers shoot. [A dead March.

[Exeunt, marching; after which, a peal of Ordnance is shot off.}
KING LEAR

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

LEAR King of Britain, King of France, Duke of Burgundy, Duke of Cornwall, Duke of Albany, Earl of Kent, Earl of Gloster, Edgar, Son to Gloster, Edmund, Bastard Son to Gloster, Cur-æ, a Courtier, Oswald, Steward to Goneril.

Knights of Lear’s Train, Officers, Messengers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

SCENE, Britain.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A Room of State in King Lear’s Palace.

Enter Kent, Gloster, and Edmund.

Kent. I thought the king had more affected the duke of Albany, than Cornwall.

Glo. It did always seem so to us: but now, in the division of the kingdoms, it appears not which of the dukes he values most: for equalities are so weighed, that variety in either of either’s moiety.

Kent. Is not this your son, my lord?

Glo. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge; I have so often blushed to acknowledge him, that now I am brazed to it.

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glo. Sir, this young fellow’s mother could; whereupon she grew round-wombed, and had, indeed, sir, a son for her cradle ere she had a husband for her bed.

To you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.

Glo. But I have a son, sir, by order of law, some year elder than this, who yet is no dearer to me: though this knave came somewhat saucily into the world, before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair, there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged.—Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?

Edm. No, my lord.

Glo. My lord of Kent: remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship.

Kent. I must love you, and sue to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I shall study deserving.

Glo. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again.—The king is coming. [Sennet within.

Enter Lear, Cornwall, Albany, Goneril, Regan, Cordelia, and Attendants.

Lear. Attend the lords of France and Burgundy.

Glo. I shall, my liege. [Exeunt Gloster and Edmund.

Lear. Mean-time, we shall express our darker purpose.

Give me the map there.—Know, that we have divided.

In three, our kingdom: and it is our fast intent.

To shake all cares and business from our age, conferring them on younger strengths, while we unbend’d crawl toward death.—Our son of Cornwall, and you, our no less loving son of Albany, we have this hour a constant will to publish our daughters’ several dowers, that future strife may be prevented now. The princes, France and Burgundy,

Great rivals in our youngest daughter’s love,

Long in our court have made their amorous sojourn,

And here are to be answer’d.—Tell me, my daughters.

(Since now we will divest us, both of rule, interest of territory, cares of state)

Which of you, shall we say, doth love us most?

That we our largest bounty may extend where nature doth with merit challenge.—Goneril,

Our eldest-born, speak first.

Gon. I love you more than words can wield the matter;

Dearer than eye-sight, space, and liberty;

Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare;

No less than life, with grace, health, beauty, honour:

As much as child e’er lov’d, or father found;

A love that makes breath poor, and speech unable;

And all manner of so much I love you.

Cor. What shall Cordelia speak? Love, and be silent. [Aside

Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this,
With shadowy forests, and with champains rich’d,
With plentiful rivers and wide-skirted meads,
We make thee lady: to thine and Albany’s issue
Be this perpetual.—What says our second daughter,
Our dearest Regan, wife of Cornwall?—Speak."
Reg. I am made of that self metal as my sister,
And prize me at her worth. In my true heart
I find, she names my very deed of love;
Only she comes too short, that I profess
Myself an enemy to all other joys.
Which the most precious sphere 6 of sense possesses,
And find, I am alone felicitate
In your dear highness’s love.
Cor. Then, poor Cordelia! [Aside.

And yet not so: since, I am sure, my love’s
More plentiful than my tongue.
Lear. To thee, and thine, hereditary ever,
Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom;
No less in space, validity, and pleasure,
Than that conferr’d on Goneril.—Now, our joy,
Although our last, not least: to whose young love
The vines of France, and milk of Burgundy,
Strive to be interest’d: what can you say, to draw
A third more opulent than your sisters?—Speak.
Cor. Nothing, my lord.
Lear. Nothing?—Cor. Nothing.
Lear. Nothing will come of nothing: speak again.
Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave
My heart into my mouth: I love your majesty
According to my bond: nor more, nor less.
Lest you may mar your fortunes.
Cor. Good my lord,
You have begot me, bred me, lov’d me: I
Return those duties back as are right fit.
Obey you, love you, and most honour you.
Why have my sisters husbands, if they say,
They love you all? Haply, when I shall wed,
That lord, whose hand must take my plighted, shall carry
Half my love with him, half my care, and duty:
Sure, I shall never marry like my sisters,
To love my father all. 4
Lear. But does this with thy heart?
Cor. Ay, my good lord.
Lear. So young, and so untender?—Cor. So young, my lord, and true.
Lear. Let it be so: thy truth, then, be thy dover;
For, by the sacred radiance of the sun,
The mysteries of Hecate, and the night,
By all the operation of the orbs,
From whom we do exist, and cease to be,
Here I disclaim all my paternal care,
Propinquity and property of blood,
And as a stranger to my heart and me.
Hold thee from this for ever. The barbarous Scythian,
Or he that makes his generation messes
To gorge his appetite, shall to thy bosom
Be as well neighbour’d, pitied, and reliev’d,
As thou, my sometime daughter.
Kent. Good my liege,—Lear. Peace, Kent!
Come not between the dragon and his wrath.
I lov’d her most, and thought to set my rest
On her kind nursery.—Hence, and avoid my sight!—

[To Cordelia.
So be my grave my peace, as here I give
Her father’s heart from her!—Call France.—Who strik’s
Call Burgundy.—Cornwall, and Albany.
With my two daughters’ dowers digest the third:
Let pride, which she calls plainness, marry her.
I do invest you jointly with my power,
Pre-eminence, and all the large effects
That troop with majesty.—Ourself, by monthly course
With reservation of an hundred knights,
By you to be sustain’d, shall our abode
Make with you by due turns. Only, we still retain
The name, and all th’ additions to a king;
The sway, revenue, execution of the rest,
Beloved sons, be yours: which to confirm,
This coronet part between you. [Giving the Cross.
Kent. Royal Lear,
Whom I have ever honour’d as my king,
Lov’d as my father, as my master follow’d,
And as my patron 6 thought on in my prayers.—
Lear. The bow is bent and drawn, make from the shaft.
Kent. Let it fall rather, though the fork invade
The region of my heart: be Kent unmann’d,
When Lear is mad.—What wouldst thou do, old man?
Think’st thou, that duty shall have dread to speak,
When power to flattery bows? To plainness honour’s bound,
When majesty stoops to folly. Reverse thy doom18;
And in thy best consideration check
This hideous rashness: answer my life my judgment.
Thy youngest daughter does not love thee least;
Nor are those empty-hearted, whose low sound
Reverbs no hollowness.
Lear. Kent, on thy life, no more.
Kent. My life I never held but as a pawn
To wage against thine enemies; nor 14 fear to lose it,
Thy safety being the motive.
Lear. Out of my sight! Kent. See better, Lear; and let me still remain
The true blank of thine eye.
Lear. Now, by Apollo.—Kent. Now, by Apollo, king.
Thou swear’st thy gods in vain.
Lear. O, vassel! receivest[12
Aib. Corn. Dear sir, forbear. 13
Kent. Do;
Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow
Upon the foul disease. Revoke thy gift14;
Or, whilst I can vent clamour from my throat,
I’ll tell thee, thou dost evil.
Lear. Hear me, receivest! On thine allegiance hear me.
Since thou hast sought to make us break our vow,
(Which we durst never yet), and, with strain’d pride
To come betwixt our sentence and our power,
(Which nor our nature nor our place can bear)
Our potency made good, take thy reward.
Five days we allow thee for provision
To shield thee from diseases of the world,
And on the sixth to turn thy hated back
Upon our kingdom: if the seventh 16 day following,
Thy banish’d trunk be found in our dominions,
The moment is thy death. Away! By Jupiter,
This shall not be revok’d.

Kent. Fare thee well, king: since thus thou wilt appear,
Freedom lives hence, and banishment is here.—
The gods to their dear seat! take thee, maid,

[To Cordelia.]
That justly think'st, and hast most rightly said!—
And your large speeches may your deeds approve.

[To Regan and Goneril.]
That good effects may spring from words of love.—
Thus Kent, C. princes! bid you all adieu:
He'll shape his old course in a country new. [Exit.

Flourish. Re-enter GLOSTER, with FRANCE, BURGUNDY, and Attendants.

Glo. Here's France and Burgundy, my noble lord.

Lear. My lord of Burgundy,
We first address you, with whom this king
Hath rival'd for our daughter: what, in the least,
Will you require in present dower with her,
Or cease your quest of love?

Bur. Most royal majesty,
I crave no more than hath* your highness offer'd,
Nor will you tender less.

Lear. Right noble Burgundy.
When she was dear to us, we did hold her so;
But now her price is fall'n. Sir, there she stands:
If aught within that little seeming substance,
Or all of it, with our displeasure'd p'ce'd,
And nothing more, may fitly like your grace,
She's there, and she is yours.

Bur. I know no answer.
Lear. Will you, with those infirmities she owes,
Unfriend'd, new-adopted to our hate,
Dower'd* with our curse, and stranger'd with our oath,
Take her, or leave her?

Bur. Pardon me, royal sir;
Election makes not up on such conditions.

Lear. Then leave her, sir; for, by the power that made me,
I tell you all her wealth.—For you, great king,
[To France.]
I would not from your love make such a stray,
To match you where I hate: therefore, beseech you
T' avert your liking a more worthy way,
Than on a wretch whom nature is asham'd
Almost t' acknowledge hers.

France. This is most strange,
That she, that even but now was your blest object,
The argument of your praise, balm of your age,
Most* best, most* dearest, should in this trice of time
Commit a thing so monstrous, to dismantle
So many folds of favour. Sure, her offence
Must be of such unnatural degree,
That monsters it, or your fore-vouch'd affection
Fall'n into taint: which to believe of her,
Must be a truth that reason, without miracle,
Could never plant in me.

Cor. I yet beseech your majesty,
[If for I want that glib and oily art,
To speak and purpose not, since what I well intend,
I'll do before I speak] that you make known
It is no vicious blot, nor other foulness:
No unchaste* action, or dishonour'd stoop,*
That hath depriv'd me of your grace and favour;
But even for want of that for which I am richer,
A still-soliciting eye, and such a tongue
That I am glad I have not, though not to have it,
Hath lost me in your liking.

Lear. Better thou
Hadst not been born, than not to have pleas'd me better
France. Is it* but this? a tardiness in nature,
Which often leaves the history unspoke,
That it intends to do?—My lord of Burgundy;
What say you to the lady? * Love is not love,
When it is mingled with respects, that stand
Afoot from the entire point. Will you have her?
[Exit Cordelia.

She is herself a dowry."

Bur. Royal Lear,"
Give but that portion which yourself propose'd,
And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
Duchess of Burgundy.

Lear. Nothing: I have sworn; I am firm.
Bur. I am sorry, then, you have so lost a father,
That you must lose a husband.

Cor. Peace be with Burgundy:
Since that respects of fortune are his love,
I shall not be his wife.

France. Fairest Cordelia, that art most rich, being poor,
Most choice, forsaken, and most lov'd, despis'd,
Thee and thy virtues here I seize upon:
Be it lawful, I take up what's cast away.
Gode, gods! 't is strange, that from their cold'st neglect
My love should kindle to inflam'd respect.—
Thy.dowerless daughter, king, thrown to my chance,
Is queen of us, of ours, and our fair France:
Not all the dukes of waterish Burgundy
Shall* buy this unpriiz'd precious maid of me.—
Bid them farewell. Cordelia, though unkind:
Thou lostest here, a better where* to find.

Lear. Thou hast her, France: let her be thine, for we Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see
That face of hers again.—Therefore, be gone
Without our grace, our love, our benison.—
Come, noble Burgundy.

[Flourish. Exeunt Lear, Burgundy, Cornwall, Albany, Gloster, and Attendants.

France. Bid farewell to your sisters.

Cor. Ye jewels of our father, with wash'd eyes
Cordelia leaves you: I know you what you are;
And, like a sister, am most loath to call
Your faults as they are nam'd. Love well our
To your professed bosoms I commit him; [father:
But yet, alas! stood I within his grace,
I would prefer him to a better place.
So, farewell to you both.

Gon. Prescribe not us our duty.

Reg. Let your study
Be to content your lord, who hath receiv'd you
As fortune's aim: you have obedience seem'd,
And well are worth the want that you have wanted.

Cor. Time shall unfold what piqued cunning hides;
Who cover faults, at last shame them* derides.
Well may you prosper!

France. Come, my fair Cordelia.

[Gon. sister, it is not little I have to say of what most nearly appertain's to us both. I think, our father will hence to-night.

Reg. That's most certain, and with you; next month with us.

Gon. You see how full of changes his age is; the observation we have made of it hath not* been little.
He always loved our sister most, and with what poor judgment he hath now eased her off appears too grossly

Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age; yet he hath ever but slyly known himself.

Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath been but rash; then must we receive from his age, not alone the imperfections of long-engrafted condition, but, therewithal, the unruly waywardness that inflame and choleric years bring with them.

Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him, as this of Kent's banishment.

Gon. There is farther compliment of leave-taking between France and him. Pray you, let us hit together: if our father carry authority with such dispositions as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us.

Reg. We shall farther think of it.

Gon. We must do something, and i' the heat.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Earl of Gloster's Castle.

Enter EDMUND, the Bastard, with a Letter.

Edm. Thou, nature, art my goddess; to thy law My services are bound. Wherefore should I stand on the plague of custom, and permit The curiosity of nations to deprive me. For that I am some twelve or fourteen moon-shines Lag of a brother? Why bastard? wherefore base, When my dimensions are as well compact, My mind as generous, and my shape as true, As honest madam's issue? Why brand they us With base? with baseness? bastardy? base? base? Who in the busy stealth of nature take More composition and fierce quality. Than doth within a dull, stale, tired bed, Go to the creating a whole tribe of fops, Got 'tween asleep and wake?—Well then, Legitimate Edgar, I must have your land: Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund. As to the legitimate. Fine word,—legitimate! Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed, And my invention thrive, Edmund the base Shall top the legitimate. I grow: I prosper:—Now, gods, stand up for bastards! [Reads the Letter.

Enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Kent banish'd thus! And France in choler part'd! And the king gone to-night! subscrib'd his power! Confidn'd to exhibition! All this done Upon the gad!—Edmund? How now! what news? Edm. So please your lordship, none. [Hiding the Letter.

Glo. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter? Edm. I know no news, my lord. Glo. What paper were you reading? Edm. Nothing, my lord. Glo. No! What needed, then, that terrible despatch of it into your pocket? the quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself. Let's see: come; if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles. Edm. I beseech you, sir, pardon me: i', a letter from my brother, that I have not all o'er-read; and for so much as I have perused, I find it not fit for your perusal'. Glo. Give me the letter, sir. Edm. I shall offend, either to detain or give it. The contents, as in part I understand it, Are to blame.

Glo. Let's see, let's see.

Edm. I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay or taste of my virtue.

Glo. [Reads.] "This policy, and reverence of age, makes the world bitter to the best of our times; keeps our fortunes from us, till our oldness cannot relish them. I begin to find an idle and fond bondage in the oppression of aged tyranny, who sways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffered. Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep till I were waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your brother, Edgar."

Humph!—Conspiracy!—"Sleep till I waked him,—you should enjoy half his revenue."—My son Edgar! Had he a hand to write this? a heart and brain to breed it in?—When came this to you? Who brought it?

Edm. It was not brought, my lord; there's the cunning of it: I found it thrown in at the casement of my closet.

Glo. You know the character to be your brother's? Edm. If the matter were good, my lord, I durst swear it were his; but, in respect of that, I would fain think it were not.

Glo. It is his.

Edm. It is his hand, my lord; but, I hope, his heart is not in the contents.

Glo. Hath he never heretofore sounded you in this business?

Edm. Never, my lord; but I have often heard him maintain it to be fit, that sons at perfect age, and fathers declined, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue.

Glo. O villain, villain!—His very opinion in the letter!—Abhorred villain! Unnatural, detested, brutal villain! worse than brutal!—Go, sirrah, seek him; I'll apprehend him. Abominable villain!—Where is he?

Edm. I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother, till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you shall run a certain course: where, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honour, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him, that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other pretence of danger.

Glo. Think you so?

Edm. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an articular assurance have your satisfaction: and that without any farther delay than this evening.

Glo. He cannot be such a waster.

Edm. Nor is not, sure.

Glo. To his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him.—Heaven and earth!—Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you: frame the business after your own wisdom. I would unstate myself to be in a due resolution.

Edm. I will seek him, sir, presently, convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal.

Glo. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us: though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the segment effects. Love cools; friendship falls off, brothers divide: in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord: in palaces, treason, and the bond cracked between son and father. Thin villain of mine comes under the prediction; there’s son against father: the king falls from bias of nature; there’s father against child. We have seen the best of our time: machinations, holiness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us diisquitely to our graves!—Find out this villain, Edmund: it shall lose thee nothing: do it carefully. And the noble and true-hearted Kent banished! his oddeuse, honesty.—T’s strange.

Edm. This is the excellent foppery of the world, that, when we are sick in fortune, (often the surfeit of our own behaviour) we make guilty of our disasters, the sun, the moon, and the stars: as if we were villains by necessity: fools, by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and treachers, by spherical predomiance; drunkards, liars, and adulterers, by an enforced obedience of planetary influence, and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on. An admirable evasion of whor-master man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of stars. My father compounded with my mother under the dragon’s tail, and my nativity was under ursa major; so that, it follows, I am rough and lecherous.—Tut! I should have been that I am, had the maldenliest star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing.

Enter Edgar.

Edgar. and pat he comes, like the catastrophe of the old comedy: my eye is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o’ Bedlam.—O! these eclipses do portend these divisions. Fa, sa, la, mi.

Edg. How now! brother Edmund! What serious contemplation are you in?

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

Edg. Do you busily yourself with that?

Edm. I promise you, the effects he writes of succeed unhappily: as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death, dearness, dissolution of ancient amities; divisions in state; menaces and maladies against king and nobles; needless dissidences, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts, mutiptal breaches, and I know not what.

Edg. How long have you been a seckary astronomical?

Edm. Come, come; when saw you my father last?

Edg. The night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him, by word, or countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Edm. Bethink yourself, wherein you may have offended him: and at my entrance forbear his presence; till some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure, which at this instant so rageth in him, that with the mischief of your person it would severely allay.

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That’s my fear. I pray you, have a continent torbereace, till the speed of his rage go slower; and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will tily bring you to hear my lord speak. Pray you, go: there’s my key. If you do stir abroad, go armed.

Edg. Armed, brother?

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best; I am no honest man, if there be any good meaning towards you: I have told you what I have seen and heard, but faintly; nothing like the image and horror of it. Pray you, away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do serve you in this business.—

SCENE III.—A Room in the Duke of Albay’s Palace.

Enter Goneral, and Oswald her Steward.

Gon. Did my father strike my gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Osw. Ay, madam.

Gon. By day and night he wrongs me: every hour he flashes into one gross crime or other. That sets us all at odd: I’ll not endure it. His knights grow riotous, and himself upbraids us on every trifle.—When he returns from hunting, I will not speak with him; say, I am sick: If you come slack of former services, You shall do well: the fault of it I’ll answer.

Osw. He’s coming, madam; I hear him.

Gon. Put on what weary negligence you please. You and your fellows: I had it come to question: If he disstate it, let him to my sister, Whose mind and mine. I know, in that are one, Not to be over-rul’d. Idle old man. That still would manage those authorities, That he hath given away!—Now, by my life, Old fools are babes again: and must be us’d With checks as flatteries: when they are seen abus’d Remember what I have said.

Osw. Well, madam.

Gon. And let his knights have colder looks among you What grows of it, no matter: advise your fellows so: I would breed from hence occasions, and I shall. That I may speak.—I’ll write straight to my sister, To hold my course.—Prepare for dinner. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Hall in the Same.

Enter Kent, disguised.

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow, That can my speech diffuse, my good intent May carry through itself to that full issue. For which I raz’d my likenesses. Now, banish’d Kent, If thou canst serve where thou dost stand confin’d, (So may it come!) thy master, whom thou lov’st, Shall find thee full of labours. [Horns within. Enter Lear Knights, and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner: go, get it ready. [Exit an Attendant.] How now! what art thou?

Kent. A man, sir.

Lear. What dost thou profess? What wouldst thou with us?

Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem: to serve him truly that will put me in trust: to love him that is honest; to converse with him that is wise, and says little: to fear judgment; to fight when I cannot choose, and to eat no fish.

Lear. What art thou?
Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the king.
Lear. If thou be as poor for a subject, as he's for a king, thou art poor enough. What wouldst thou?
Kent. Service.
Lear. Whom wouldst thou serve?
Kent. You.
Lear. Dost thou know me, fellow?
Kent. No, sir; but you have that in your countenance which I would fain call master.
Lear. What's that?
Kent. Authority.
Lear. What services canst thou do?
Kent. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly: that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in; and the best of me is diligence.
Lear. How old art thou?
Kent. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for singing: nor so old, to dote on her for anything: I have years on my back forty-eight.
Lear. Follow me; thou shalt serve me: if I like thee, no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet.—Dinner, ho! dinner! Where's my knife? my fool? Go you, and call my fool hither.

Enter Oswald.
You, you sirrah, where's my daughter?
Osw. So please you,—

[Exit.]
Lear. What says the fellow there? Call the clogpole back. [Exit Knight.]—Where's my fool, ho?—I think the world's asleep.—[Re-enter Knight.] How now, where's that mongrel?
Knight. He says, my lord, your daughter is not well.
Lear. Why came not the slave back to me, when I called him?
Knight. Sir, he answered me in the roundest manner, he would not.
Lear. He would not! Knight. My lord, I know not what the matter is; but to my judgment, your highness is not entertained with that ceremonious affection as you were wont: there's a great abatement of kindness appears, as well in the general dependants, as in the duke himself also, and your daughter.
Lear. Ha! sayest thou so?
Knight. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken; for my duty cannot be silent, when I think your highness wronged.
Lear. Thou but rememberest me of mine own conception. I have perceived a most faint neglect of late; which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity, than as a very pretence and purpose of unkindness: I will look farther into it.—But where's my fool? I have not seen him this two days.
Knight. Since my young lady's going into France, sir, the fool hath much plied away.
Lear. No more of that: I have noted it well.—Go you, and tell my daughter I would speak with her.—Go you, call hither my fool.—

[Re-enter Oswald.]

O! you sir, you sir, come you hither. Who am I, sir?
Osw. My lady's father.
Lear. My lady's father? my lord's knife? you whoreson dog! you slave! you cur! Osw. I am none of these, my lord: I beseech your pardon.
Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal?
[Striking him.]
Osw. I'll not be stricken, my lord.
Kent. Not tripped neither, you base foot-ball player [Tripping up his heels.
Lear. I thank thee, follow; thou servest me, and I'll love thee.
Lear. Come, sir, arise; away! I'll teach you differences: away, away! If you will measure your lubber's length again, tarry; but away! Go to: have you wisdom? so. [Pushes Oswald out.
Lear. Now, my friendly knave, I thank thee: there's earnest in thy service.

[Giving Kent money.

Enter Fool.
Fool. Let me hire him too:—here's my coxcomb. [Giving Kent his Cup.
Lear. How now, my pretty knave! how dost thou? Fool. Sirrah, you were best take my coxcomb.
Lear. Why, my boy? Fool. Why? For taking one's part that's out of favour.—Nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'st catch cold shortly; there, take my coxcomb. Why, this fellow has banished two on's daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will: if thou follow him, thou must needs wear my coxcomb.—How now, nunce! Would I had two coxcombs, and two daughters!
Lear. Why, my boy?
Fool. If I gave them all my living, I'd keep my coxcomb myself. There's mine; beg another of thy daughters.
Lear. Take heed, sirrah; the whip.
Fool. Truth's a dog must to kennel: he must be whippet out, when the lady brach' may stand by the fire and stink.
Lear. A pestilent gall to me.
Fool. Sirrah, I'll teach thee a speech.
Lear. Do.
Fool. Mark it, nunce.—
Have more than thou showest,
Speak less than thou knowest,
Lend less than thou owest,
Ride more than thou goest,
Learn more than thou trav'est,
Set less than thou travest;
Leave thy drink and thy whore,
And keep in-a-door,
And thou shalt have more
Than two tens to a score.
Lear. This is nothing, fool.
Fool. Then, 'tis like the breath of an unfeast'd lawyer: you gave me nothing for't. Can you make no use of nothing, nunce?
Lear. Why, no boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.
Fool. Pr'ythee, tell him, so much the rest of his largess comes to: he will not believe a fool.
Lear. A bitter fool!
Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet one?
Lear. No lad; teach me.
Fool. That lord, that counselled thee
To give away thy land,
Come place him here by me;
Do thou for him stand:
The sweet and bitter fool
Will presently appear;
The one in motley here,
The other found out there.
Lear. Dost thou call me fool, boy?
KING

ACT I.

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away, that thou wast born with.

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, faith; lords and great men will not let me: if I had a monopoly out, they would have part on't, and loads too: they will not let me have all fool to myself, they'll be snatching. Give me an egg, nuncle, and I'll give thee two eorns.

Lear. What two eorns shall they be?

Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg i' the middle, and eat up the meat, the two eorns of the egg. When thou eovest thy eorn i' the middle, and gavest away both parts, thou best thine ass on thy back over the dirt: thou hadst little wit in thy bald eorn, when thou gavest thy golden one away. If I speak like myself in this, let him be whipped that first finds it so.

Fools had never less grace1 in a year; [Singing, For wise men are grown too foolish; And well may fear their wits to wear, Their manners are so askish.]

Lear. When were you wont to be so full of songs, sirrah?

Fool. I have used it, nuncle, ever since thou madest thy daughters thy mothers: for, when thou gavest them the rod and put'st down thine own breeches, Then they for sudden joy did weep, [Singing, And I for sorrow sung, That such a king should play bo-peep, And go the fools along.]

Prythee, nuncle, keep a school-master that can teach thy fool to lie: I would fain learn to lie.

Lear. An you lie, sirrah, we'll have you whipped. Fool. I marvel what kin thou and thy daughters are: they'll have me whipped for speaking true, thou'lt have me whipped for lying; and sometimes I am whipped for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind o' thing than a fool; and yet I would not be thee, nuncle: thou hast pared thy wit o' both sides, and left nothing i' the middle. Here comes one o' the parings.

Enter Goneril.

Lear. How now, daughter! what makes that frontlet on?

Methinks, you are too much of late i' the brown.

Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow, when thou hadst no need to care for her crowning; now thou art an O without a figure. I am better than thou art now: I am a fool; thou art nothing. —Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue! so your face [To Gons.] bids me, though you say nothing. Mum, mum:

He that keeps nor crust nor erum. [Singing, Weary of all, shall want some.]

That 's a shepherd peascod.

Gon. Not only, sir, this your all-licens'd fool, But other of your insolent retinue Do hourly carp and quarrel; breaking forth In rank, and not to be endured. Sir, I had thought, by making this well known unto you, To have found a safe redress, but now grow fearful, By what yourself too late have spoken and done, That you protect this course, and put it on, By your allowances; which if you should, the fault Would not scape censure, nor the redresses sleep, Which, in the tender of a wholesome weal, Might in their working do you that offence, Which else were shame, that then necessity Will call disorder proceeding.

Fool. For you know, nuncle, The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long, That it had its head bit off by its young. So, out went the candle, and we were left darkling. Lear. Are you our daughter?

Gon. I would, you would make use of your good wisdom,

Whereof I know you are fraught, and put away These dispositions, which of late transform you From what you right apparel: Fool. May not an ass know when the cart draws the horse? —Whoop, Jug! I love thee.

Lear. Does any here know me? —Why this is not Lear: does Lear walk thus? speak thus? Where are his eyes? Either his notion weakens, or his disceriments are lathegirded. —Sleeping or waking? —Ha! sure 't is not so. —Who is it that can tell me who I am? —Lear's shadow? I would learn that; for by the marks of sovereignty, knowledge, and reason, I should be false persuaded I had daughters.

Fool. Which they will make an obedient father. Lear. Your name, fair gentilwoman?

Gon. This admiration, sir, is much o' the favour Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you To understand my purposes aright, As you are old and reverend, should be wise. Here do you keep a hundred knights and squires; Men so disorder'd, so debauch'd and bold. That this our court, infected with their manners, Shows like a riotous inn: epicurism and lust Make it more like a tavern, or a brothel, Than a grae'd2 palace. The shame itself doth speak For instant remedy: be, then, desir'd By her, that else will take the thing she begs, A little to dismount your train; And the remainder, that shall still depend, To be such men as may besort your age, Which know themselves and you.

Lear. Darkness and devils! —Saddle my horses: call my train together. —Degenerate bastard! I'll not trouble thee: Yet have I left a daughter.

Gon. You strike my people; and your disorder'd rabble Make servants of their betters.

Enter Albany.

Lear. Woe, that so late repent's, —O, sir! [To Ab.] are you come? Is it your will? —Speak, sir. —Prepare my horses! —Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend, More hideous, when thou show'st thee in a child, Than the sea-monster! —Pray, sir, be patient.11 Lear. Detested kite! thou liest: [To Goneril.] My train are men of choice and rarest parts, That all particulars of duty know, And in the most exact regard support The worship of their name. —O, most small fault! How ugly didst thou in Cordelia show, Which, like an engine, wrenched'd my frame of nature From the fix'd place, drew from my heart all love, And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear! Beat at this gate, that let thy folly in, [Striking his head And thy deare judgment out! —Go, go, my people.]

Alb. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant Of what hath mov'd you.12 Lear. It may be so, my lord.

KING LEAR.

SCENE VII

KING.

Hear, nature, hear! dear goddess, hear!
Suspend thy purpose, if thou dids intend
To make this creature fruitful!
Into her womb convey sterility!
Dry up in her the organs of increase;
And from her derogate body never spring
A babe to I honour her! If she must teen,
Create her child of spleen; that it may live,
And be a thwart disunited torment to her!
Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth;
With eadent tears fret channels in her cheeks;
Turn all her mother's pains, and benefits,
To laughter and contempt; that she may feel
How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is
To have a thankless child!—Away! away!  [Exit.

Alb. Now, gods that we adore, wherefore comes this?

Gon. Never afflict yourself to know the cause?
But let his disposition have that scope
That dotage gives it.

Re-enter Lear.

Lear. What! fifty of my followers, at a clap,
Within a fortnight?

Alb. What's the matter, sir?

Lear. I'll tell thee.—Life and death! [To Goneril.

I am ashamed,
That thou hast power to shake my manhood thus:
That these hot tears, which break from me for force,
Should make thee worth them. Biasts and fogs upon thee!

Th' untended woundings of a father's curse
Pierce every sense about thee!—Old fond eyes,
Beweep this cause again. I'll pluck you out,
And cast you, with the waters that you lose,
To temper clay.—Ha!

Let it be so.—I have another daughter,
Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable;
When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails
She'll flay thy wofull visage. Thou shalt find,
That I'll resume the shape, which thou dost think
I have cast off for ever.

[Exeunt Lear in fury, Kent, and Attendants.

Gon. Do you mark that, my lord?

Alb. I cannot be so partial, Goneril,
To the great love I bear you.—

Gon. Pray you, content.—What, Oswald, ho!
You, sir, more knave than fool, after your master.

[Foof.

Nuncle Lear, nuncle Lear! tarry, and take the fool with thee.

A fox, when one has caught her,
And such a daughter,
Should sure to the slaughter,
If my cap would buy a halter;
So the fool follows after.

[Exit.

Gon. This man hath had good counsel.—A hundred knights!

'T is politic, and safe, to let him keep
At point a hundred knights: yes, that on every dream,
Each ban, each fancy, each complaint, dislike,
He may enguard his dotage with their powers.
And hold our lives in mercy.—Oswald, I say!—

Alb. Well, you may fear too far.

Gon. Safer than trust too far.

Let me still take away the harms I fear,
Not fear still to be taken: I know his heart.
What he hath uttered I have writ my sister;
If she sustain him and his hundred knights,
When I have show'd th' unfitness,—how now, Old Oswalld

Re-enter Oswalld.

What, have you writ that letter to my sister?

Osw. Ay, madam.

Gon. Take you some company, and away to horse:
Inform her full of my particular fear;
And thereto add such reasons of your own,
As may compact it more. Get you gone,
And hasten your return. [Exit Oswalld.] No, no, my lord
This milky gentleness, and course of yours,
Though I condemn it not, yet, under pardon,
You are much more attack'd for want of wisdom,
Than prais'd for harmful mildness.

Alb. How far your eyes may pierce, I cannot tell.

Striving to better, oft we mar what's well.

[Exit.

SCENE V.—Court before the Same.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Lear. Go you before to Gloucester with these letters.
Acquaint my daughter no farther with any thing you know, than comes from her demand out of the letter.
If your diligence be not speedy, I shall be there before you.

Kent. I will not sleep, my lord, till I have delivered your letter.

[Lear. Fool. If a man's brains were in 's heels, were 't not in danger of kibes?

Lear. Ay, boy.

Fool. Then, I pray thee, be merry; thy wit shall not go slip-shod.

Lear. Ha, ha, ha!

Fool. Shalt see, thy other daughter will use thee kindly; for though she's as like this, as a crab is like an apple, yet I can tell what! I can tell.

Lear. What canst tell, boy?

Fool. She will toast us like this, as a crabs does to a crab. Canst thou tell why one's nose stands i' the middle on 's face?

Lear. No.

Fool. Why, to keep one's eyes of either side's nose; that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong—

Fool. Canst tell how an oyster makes his shell?

Lear. No.

Fool. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a snail has a house.

Lear. Why?

Fool. Why, to put his head in; not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his horns without a case.

Lear. I will forget my nature.—So kind a father!—
Be my horses ready?

Fool. Thy asses are gone about 'em. The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight?

Fool. Yes, indeed. Thou wouldst make a good fool.

Lear. To take it again perfors!—Monster ingratitude!

Fool. If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I d have thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Lear. How's that?

Fool. Thou shouldst not have been old before thou hadst been wise.

Lear. O, let me not be mad. Not mad, sweet heaven!
Keep me in temper: I would not be mad!—

ACT II.

CENE I.—A Court within the Castle of the Earl of Gloucester.

Enter Edmund and Curan. Meeting.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.

Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father, and given him notice, that the duke of Cornwall, and Regan his duchess, will be here with him to-night.

Edm. How comes that?

Cur. Nay, I know not. You have heard of the news abroad: I mean, the whispered ones, for they are yet but ear-bussing arguments.

Edm. Not I: pray you, what are they?

Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars toward, twixt the dukes of Cornwall and Albany?

Edm. Not a word.

Cur. You may do, then, in time. Fare you well, sir. [Exit.

Edm. The duke be here to-night? The better! Best!

This weaves itself perforce into my business.

My father hath set guard to take my brother;
And I have one thing, of a queasy question,
Which I must act.—Briefness, and fortune, work!—
Brother, a word;—descend;—brother, I say!

Enter Edg.

My father watches.—O sir! fly this place;
Intelligence is given where you are hid:—
You have now the good advantage of the night.—
Have you not spoken 'gainst the duke of Cornwall?
He's coming hither; now, if the night, in haste,
And Regan with him: have you nothing said
Upon his party 'gainst the duke of Albany?

Advise yourself.

Edg. I am sure on 't, not a word.

Edm. I hear my father coming.—Pardon me;
In cunning, I must draw my sword upon you:
Draw: seem to defend yourself. Now quit you well.

Yield.—come before my father.—Light, ho! here I—
Fly, brother;—Torches! torches!—So, farewell.

[Exit Edg.

Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion

[Wounds his arm. (Wounds his arm.

Of my more fierce endeavour: I have seen drunkards
Do more than this in sport.—Father! father!
Stop, stop! No help?

Enter Gloucester, and Servants with Torches.

Glo. Now, Edmund, where's the villain?

Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out,
Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon
To stand auspicious mistress.

Glo. But where is he?

Edm. Look, sir, I bleed.

Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund?

Edm. Fled this way, sir. When by no means he could—

Glo. Pursue him, ho!—Go after. [Exit Serv.] By no means, what?—

---Edm. Persuade me to the murder of your lordship.

But that I told him, the revenging gods
'Gainst parricides did all their thunders bend;
Spoke, with how manifold and strong a bond
The child was bound to the father;—sir, in fine
Seeing how loathly opposite I stood
To his unnatural purpose, in fell motion,
With his prepared sword he charges home
My unprovided body, lance'd mine arm.

But whether he saw my best alarm'd spirits,
Bold in the quarrel's right, rood't to th' encounter
Or whether gasted by the noise I made,

Full suddenly he fled.

Glo. Let him fly far;
Not in this land shall he remain uncaught;
And found, dispatch'd. —The noble duke my master,
My worthy arch'd and patron, comes to-night;

By his authority I will proclaim it,
That he, which finds him, shall deserve our thanks,
Bringing the murderous coward to the stake;

He, that conceals him, death.

Edm. When I dissuaded him from his intent,
And found him pight to do it, with curst speech
I threaten'd to discover him: he replied,

Thou unpossessing bastard! dost thou think,
If I would stand against thee, would the repos't
Of any trust, virtue, or worth, in thee
Make thy words faith'd? No: what I should deny,
(As this I would; although thou didst produce
My very character) I'd turn it all
To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practice:
And thou must make a dullard of the world,
If they not thought the profits of my death
Were very pregnant and potential spurs
To make thee seek it.

Glo. —Strong and fast'd villain! Would he deny his letter?—I never got him.

[Enter Cornwall within.

Hark! the duke's trumpets. I know not why he comes.—
All ports I'll bar: the villain shall not escape:

The duke must grant me that: besides, his picture
I will send far and near, that all the kingdom
May have due note of him; and of my land,
Loyal and natural boy, I'll work the means
To make thee capable.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, and Attendants.

Corn. How now, my noble friend! since I came hither,

(Which I can call but now) I have heard strange news.

Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short,
Which can pursue thi' offender. How dest, my lord?

Glo. O, madam! my old heart is crack'd, it's crack'd
Reg. What! did my father's godson seek your life?
He whom my father nam'd? your heir; thy Edgar?

Glo. O, lady, lady! shame would have it hid.

Reg. Was ho' companion with the riuotous knights
That tend upon my father? 1

SCENE II.—Before GLOSTER'S Castle.

Ose. Good dawning to thee, friend: art of this house?

KENT. Ay.

Ose. Where may we set our horses?

KENT. I' the mire.

Ose. Pr'ythee, if thou love me, tell me.

KENT. I love thee not.

Ose. Why, then I care not for thee.

KENT. If I had thee in Finsbury pinfold, I would make thee care for me.

Ose. Why dost thou use me thus? I know thee not.

KENT. Fellow, I know thee.

Ose. What dost thou know me for?

KENT. A knave, a rascal, an eater of broken meats: a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundredspound, filthy, worsted-stocking knave; a lily-livered, action-taking knave, a whoreson, glass-gazing, super-serviceable, finical rogue; one-trunk-inheriting slave: one that wouldst be a bawd, in way of good service, and art nothing but the composition of a knave, beggar, coward, pandar, and the son and heir of a mongrel bitch: one whom I will beat into clamorous whining, if thou dostest the least syllable of thy addition.

Ose. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one, that is neither known of thee, nor knows thee.

KENT. What a brazen-faced varlet art thou, to deny thou knowest me. Is it two days since I tripped up thy heels, and beat thee, before the king? Draw, you rogue; for, though it be night, yet the moon shines: I'll make a sop of thee. [Drawing his Sword.] Draw, you whoreson cullionly barber-monger, draw.

Ose. Away! I have nothing to do with thee.

KENT. Draw, you rascal: you come with letters against the king, and take Vanity, the puppet's part, against the royalty of her father. Draw, you rogue, or I'll so carbonado your shanks—draw, you rascal, come your ways.

Ose. Help, ho! murder! help!

KENT. Strike, you slave: stand, rogue, stand; you next slave, strike. [Beating him.]
Kent. His countenance likes me not.
Corn. No more, perchance, does mine, nor his, nor hers.
Kent. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain:
I have seen better faces in my time,
Than stand on any shoulders that I see
Before me at this instant.
Corn. This is some fellow,
Who, having been prais'd for bluntness, doth affect
A saucy roughness, and constrains the garb
Quite from his nature: he cannot flatter, he:
An honest mind and plain,—he must speak truth:
An they will take it, so: if not, he's plain.
These kind of knaves I know, which in this plainness
Harbour more craft, and more corrupter ends:
Than twenty silly ducking observers,
That stretch their duties nicely.
Kent. Sir, in good sooth, in sincere verity,
Under th' allowance of your grand aspect,
Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant fire,
On flickering Phaebus' front.—
Corn. What mean' st by this?
Kent. To go out of my dialect, which you discon-" mend so much. I knows sir, I am no flatterer: he that beguil'd you in a plain accent was a plain knave; which, for my part, I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to 't.
Corn. What was the offence you gave him?
Osw. I never gave him any.
It pleas'd the king; his master, very late,
To strike at me upon his misconstruction;
When he, compact, and flattering his displeasure,
Tripp'd me behind; being down, insult'd, rail'd,
And put upon him such a deal of man.
That worthil'd him, get praises of the king
For him attempting who was self-subdu'd;
And, in the flesshment of this dread exploit,
Drew on me here again.
Kent. None of these rogues, and cowards,
But Ajax is their fool.
Corn. Fetch forth the stocks!
You? stubborn ancient knave, you reverend braggart,
We'll teach you—
Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn.
Call not your stocks for me; I serve the king,
On whose employment I was sent to you:
You shall do small respect, show too bold malice
Against the grace and person of my master,
Stocking his messenger.
Corn. Fetch forth the stocks!
As I have life and honour, there shall he sit till noon.
Reg. Till noon! till night, my lord; and all night too.
Kent. Why, madam, if I were your father's dog,
You should not use me so.
Reg.
Kent. Sir, being his knave, I will.
Corn. This is a fellow of the self-same colour
Our sister speaks of.—Come, bring away the stocks.
Glo. Let me beseech your grace not to do so.
His fault is much, and the good king his master:
Will check him for 't: your purpose'd low correction
Is such, as basest and contemned' st wretches,
For pilferings and most common trespasses,
Are punish'd with. The king must take it ill,
That he, so slightly valued in his messenger,
Should have him thus restrain'd.
Corn. I'll answer that.
Reg. My sister may receive it much more worse,
To have her gentleman abus'd, assuaded,
For following her affairs.—Put in his legs. —
Kent is set in the Stocks
Come, my lord, away.

[Glo. I am sorry for thee, friend; 't is the duke's pleasure,
Whose disposition, all the world well knows,
Will not he rub'd, nor stopp'd: I'll entertain for thee
Kent. Pray, do not, sir. I have watch'd, and try'd, Well'd hard
Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle:
A good man's fortune may grow out at heels.
Give you good marr ow!
Glo. The duke's to blame in this; 't will be ill taken.

Kent. Good king, that must approve the common saw:—
Thou out of heaven's benediction corn'st
To the warm sun.
Approach, thou beacon to this under globe,
That by thy comfortable beams I may
Peruse this letter.—Nothing almost sees miracles,
But misery:—I know, 't is from Cordelia;
Who hath most fortunately been inform'd
Of my obscured course; and shall find time
From this enormous state, seeking to give Losses their remedies.—All weary and o'er-watch'd,
Take vantage, heavy eyes, not to behold
This shameful lodging. Fortune, good night;
Smile once more; turn thy wheel!

[He sleeps

SCENE III.—A Part of the Heath.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. I heard myself proclaim'd;
And by the happy hollow of a tree
Esca'd the hunt. No port is free; no place,
That guard, and most unusual vigilance,
Does not attend my taking
While I may esca.pe,
I will preserve myself; and am bethought
To take the basest and most poorest shape,
That ever penury, in contempt of man,
Brought near to beast: my face I'll grime with flint,
Blanket my loins, elf all my hair in knots,
And with presented nakedness out-face
The winds, and persecutions of the sky.
The country gives me proof and precedent
Of Bedlam beggars, who, with roaring voices,
Strike in their numb'd and mortified bare arms
Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of rosemary;
And with this horrible object, from low farms,
Poor pealing villages, sheep-cotes and mills,
Sometime with lunatic bans, sometime with prayers,
Enforce their charity.—Poor Turleygood poor Tom,
That's something yet:—Edgar I nothing am.

SCENE IV.—Before GLOSTER’s Castle.

Enter LEAR, Fool, and a Gentleman.

LEAR. ‘Tis strange that they should so depart from home.

And not send back my messenger.

GENT. As I learn’d,
The night before there was no purpose in them.

Of this remove

KENT. Hail to thee, noble master! [Waking.

LEAR. Ha!

Mak’st thou this shame thy pastime?

KENT. No, my lord.

FOOL. Ha, ha! look; he wears cruel garrets. Horses are tied by the head; dozes, and bears, by the neck; monkeys by the loins, and men by the legs. When a man is over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden netherstocks.

LEAR. What’s lie, that hath so much thy place mistook.

To set thee here?

KENT. It is both he and she,

Your son and daughter.

LEAR. No.

KENT. Yes.

LEAR. No. I say.

KENT. I say, yea.

LEAR. No no; they would not.2

KENT. Yes, they have.

LEAR. By Jupiter, I swear no.

KENT. By Juno, I swear ay.

LEAR. They durst not do’t;

They could not, would not do’t: ’tis worse than murder.

To do upon respect such violent outrage.

Resolve me with all modest haste which way

Thou mightst deserve, or they impose, this usage, Coming from us.

KENT. My lord, when at their home

I did commend your highness’ letters to them,

Ere I was risen from the place that show’d My duty kneeling, came there a reckoning post, Stew’d in his haste, half-breathless, panting forth From Goneril, his mistress, salutation;

Deliver’d letters, spite of intermission,

Which presently they read: on whose contents, They summon’d up their meiny3, straight took horse; Commanded me to follow, and attend

The leisure of their answer: gave me cold looks:

And meeting here the other messenger,

Whose welcome, I perceive’d, had poison’d mine, (Being the very fellow which of late Display’d so sally against your highness)

Having more man than wit about me, drew:

He rais’d the house with loud and coward cries.

Your son and daughter found this trespass worth

The shame which here it suffers.

FOOL.4 Winter’s not gone yet, if the wild geese fly that way.

Fathers, that wear rags,

Do make their children blind;

But fathers, that bear bags.

Shall see their children kind.

Fortune, that arrant whore.

Ne’er turns the key to the poor.—

But, for all this, it follows,

Thou shalt have as many dolours

For thy daughters dear,

As thou canst tell in a year.6

LEAR. O, how this mother swells upward my heart!

HYSTERIA PASSIO! down, thou climbing sorrow,

Thy element’s below.—Where is this daughter?

KENT. With the earl, sir; here, within.

LEAR. Follow me not

Stay here. [Exit.

GENT. Made you no more offence, than what you speak of?

KENT. None.

How chance the king comes with so small a train?

FOOL. An thou hadst been set i’ the stocks for that question, thou hadst well deserve’d it.

KENT. Why, fool?

FOOL. We’ll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there’s no labour i’ the winter. All that follow their noses are led by their eyes, but blind men; and there’s not a nose among twenty but can smell him that’s stinking. Let go thy hold, when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following it; but the great one that goes up the hill, let him draw thee after. When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again: I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it. That sir, which serves and seeks for gain.

And follows but for form,

Will pack when it begins to rain,

And leave thee in the storm.

But I will tarry; the fool will stay,

And let the wise man fly:

The fool turns knave4 that runs away,

The knave no fool,4 perdy.

KENT. Where learn’d you this, fool?

FOOL. Not i’ the stocks, fool.

Lear. Deny to speak with me? They are sick? they are weary?

They have travel’d hard to-night? Mere fetches.

The images of revolt and flying off.

Fetch me a better answer.

GLOSTER. My dear lord,

You know the fiery quality of the duke;

How unremovable and fixed he is

In his own course.

LEAR. Vengeance! plague! death! confusion!

Fiery? what quality? Why, Gloster, Gloster,

I’d speak with the duke of Cornwall and his wife.

GLOSTER. Well, my good lord, I have inform’d them so.11

LEAR. Inform’d them! Dost thou understand me, man?

GLOSTER. Ay, my good lord,

LEAR. The king would speak with Cornwall; the dear father

Would with his daughter speak, commands her service,

Are they inform’d of this? My breath and blood!—

Fiery? the fiery duke?—Tell the hot duke, that—

No, but not yet.—may be, he is not well:

Infirmitie doth still neglect all office,

Whereunto our health is bound: we are not ourselves,

When nature, being opposed, commands the mind

To suffer with the body. I’ll forbear;

And am fallen out with my more headier will,

To take the indispos’d and sickly fit

For the sound man.—Death on my state! wherefore

[Pointing to Kent.

Should he sit here? This act persuades me,
Thy tender-hearted* nature shall not give Thee o'er to harshness: her eyes are fierce; but thee
Do comfort, and not burn. 'Tis not in thee
To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train,
To handy hasty words, to scent my sizes,
And, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt
Against my coming in: thou better know'st
The offices of nature, bond of childhood,
Effects of courtesy, dues of gratitude;
Thy half o' the kingdom thou hast not forgot,
Wherein I thee endow'd.

Reg. Who put my man i' the stocks? [Tucket* within.
Corn. What trumpet's that?

Enter OSWALD.
Reg. I know't; my sister's: this approves her letter,
That she would soon be here.—Is your lady come?
Lear. This is a slave, whose easy borrow'd pride
Dwells in the fickle grace of her he follows.—
Out, varlet, from my sight!

Corn. What means your grace?
Lear. Who stock'd my servant? Regan, I have good hope
Thou didst not know on't.—Who comes here? O heavens!

Enter GONERIL.
If you do love old men, if your sweet sway
Allow obedience, if yourselves are old,
Make it your cause: send down, and take my part!—
Art not asham'd to look upon this hear'd?—

[To GONERIL.
O Regan! wilt thou take her by the hand?
Gon. Why not by the hand, sir? How have I offended?
All's not offence, that indiscretion finds,
AndNatural terms so.

Lear. O sides! you are too strong:
Will you yet hold? How came my man i' the stocks?
Corn. I set him there, sir; but his other disorders
Deserved much less advancement.

Lear. You! did you?

Reg. I pray you, father, being weak, seem so.
If, till the expiration of your month,
You will return and sojourn with my sister,
Dismissing half your train, come then to me:
I am now from home, and out of that provision
Which shall be needful for your entertainment.

Lear. Return to her, and fifty men dismiss'd?
No; rather I abjure all roofs, and choose
To wage against the enmity of the air;
To be a comrade with the wolf and howl!*
Necessity's sharp pinch!—Return with her?
Why, the hot-blooded France, that doverless took
Our youngest born, I could as well be brought To kneel his throne. and, squire-like, pension beg
To keep base life afoot.—Return with her?
Persuade me rather to be slave and summer
To this detested groom. [Looking at OSWALD.

Gon. At your choice, sir.
Lear. I pr'ythee, daughter, do not make me mad
I will not trouble thee, my child: farewell.
We'll no more meet, no more see one another;
But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my daughter;
Or, rather, a disease that's* in my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine: thou art a boil,
A plague-sore, an embossed carbuncle,
In my corrupted blood. But I'll not chide thee;

Mend, when thou canst; be better, at thy leisure:
I can be patient; I can stay with Regan,
1, and my hundred knights.

Reg. Not altogether so:
I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided
For your fit welcome. Give ear, sire, to my sister;
For those that mingle reason with their passion,
Must be content to think you old, and so—
But she knows what she does.

Lear. Is this well spoken?
Reg. I dare avouch it, sir. What fifty followers?
Is it not well? What should you need of more?
Yea, or so many, sith that both charge and danger
Speak 'gainst so great a number? How, in one house,
Should many people, under two commands,
Hold amity? 'Tis hard: almost impossible.

Gon. Why might not you, my lord, receive attendants
From those that she calls servants, or from me?

Reg. Why not, my lord? If then they chanc'd to sack you,
We could control them. If you will come to me,
(For now I spy a daunger) I entreat you
To bring but five and twenty: to no more
Will I give place, or notice.

Lear. I gave you all.

Reg. Made you my guardians, my depositaries,
But kept a reservation to be follow'd.
With such a number. What must I come to you
When five and twenty? Regan, said you so?

Reg. And speak it again, my lord; no more with me.

Lear. Those wicked creatures yet do look well-

When others are more wicked; not being the worst
Stands in some rank of praise.—I'll go with thee:

[To Goneril.]

Thy fifty yet doth double five and twenty,
And thou art twice her love.

Gon. Hear me, my lord.

What need you five and twenty, ten, or five,
To follow in a house, where twice so many
Have a command to tend you?

Reg. What needs one?

Lear. O! reason not the need; our basest beggars
Are in the poorest thing superfluous:
Allow not nature more than nature needs,
Man's life is cheap as beast's. Thou art a lady;

If only to go warm were gorgeous,
Why, nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st,
Which scarcely keeps thee warm. But, for true need,
You heavens, give me but patience, patience I need:
You see me here, you gods, a poor old man,
As full of grief as age; wretched in both:
If it be you that stir these daughters' hearts
Against their father, fool me not so much
To bear it tamely; touch me with noble anger.

O! let not women's weapons, water-drops,
Stain my man's cheeks—No, you unnatural hags,
I will have such revenges on you both,
That all the world shall—I will do such things—
What they are, yet I know not; but they shall be
The terrors of the earth. You think, 'I'll weep,
No, I'll not weep:
I have full cause of weeping: but this heart

[Storm heard at a distance]

Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws,
Or ere I'll weep.—O, fool! I shall go mad.

Corn. Let us withdraw, it will be a storm.

Reg. This house is little: the old man and 's people
Cannot be well bestow'd.

Gon. 'Tis his own blame hath put himself from rest.
He must needs taste his folly.

Reg. For his particular, I'll receive him gladly.

But not one follower.

Gon. So am I purposed.

Where is my lord of Gloster?

* Re-enter Gloster.

Corn. Follow'd the old man forth.—He is return'd.

Glo. The king is in high rage.

Corn. Whither is he going?

Glo. He calls to horse: but will I know not whither.

Corn. 'Tis best to give him way: he leads himself.

Gon. My lord, entreat him by no means to stay.

Glo. Alack! the night comes on, and the bleak winds
Do sorely ruffle: for many miles about
There's scarce a bush.

Reg. O sir! to willful men,
The injuries that they themselves procure
Must be their schoolmasters. Shut up your doors:
He is attended with a desperate train,
And what they may incense him to, being apt
To have his ear abused, wisdom bids fear.

Corn. Shut up your doors, my lord; 'tis a wild night
My Regan counsels well.—Come out of the storm.

[Exeunt]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Heath.

A Storm, with Thunder and Lightning. Enter Kent, and a Gentleman, meeting.

Kent. Who's here, beside foul weather?

Gent. One minded, like the weather, most unequally.

Kent. I know you. Where's the king?

Gent. Contending with the fretful elements;
Bid'st the wind blow the earth into the sea,
Or swell thecurled waters above the main,
That things might chance or cease; tears his white hair,
Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage,
Catch in their fury, and make nothing of:

1 follow: in quarto  2 This and the next speech, to "horse," are not in quarto.  3 not: in quarto.  4 The rest of this speech is not in folio.
With mutual cunning, 'twixt Albany and Cornwall; 1
Who have (as who have not, that their great stars Thron'd and set high?) servants, who seem no less,
Which are to France the spies and spectators 2
Intelligent of our state; what hath been seen,
Either in snuffs 3 and packings of the dukes,
Or the hard rain which both of them have borne
Against the old kind king: or something deeper,
Whereof, perchance, these are but flourishings. 4
But, true it is, from France there comes a power
Into this scatter'd kingdom: who already,
Wise in our negligence, have secret feet
In some of our best ports, and are at point
To show their open banner.—Now to you:
If on my credit you dare build so far
To make you, speed to Dover, you shall find
Some that will thank you, making just report
Of how unnatural and blemishing sorrow
The king hath cause to plain.
I am a gentleman of blood and breeding,
And from some knowledge and assurance offer
This office to you.

Gent. I will talk farther with you.

Kent. No, do not.

For confirmation that I am much more
Than my out wall, open this purse, and take
What it contains. If you shall see Cordelia,
(As fear not but you shall) show her this ring,
And she will tell you who that? fellow is
That yet you do not know. [Thunder.] Fire on this storm!
I will go seek the king.

Gent. Give me your hand. Have you no more to say?
Kent. Few words, but, to effect, more than all yet;
That, when we have found the king, in which your pain
That way, I'll this, he that first lights on him,
Holla the other. [Exeunt severally.

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Heath. Storm continues.

Enter Lear and Fool.

Lear. Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks! rage! blow!
You cataracts and hurricanches spout.
Till you have drench'd our steeples, drown'd our cocks!
You sulphurous and thought-executing fires,
Vaunt-couriers to oak-claying thunder-bolts,
Singe my white head! And thou, all-shaking thunder,
Strike that flat threat roundity o' the world:
Crack nature's moulds, all germins spelt at once,
That make ingrateful men!

Fool. O uncle, court holy-water! 5 in a dry house
Is better than this rain-water out o' door.
Good uncle, in, and ask thy daughter's blessing: here's a night
Pities neither wise men nor fools.
[Thunder.

Lear. Rumble thy bellyfull! Spit, fire! spout, rain!
Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my daughters:
I tax not you, you elements, with unkindness:
I never gave you kingdom, call'd you children,
You owe me no subscription: then, let fall
Your horrible pleasure; here I stand, your slave,
A poor, infirm, weak, and despis'd old man.
But yet I call you servile ministers,
That will with two pernicious daughters join?
Your high-excener'd battles 'gainst a head
So old and white as this. O! O! 'tis foul!

Fool. He that has a house to put his head in has a
The cod-piece that will house.
Before the head has any,
The head and he shall house.—
So beggars marry many.
The man that makes his toe
What he his heart should make,
Shall of 6 a corn cry wee,
And turn his sleep to wake.

—for there was never yet fair woman, but she made mouths in a glass. Enter Kent.

Lear. No. I will be the pattern of all patience; I will say nothing.

Kent. Who's there?

Fool. Marry, here's grace, and a cod-piece, that's a wise man, and a fool.

Kent. Alas, sir! are you here? Things that love night,
Love not such nights as these; the wrathful skie
Gallow 7 the very wanderers of the dark,
And make them keep their caves. Since I was man,
Such sheets of fire, such burst's of horrid thunder,
Such groans of roaring wind and rain. I never Remember to have heard: man's nature cannot carry
Th' affliction, nor the fear. 8

Lear. Let the great gods,
That keep this dreadful pother 9 o'er our heads,
Find out their enemies now. Tremble, thou wretch,
That hast within thee undivulged crimes.
Unwip'd of justice: hide thine, thon bloody hand;
Thou perjur'd, and thou simulter 10 of virtue
That art incestuous: culliff, to pieces shake,
That under covert and convenient seeming
Hast practis'd on man's life: close pent-up guilt,
Rive your concealing continents, 11 and cry
These dreadful sumoners grace.—I am a man,
More sinn'd against, than sinning.

Kent. Alack! I bare-headed
Gracions my lord, hard by here is a hovel;
Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest:
Repose you there, while I to this hard house,
(More hard 12 than is the stone whereof 'tis rais'd,
Which even but now, demanding after you,
Denied me to come in) return, and force
Their scant ed courtesy.

Lear. My wits begin to turn.—
Come on, my boy. How dost, my boy? 9 Art cold?
I am cold myself.—Where is this straw? my fellow
The art of our necessities is strange,
That can make vile things precious. Come, your hovel,
Poor fool and knife, I have one part in my heart
That's sorry yet for thee.

Fool. He that has a little tiny wit,—

[Sings.

With head, and the wind, and the rain.

Must make content with his fortunes fit;
For the wind it raineth every day.

Lear. True, my good boy.—Come, bring us to their hovel.

[Exeunt Lear and Kent.

Fool. 13 This is a brave night to cool a courtezan.
I'll speak a prophecy ere I go:
When priests are more in word than matter
When bakers may their malt with water;
When nobles are their tailors' tutors;
No heretics burn'd, but wench'd alater;
When every cause in law is right;
No sure in debt, nor no poor knight;
When sanders do not live in tongues,

SCENE IV. — A Room in GLOSTER'S Castle.

Exit GLOSTER and EDMUND.

KENT. Here is the place, my lord; good my lord, enter.

LEAR. Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

SCENE IV. — A Part of the Heath, with a Howel.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

KENT. Here is the place, my lord; good my lord, enter.

LEAR. Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

LEAR. Kent. I'd rather break mine own. Good my lord, enter.

LEAR. Kent. Thou think'st 'tis much, that this contentious storm

Invades us to the skin: 'tis to thee;

But where the greater malady is fix'd,
The lesser is scarce felt. Thou 'st shun a bear;

But if thy flight lay toward the roaring sea,
Thou 'st meet the bear if the mouth. When the mind

The body's delicate: the tempest in my mind

Doth from my sores take all feeling else,

Save what beats there.—Filia ingratitude!

Is it not as this mouth should bear this hand,

For lifting food to 't? — But I will punish home, —

No, I will weep no more. — In such a night

To shrivell my heart — Pour out! — I will endure. —

In such a night as this! — O Regan! Goneril!

Thou old country kind, whose frank heart gave all —

O! that way madness lies; let me shun that;

No more of that.

KENT. Good my lord, enter here.

LEAR. Pry'thee, go in thyself; seek thine own case.

This tempest will not give me leave to ponder

On things which hurt me more. — But I'll go in:

In, boy; go first. — [To the Fool.] You houseless poverty. —

Nay, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep.

[Exit.]

LEAR. Fool goes in.

Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are,

That side the pelting of this pitiless storm.

How shall your houseless heads, and unmitred sides,

Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend you

From seasons such as these? O! I have ta'en

Too little care of this. Take physic, pomp;

Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel,

That thou may'st shake the superflux to them,

And show the heavens more just.

Edg. [Within.] Fathom and half, fathom and half!

Poor Tom! [The Fool runs out from the Howel.]

Fool. Come not in here, nuncle; here's a spirit.

Help me! help me!

Kent. Give me thy hand. — Who's there?

Fool. A spirit, a spirit: he says his name's poor Tom.

Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there? I the Come forth.

[Straw?]

Enter EDGAR, disguised as a Madman.

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me! —

'Through the sharp hawkborn blows the cold' wind.' —

Humph! go to thy cold' bed, and warm thee.

LEAR. Hast thou given all to thy two daughters?

And art thou come to this?

Edg. Who gives any thing to poor Tom? whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame,

through swamp' and whirlpool, over bog and quagmire:

and hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his pew; set ratsbane by his porridge; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over four-inch bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor. — Bless thy five wits! Tom's a cold. — O! do de, do de, de.

— Bless thee from whirlwinds, star-blasting, and taking. —

Do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul

fiend vexes. — There could I have him now; — and there,

— and there, and there again, and there.

[Strikes.] Storm continues.

LEAR. What! have his daughters brought him to this pass? —

Couldst thou save nothing? Didst thou give them all?

Fool. Nay, he reserved a blanket, else we had been all shamed.

LEAR. Now, all the plagues, that in the pendulous air

Hang fated o'er men's faults, light on thy daughters!

Kent. He hath no daughters, sir.

LEAR. Death, traitor! nothing could have subdued nature

To such a lowness, but his unkind daughters. —

Is it the fashion, that discarded fathers

Should have thus little mercy of their flesh?

Judicious punishment! 't was this flesh begot

Those pelican daughters.

Edg. Pilocock sat on Pilocock-hill: —

Hallow, hallow, loo, loo!

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o' the foul fiend. Obey thy parents, keep thy word; do justice; — swear not; commit not with man's sworn promise; set not thy sweet heart on proud array. Tom's a cold.

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A serving-man, proud in heart and mind; that curled my hair, wore gloves in my cap, served the lust of my mistress's heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I spoke words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven: one, that slept in the contriving of lust, and waked to do it. Wine loved I deeply; dice dearly; and in woman, out-paramour'd the Turk: false of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand: hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in meagerness, lion in prey. Let not the eaking of shoes nor the rustling of silks, betray thy poor heart to woman; keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend.—Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind;

Eats cow-dung for salvets; swallows the old rat, and the ditch-dog; drinks the green mantle of the standing pool: who is whipped from tything to tything, and stocked, punished, and imprisoned; who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body, horse to ride, and weapon to wear,—

But mice, and rats, and such small deer. Have been Tom's food for seven long year. Beware my follower. Peace, Smulkin! peace, thou fiend!

Glo. What hath your grace no better company?

Edg. The prince of darkness is a gentleman; Mode he's call'd, and Mahu. Our flesh and blood, our lord, is grown so vile, That it doth hate what gets it.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.

Glo. Go in with me. My duty cannot suffer To obey in all your daughters' hard commands:

Though their injunction be to bar my doors, And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you, Yet I have ventur'd to come seek you out, And bring you where both fire and food is ready.

Lear. First let me talk with this philosopher.— What is the cause of thunder?

Kent. Good my lord, take his offer: go into the house.

Lear. I'll talk a word with this same learned Theban.

What is your study?

Edg. How to prevent the fiend, and to kill vermin.

Lear. Let me ask you one word in private. [They talk apart.]

Kent. Importune him once more to go, my lord, His wits begin't unsettle.

Glo. Canst thou blame him? His daughters seek his death.—Ah, that good Kent!— He said it would be thus, poor banish'd man!— Thou say'st, the king grows mad: I'll tell thee, friend, I am almost mad myself. I had a son, Now outlaw'd from my blood; he sought my life, But lately, very late: I lov'd him, friend, No father his son dearer: true to tell thee, The grief hath craze'd my wits. What a night's this!—

Storm continues.

I do beseech your grace,—

Lear. O! cry you mercy, sir.—

Glo. Noble philosopher, your company.

Edg. Tom's a-cold.

Glo. In fellow, there, into the hovel: keep thee warm.

Lear. Come, let's in all.

Kent. This way, my lord

I will keep still with my philosopher.

Kent. Good my lord, soothe him; let him take the fellow.

Glo. Take him you on.

Kent. Sirrah, come on; go along with us. Lear. Come, good Athenian.

No words, no words.

Hush! Edg. "Child Rowland to the dark tower came, His word was still,—Die, hol and furm, I smell the blood of a British man." [Exit.

SCENE V.—A Room in Gloster's Castle. Enter Cornwall and Edmund.

Corn. I will have my revenge, ere I depart his house. Edm. How, my lord, I may be censured, that nature thus gives way to loyalty, something fears me to think of Corn. I now perceive, it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death; but a provoking merit, set a-work by a reprovable badness in himself. Edm. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be just! This is the letter which he spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heavens! that this treason were not, or not I the detector!

Corn. Go with me to the duchess. Edm. If the matter of this paper be certain, you have mighty business in hand. Corn. True, or false, it hath made thee earl of Gloster. Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension.

Edm. [Aside.] If I find him comforting the king, it will stuff his suspicions more fully.—[To him.] I will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood. Corn. I will lay trust upon thee; and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love. [Execut.

SCENE VI.—A Chamber in a Farm-House, adjoining the Castle.

Enter Gloster, Lear, Kent, Fool, and Edgar.

Glo. Here is better than the open air; take it thankfully. I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can: I will not be long from you. Kent. All the power of his wits has given way to his impietie. —The gods reward your kindness!

Edg. Frateretto calls me, and tells me, Nero is an angler in the lake of darkness. Pray innocent, and beware the foul fiend.

Fool. Prythee, nuncle, tell me, whether a madman be a gentleman, or a yeoman?

Lear. A king, a king!

Fool. No? he's a yeoman, that has a gentleman to his son: for he is a mad yeoman, that sees his son a gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thousand with red burning spits Come whizzing in upon them.—

Edg. The foul fiend bites my back.

Fool. He's mad, that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's oath.

Lear. It shall be done; I will arraign them straight.—Come, sit thou here, most learned justice;—

[To Edgar, Thou, supinest, sir, sit here. Now, you she foxes!—Edg. Look, where he stands and glares!—Wantest thou eyes at trial, madman? Come o'er the thorn, Bessy, to me:*—Fool. Her boat hath a leak, And she must not speak, Why she darest not come over to thee. Edg. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Hopdance cries in Tom's belly for two white herring. Croak not, black angel; I have no food for thee. Kent. How do you, sir? Stand you not so amaz'd: Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions? Lear. I'll see their trial first.—Bring out the evi- dence.

Thou robber man of justice, take thy place;—To Edgar. And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity, [To the Fool. Beneath by his side. You are of the commission. Sit you too. [To Kent.

Edg. Let us deal justly. Sleepest, or waketh thou, jolly shepherd? Thy sheep be in the corn; And for one blast of thy minikin mouth, Thy sheep shall take no harm.

Fool! The eat is grey.

Lear. Arraign her first; it is Goneril. I here take my oath before this honourable assembly, she kicked the poor king her father.

Fool. Come hither, mistress. Is your name Goneril? Lear She cannot deny it.

Fool. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool. Lear. And here 's another, whose warp'd looks pro- claim

What store her heart is made on.—Stop her there!

Arms, arms, sword, fire!—Corruption in the place! False justice, why hast thou let her escape? Edg. Bless thy five wits! Kent. O pity!—Sir, where is the patience now, That you so oft have boasted to retain? Edg. [Aside.] My tears begin to take his part so much. They'll mar my counterfeiting. Lear. The little dogs and all, Tray, Blanch, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark at me. Edg. Tom will throw his head at them.—Avaunt, you curs! Be thy mouth or black or white, Tooth that poisons if it bite; Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel, grim, Hound, or spaniel, brach*, or lyn*; Or bobtail like?, or trundell-tail, Tom will make them* weep and wail: For with throwing thus my head, Dogs leap the hatch, and all are fled.

Do, de, de, de. See, see! Come, march to wakes and fairs, and market towns.—Poor Tom, thy horn is dry.*

Lear. Then, let them anatomicize Regan, see what breeds about her heart. Is there any cause in nature that makes these hard hearts?—You, sir, [To Edgar.] I entertain you for one of my hundred; only, I do not like the fashion of your garments: you will say, they are Persian attire;* but let them be changed.

Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here, and rest awhile. Lear. Make no noise, make no noise; draw the curtains. So, so, so: we'll go to supper i' the morning: so, so, so.

Fool And I 'll go* to bed at noon.

Re-enter Gloster.

Glo. Come hither, friend: where is the king my master?

Kent. Here, sir: but trouble him not; his wits are gone.

Glo. Good friend, I pr'ythee take him in thy arms; I have o'er-heard a plot of death upon him. There is a litter ready; lay him in 't, And drive toward Dover, friend, where thou shalt meet Both welcome and protection. Take up thy master: If thou shouldst daily half an hour, his life, With thine, and all that offer to defend him, Stand in assured loss. Take up, take up; And follow me, that will to some provision Give thee quick conduct.

Kent. Oppress'd nature sleeps:* This rest might yet have balm'd thy broken senses,* Which, if convenience will not allow, Stand in hard cure.—Come, help to bear thy master; Thou must not stay behind. [To the Fool.

Glo. Come, come, away

[Exeunt Kent, Gloster, and the Fool, bearing off the King.

Edg. When we our better see bearing our woes, We scarcely think our miseries our foes. Who alone suffers, suffers most? the mind, Leaving free things and happy shows behind. But then the mind much suffereth doth o'erskip, When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship. How light and portable my pain seems now, When that which makes me bend, makes the king bow. He childed, as I father'd.—Tom, away! Mark the high noises; and by thyself bewray, When false opinion, whose wrong thought defiles the re.
KING LEAR. ACT III.

SCENE VII.—A Room in Gloster’s Castle.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Goneril, Edmund, and Servants.

Corn. Post speedily to my lord your husband; show him this letter:—the army of France is landed.—Seek out the traitor—Gloster. [Execute some of the Servants.]

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gon. Pluck out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my dispose.—Edmund, keep you our sister company: the revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke, where you are going, to a most destitute preparation; we are bound to the like. Our posts shall be swift and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell, dear sister.—farewell, my lord of Gloster.

Enter Oswald.

How now! Where’s the king?

Osw. My lord of Gloster hath convey’d him hence:

Some five or six and thirty of his knights,

Hot quench’d after him, met him at gate:

Who, with some other of the lord’s dependants,

Are gone with him towards Dover, where they boast

To have well-armed friends.

Corn. Get horses for your mistress.

Gon. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister.

[Execute Goneril, Edmund, and Oswald.

Corn. Edmund, farewell.—Go, seek the traitor Gloster,

Union him like a thief, bring him before us.

[Execute other Servants.

Though well we may not pass upon his life
Without the form of justice, yet our power
Shall do a courtesy to our wrath, which men
May blame, but not control. Who’s there? The traitor?

Re-enter Servants, with Gloster.

Reg. Ingrateful fox! I’m he.

Corn. Bind fast his corky arms.

Glo. What mean your graces?—Good my friends, consider

You are my guests: do me no foul play, friends.

Corn. Bind him, I say. [Servants bind him.

Reg. Hard, hard.—O filthy traitor!

Glo. Unmerciful lady as you are, I am none.

Corn. To this chair bind him.—Villain, thou shalt find— [They bind him: REGAN plucks his beard.

Glo. By the kind gods, it’s most ignobly done

To pluck by the beard.

Reg. So white, and such a traitor!

Glo. Naughty lady.

These hairs, which thou dost ravish from my chin,

Will quicken, and accuse thee. I am your host:

With robbers’ hands my hospitable favours

You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?

Corn. Come, sir, what letters had you late from France?

Reg. Be simple-answer, for we know the truth.

Corn. And what confederacy have you with the Late footed in the kingdom? [traitors

Reg. To whose hands

Have you sent the lunatic king? Speak.

Glo. I have a letter guessingly set down,

Which came from one that ?s of a neutral heart,

And not from one oppos’d.

Corn. Cuming.

Reg. And false.

Corn. Where hast thou sent the king?

Glo. To Dover.

Reg. Wherefore

To Dover? Wast thou not charg’d at peril—

Corn. Wherefore to Dover? Let him answer that.

Glo. I am tied to the stake, and I must stand the course.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover?

Glo. Because I would not see thy cruel nails

Pluck out his poor old eyes; nor thy fierce sister

In his anointed flesh rush’ boarish fangs.

The sea, with such a storm as his bare’ head

In hell-black night endure’d, would have buoy’d up,

And quench’d the stelled fires;

Yet, poor old heart, he holp the heavens to rain.

It wolves had at thy gate how’d that stern’ time,

Thou shouldst have said, “Good porter, turn the key.”

All cruel’s else subscrib’d: but I shall see

The winged vengeance overtake such children.

Corn. See it shalt thou never.—Fellows, hold the chair.

Upon these eyes of thine I’ll set my foot.

Glo. He, that will think to live till he be old,

Give me some help!—O cruel! O ye gods!

[They tear out one eye.]

Reg. One side will mock another; the other too.

Corn. If you see, vengeance,—

Serv. Hold your hand, my lord.

I have serv’d you ever since I was a child,

But better service have I never done you,

Than now to bid you hold.

Reg. How now, you dog!

Serv. If you did wear a beard upon your chin,

I’d shake it on this quarrel! What do you mean?

Corn. My villain! [Draws and runs at him.

Serv. Nay then, come on, and take the chance of anger. [Draws. Cornwall is wounded.

Reg. Give me thy sword. A peasant stand up thus!

Serv. O, I am shorn!—My lord, you have one eye left

To see some mischief on him!—O!—[Dies

Corn. Lest it see more, prevent it.—Out, vile jelly!

Where is thy lustre now?—[Tearing out his other eye.]

Glo. All dark and comfortless.—Where’s my son

Edmund?

Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature,

To quell this horrid act.

Reg. Out, treacherous villain!

Thou call’st on him that hates thee: it was he

That made the overture of thy treasons to us,

Who is too good to pity thee.

Glo. O my fellows! Then Edgar was abus’d.—

Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper him!

Reg. Go, thrust him out at gates, and let him smol

His way to Dover.—How is’t, my lord? How look you?

Corn. I have receiv’d a hurt. Follow me, lady.—

Turn out that eyeless villain: throw this slave

Upon the dunghill.—Regan, I bleed space:

Untimely comes this hurt. Give me your arm.

[Exit Cornwall, led by Regan.—Servants unbind

Gloster, and lead him out.]

SCENE I.—The Heath.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. Yes, better thus, unknown to be contemned, than still contemned and flatter'd. To be worst, The lowest and most dejected thing of fortune, Stands still in esperance, lives not in fear: The lamentable change is from the best; The worst returns to laughter. Welcome, then, Thou unsatisfactory air that I embrace: The wretch, that thou hast blown onto the worst, Owes nothing to thy blasts.—But who comes here?—

Enter Gloster, led by an old Man.

My father, poorly led?—World, world, O world! But that thy strange mutations make us hate thee, Life would not yield to age.

Old Man. O my good lord! I have been your tenant, and your father’s tenant, these fourscore years.

Glo. Away, get thee away; good friend, be gone: Thy comforts can do me no good at all; Thee they may hurt.

Old Man. Alack, sir! you cannot see your way.

Glo. I have no way, and therefore want no eyes: I stumbled when I saw. Full oft it is seen, Our wants secure us; and our mere defects
Prove our commodities.—Ah! dear son Edgar,
The food of thy abused father’s wrath,
Might I but live to see thee in my touch, I’d say I had eyes again!

Old Man. How now! Who’s there?

Edg. [Aside.] O gods! Who is’t can say, “I am at the worst?”

I am worse than ever I was.

Old Man. ‘Tis poor mad Tom.

Edg. [Aside.] And worse I may be yet: the worst is not.

So long as we can say, “This is the worst,”

Old Man. Fellow, where goest?

Glo. Is it a beggar-man?

Old Man. Madman, and beggar too.

Glo. He has some reason, else he could not beg.

I’ the last night’s storm I such a fellow saw.

Which made me think a man a worm: my son Came then into my mind; and yet my mind Was then so sorely friends with him: I have heard more As flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods: [since.

They kill us for their sport.

Edg. [Aside.] How should this be?—

Bad is the trade that must play fool to sorrow.

Angering itself and others. [To him.] Bless thee, master.

Glo. Is that the naked fellow?

Old Man. Ay, my lord.

Glo. Then, pr’ythee, get thee gone. If, for my sake,

Thou wilt o’ertake us, hence a mile or twain.

I’ the way toward Dover, do it for ancient love; And bring some covering for this naked soul, Whom I’ll entreat to lead me.

ACT IV.

Old Man. Alack, sir! he is mad.

Glo. ’Tis the times’ plague, when madmen lead the blind.

Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure;

Above the rest, be gone.

Old Man. I’ll bring him the best p’larm that I have, Cannot on’t what will.

[Exit.

Glo. Sirrah: naked fellow.

Edg. Poor Tom’s a-cold.—[Aside.] I cannot daub it farther.

Glo. Come hither, fellow.

Edg. [Aside.] And yet I must.—[To him.] Blest thy sweet eyes, they bleed.

Glo. Know’st thou the way to Dover?

Edg. Both stile and gate, horse-way and foot-path.

Poor Tom hath been scared out of his good wits: bless thee, good man’s son, from the foul fiend! Five heads have been in poor Tom at once; of jest, as Obiunct: Hobbididance, prince of dullness; Malum, of stealing; Modo, of murder; and Flibbertigibbet, of mopping and mowing, who since possesses chamber-maids and waiting-women. So, bless thee, master!

Glo. Here, take this purse, thou whom the heavens’ plagues

Have humbled to all strokes: that I am wretched, Makes thee the happier.—Heavens, deal so still!

Let the superfurious, and lust-dieted man,

That braves’ your ordinance, that will not see
Because he doth not feel, feel your power quickly;

So distribution should undo excess,

And each man have enough.—Dost thou know Dover?

Edg. Ay, master.

Glo. There is a cliff, whose high and bending head

Looks fearfully in the confined deep:

Bring me but to the very brim of it,

And I’ll repair the misery thou dost bear.

With something rich about me, from that place I shall no leading need.

Edg. Give me thy arm:

Poor Tom shall lead thee. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before the Duke of Albany’s Palace.

Enter Goneril and Edmund; Oswald meeting them.

Gon. Welcome, my lord: I marvel, our mild husband

Not met us on the way.—Now, where’s your master?

Osw. Madam, within; but never man so chang’d

I told him of the army that was landed;

He smil’d at it: I told him, you were coming;

His answer was, “The worst!” of Gloster’s treachery

And of the loyal service of his son,

When I inform’d him, then he call’d me so,

And told me I had turn’d the wrong side out.

What most he should dislike seems pleasant to him;

What like, offensive.

Gon. Then shall you go no farther. [To Edmund] It is the coward spirit of his spirit,

That dares not undertake: he’ll not feel wrongs,
Which tie him to an answer. Our wishes on the way
May prove effects. Back, Edmund, to my brother;
Hasten his muster, and conduct his powers;
I must change arms at home, and give the distaff
Into my husband's hands. This trusty servant
Shall pass between us: ere long you are like to hear,
If you dare venture in your own behalf,
A mistress's command. Wear this; spare speech; [Giving a chain.
Decline your head: this kiss, if it dure speak,
Would stretch thy spirits up into the air.—
Conceive, and fare thee well.
Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.
Gon. My most dear Gloster! [Exit EDMUND.
O, the difference of man, and man! To thee a woman's services are due:
My foot usurps my body.
Osw. Madam, here comes my lord. [Exit OSWALD.

Enter ALBANY.

Alb. O Goneril! You are not worth the dust, which the rude wind
Blows in your face— I fear your disposition:
That nature, which contains its own degen,
Cannot be border'd certain in itself;
She that herself will slaver and disbranch
From her material sap, perforce must wither,
And come to deadly use.
Gon. No more: the text is foolish.
Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile;
Filth savour but themselves. What have you done?
Tigers, not daughters, what have you perform'd?
A father, and a gracious aged man,
Whose reverence the head-lugg'd bear would lick,
Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you madd'd
Could my good brother suffer you to do it?
A man, a prince, by him so benefited?
If that the heavens do not their visible spirits
Send quickly down to tame these vile offences,
It will come,
Humility must perforce prey on itself,
Like monsters of the deep.
Gon.

Milk-liver'd man! That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs;
Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning
Thine honour from thy suffering: that not know'st,
Fools do those villains pity, who are punish'd
Ere they have done their mischief. Where's thy dram?
France spreads his banners in our noisless land;
With plumed helmet thy beggar begins threats;
Whilst thou, a moral fool, sitt'st still, and criest,
"Ach! why does he so?"
Alb.

See thyself, devil! Proper deformity seems not in the fiend
Sohorrid, as in woman.
Gon.

O vain fool! Thou changed and self-cover'd thing: for shame,
Be-monster not thy feature. Were it my fitness
To let these hands obey my blood,
They are apt enough to dislocate and tear
Thy flesh and bones: how'er thou art a fiend,
A woman's shape doth shield thee.
Gon. Marry, your manhood now!—

Enter a Messenger.

Alb. What news?
Mess. O, my good lord! the duke of Cornwall's dead,
Slain by his servant, going to put out
The other eye of Gloster.
Alb. Gloster's eyes!
Mess. A servant that he bred, thrill'd with remorse
Oppo'd against the act, bending his sword
To his great master; who, threaten'ard
Flew on him, and amongst them fell him dead,
But not without that harmful stroke, which since
Hath pluck'd him after.
Alb. This shows you are steep,
You justicasters, that these our nether crimes
So speedily can venge!—But, O poor Gloster!
Lost he his other eye?
Mess. Both, both, my lord.
This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer;
[Giving it.

'Tis from your sister.
Gon. [Aside.] One way I like this well:
But being widow, and my Gloster with her,
May all the building in* my fancy pluck
Upon my hateful life. Another way,
The news is not so tart. [To him.] I'll read, and answer.
[Exit.
Alb. Where was his son, when they did take his eyes?
Mess. Come with my lady hither.
Alb. He is not here.
Mess. No, my good lord: I met him back again.
Alb. Knows he the wickedness?
Mess. Ay, my good lord: 'twas he inform'd against him,
And quit the house, on purpose that their punishment
Might have the freer course.
Alb. Gloster. I live
To thank thee for the love thou show'dst the king,
And to revenge thine eyes.—Come hither, friend:
Tell me what more thou knowest.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The French Camp near Dover.

Enter KENT, and a Gentleman.

Kent. Why the king of France is so suddenly gone back, know you the reason?
Gen. Something he left imperfect in the state,
Which since his coming forth is thought of; which Imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger,
That his personal return was most requir'd,
And necessary.
Kent. Whom hath he left behind him general?
Gen. The Mareschal of France, Monsieur le Fer.
Kent. Did your letters pierce the queen to any demonstrati on of grief?
Gen. Ay, sir; she took them, read them in my presence;
And now and then an ample tear trill'd down
Her delicate cheek: it seem'd, she was a queen
Over her passion, who, rebel-like,
Sought to be king o'er her.
Kent. Not to a rage: patience and sorrow strove
Who should express her goodliest. You have seen
Sunshine and rain at once: her smiles and tears
Were like a better May: those happy smiles,
That play'd on her rife lip, seem'd not to know
What guests were in her eyes; which parted thence,
As pearls from diamonds dropp'd.—In brief, sorrow
Would be a rarity most belov'd, if all
Could so become it.

Kent. Made she no verbal question?

Therefore great France
My mourning, and important tears, hath pitied,

SCENE V.—A Room in Glositer's Castle.

Enter Regan and Oswald.

Reg. But are my brother's powers set forth?
Osw. Ay, madam.
Reg. Himself in person there?
Osw. Madam, with much ado
Your sister is the better soldier.
Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your lord at home?
Osw. No, madam.
Reg. What might import my sister's letter to him?
Osw. I know not, lady.
Reg. 'Faith, he is posted hence on serious matter.
It was great ignorance, Glositer's eyes being out,
To let him live: where he arrives he moves
All hearts against us. Edmund, I think, is gone,
In pity of his misery, to despatch
His nighted life; moreover, to desery
The strength of the enemy.
Osw. I must needs after him, madam, with my letter.
Reg. Our troops set forth to-morrow: stay with us
The ways are dangerous.
Osw. I may not, madam;
My lady charg'd my duty in this business.

Reg. Why should she write to Edmund? Might not you
Transport her purposes by word? Belike,
Something—I know not what,—I'll love thee much;
Let me unseal the letter.
Osw. Madam, I had rather—
Reg. I know your lady does not love her husband,
I am sure of that; and, at her late being here,
She gave strange oaths, and most speaking looks
To noble Edmund. I know, you are of her bosom.
Osw. I, madam?

Reg. I speak in understanding: y'are, I know it,
Therefore, I do advise you, take this note:
My lord is dead: Edmund and I have talk'd,
And more convenient is he for my hand,
Than for your lady's. —You may gather more.
If you do find him, pray you, give him this;
And when your mistress hears thus much from you,
I pray, desire her call her wisdom to her:
So, fare you well.
If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor,
Preferment falls on him that cuts him off.
Osw. Would I could meet him, madam: I would show
What party do I follow.

Reg. Fare thee well,

[Exeunt]

SCENE VI.—The Country near Dover.

Enter Glositer, and Edgar dressed like a Peasant.

Glo. When shall I come to the top of that same hill?
Edg. You do climb up it now: look, how we labour
Glo. Methinks, the ground is even.
Edg. Horribly steep
Hark! do you hear the sea?
Glo. No, truly.
Edg. Why, then your other senses grow imperfect
By your eyes' anguish.
Glo. So may it be, indeed.
Methinks, thy voice is alter'd; and thou speakest

[Mr. Lear, and his daughters: Enter the Countess of Kent, and other noble personages.]

Enter Cornelia, Physician, and French Soldiers.

Cor. Alack! 't is he: why, he was met even now
As mad as the vex'd sea: singing aloud;
Crown'd with rank fumer, and furrow weeds,
With noorlocks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flowers,
Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our sustaining corn. —A century send forth;
Search every acre in the high-grown field,
And bring him to our eye. —[Exit Officer.]—What can man's wisdom,
In the restoring his bereaved sense?
He, that helps him, take all my outward worth.

Phy. There is means, madam:
Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
The which he lacks; that to provoke in him
Are many simples operative, whose power
Will close the eye of anguish.

Cor. All bless'd secrets, all you publish'd virtues of the earth,
Spring with my tears! be aidant, and remediate,
In the good man's distress!—Seek, seek for him;
Lest his ungovern'd rage dissolve the life
That wants the means to lead it.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. News, madam:
The British powers are marching hitherward.

Cor. 'Tis known before; our preparation stands
In expectation of them.—O dear father!
It is thy business that I go about,

[Desires to follow. Important.]
in better phrase, and matter, than thou didst.

Edg. Y' are much deceiv'd: in nothing am I chang'd,
But in my garments.

Glo. Methinks, y' are better spoken.

Edg. Come on, sir; here's the place: stand still.—
How fearful,
And dizz'y 'tis to cast one's eyes so low!
The crow's, and crows' thoughts, that wing the midway air,
Show scarce so gross as beetles: half-way down
Hangs one that gathers samphire: dreadful trade!
Methinks, he seems no bigger than his head.
The fishermen, that walk upon the beach,
Appear like mice; and you'd tall anchoring bark,
Dismast'd to her cock'; her anchor, a boy.
Almost too small for sight. The murmuring surge,
That on th' unnumber'd idle pebbles chafes,
Cannot be heard so high.—I'll look no more;
Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight
Topple down headlong.

Glo. Set me where you stand.

Edg. Give me your hand; you are now within a foot
Of th' extreme verge; for all beneath the moon
Would I not leap upright.

Glo. Let go my hand.

Here, friend, is another purse; in it, a jewel
Well worth a poor man's taking: fairies, and gods,
Prosper it with thee! Go thou farther off:
Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.

Edg. Now fare you well, good sir.

Glo. With all my heart.

Edg. Why do I trifle thus with his despair,
Is done to eure it.

Glo. O, you mighties gods!
This world I do renounce, and in your sights
Shake patiently my great affliction off;
If I could bear it longer, and not fall
To quarrel with my great opposite wills,
My snuff, and leathart part of nature, should Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O, bless him!—
Now, fellow, fare thee well. [He leaps, and falls along.

Edg. Gone, sir: farewell.—

And yet I know not how conscious may rob
The treasury of life, when life itself
Yields to the theft: had he been where he thought,
By this had thought been past.—Alive, or dead?
Ho, you sir! friend!—Hear you, sir?—speak!
Thus might he pass indeed;—yet he revives.
What are you, sir?

Glo. Away, and let me die.

Edg. Hadst thou been aught but gosamer, feathers, air,
So many lathen down precipitating,
Thou'dst shiver'd like an egg: but thou dost breathe;
Hast heavy substance; bleed'st not; speak'st; art sound,
Ten musts at each make not the altitude,
Which thou hast perpendicularly fell:
Thy life's a miracle. Speak yet again.

Glo. But have I fallen, or no?

Edg. From the dread summit of this chalky bourn.
Look up a height; the shrill-gorg'd lark so far
Cannot be seen or heard: do but look up.

Glo. Alack! I have no eyes.—
Is weariedness depriv'd that benefit,
To end itself by death? 'T was yet some comfort,
When misery could beguile the tyrant's rage,
And frustrate his proud will.

Edg. Give me your arm: [Helping him up,]
Up:—so;—how is't? Feel you your legs? You stand.

Glo. Too well, too well.

Edg. This is above all strangeness
Upon the crown o' the cliff, what thing was that
Which parted from you?

Glo. A poor unfortunate beggar

Edg. As I stood here below, methought, his eyes
Were too full moons; he had a thousand noses,
Horns whelk'd, and was like the curridged sea:
It was some fiend: therefore, thou happy father,
Think that the clearest gods, who make them honours
Of men's impossibilities, have preserv'd thee.

Glo. I do remember now: henceforth I' ll bear
Affliction, till it do very out itself

Edg. Fare thee well. and patient thoughts. —But who comes here?

Enter Lear, fantastically dressed with Straws and Flowers.

The safer sense will ne'er accommodate
His master thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for coinage; I am the king himself.

Edg. O, thou side-piercing sight!

Lear. Nature's above art in that respect. —There's your press-money. That fellow handles his bow like a row-keeper: draw me a clothier's yard. —Look, look!
A mouse. Peace, peace! —this piece of toasted cheese will not. —There's my g Aunt; I'll prove it on a giant. —Bring up the brown bills. —O, well-flown, bird!
—'t the clout, 't the clout: hewgh! —Give the word.

Edg. Sweet marjoram.

Lear. Pass.

Glo. I know that voice.

Lear. Ha! Goneril! — with a white head! — They fraid'd me like a dog; and told me, I had white hairs in my beard, ere the black ones were there. To say ay, and no, to every thing I said! — Ay' and no' too was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter, when the thunder would not peace at my bidding, there I found 'em, there I smelt 'em out. Go to, they are not men o' their words: they told me I was every thing:
it's a lie, I am not ague-proof.

Glo. The trick of that voice I do well remember:
Is't not the king?

Lear. Ay, every inch a king:
When I do stare, see how the subject quakes.
I pardon that man's life: what was thy cause?

Adultery.

Lear. Thou shalt not die: die for adultery? No:

The wren goes to't, and the small gilded fly
Does leecher in my sight.

Lear. Let copulation thrive; for Gloster's bastard son
Was kinder to his father, than my daughters
Got 'tween the lawful sheets.

To't, luxury, poll-mill, for I lack soldiers.

Edg. Behold yond' simmering dame,
Whose face between her forks presageth snow;
That mimble's virtue, and does shake the head
To bear of pleasure's name:

The fishew, nor the soiled horse, goes to's
With a more riotous appetite.

Lear. From the waist they are centaurs,
Though women all above:
But to the girdle do the gods inherit,
Beneath is all the fiends: there's hell, there's dark tess, there is the sulphurous pit, burning, scalding, stench, consumption;—lie, lie, lie: pah; pah! Give me an ounce of civet; good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination: there's money for thee.

Glo. O, let me kiss that hand!

Lear. Let me wipe it first; it smells of mortality.

Glo. O, the piece of nature! This great world Shall so wear out to nought.—Dost thou know me?

Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough. Dost thou squirm at me? No, no thy worst, blind Cupid; I'll not love.—Read thou this challenge: mark but the penning of it.

Glo. Were all the letters sung, I could not see one. Edg. I would not take this from report; it is, And my heart breaks at it.

Lear. Read.

Glo. What! with the case of eyes?

Lear. O, ho! are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse? Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light: yet you see how this world goes.

Glo. I see it feelingly.

Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears; see how yond justice rules upon yond simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: change places; and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief?—Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar?

Glo. Ay, sir.

Lear. And the creature run from the cur? There thou mightest behold the great image of authority: a dog's obey'd in office.——Thou rascal headle, hold thy bloody hand! Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thine own back; Thou hotly lust'st to use her in that kind For which thou whipp'st her. The usurer hangs the covenor.

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear; Robes, and fur'd gowns, hide all? Plate sin with gold, And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks: Arm it in rags, a pigmy's straw doth Pierce it. None does offend, none, I say, none; I'll able 'em: Take that of me, my friend, who have the power To seal th' accuser's lips. Get thee glass eyes; And, like a scurv'y politician, seem To see the things thou dost not.—Now, now, now, now!

Pull off my boots: harder, harder; so.

Edg. O matter, and impertinency mix'd;

Reason in madness!

Lear. If thou will weep my fortunes, take my eyes. I know they're well enough; thy name is Gloster: Thou must be patient. We came crying hither; Thou know'st, the first time that we smell the air — We wawl, and cry. I will preach to thee: mark me.

Glo. Alack! alack the day!

Lear. When we are born, we cry that we are come To this great stage of fools.—'T is a good plot,* it were a delicate stratagem, to shoe A troop of horse with felt. I'll put it in proof; And when I have stolen upon those sons-in-law, Then kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill.

Enter a Gentleman with Attendants.

Gent. O! here he is. lay hand upon him.—Sir, Your most dear daughter—

Lear. No rescue? What! a prisoner? I am even The natural feeling of fortune.—Use me well,

You shall have ransom. Let me have a surgeon, I am cut to the brains.

Gent. You shall have any thing

Lear. No seconds? All myself?

Why, this would make a man, a man of salt, To use his eyes for garden water-pots, Ay, and for laying autumn's dust.5

Gent. Good sir,—

Lear. I will die bravely, Like a sumptuous bridegroom. What! I will be jovial, Come, come; I am a king, my masters, know you that?

Gent. You are a royal one, and we obey you.

Lear. Then there's life in it. Nay, an you get it, you shall get it by running. Sa, sa, sa, sa.

[Exit: Attendants follow.

Gent. A sight most pitiful in the meanest wretch, Past speaking in a king!—Thou hast one daughter, Who redeems nature from the general curse Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail, gentle sir.

Gent. Sir, speed you; what's your will?

Edg. Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward?

Gent. Most sure, and vulgar: every one hears that, Which can distinguish sound.

Edg. But, by your favour, How near's the other army?

Gent. Near, and on speedy foot; the main descry Stands on the hourly thought.

Edg. I thank you, sir: that's all.

Gent. Though that the queen on special cause is here, Her army is mov'd on.

Edg. I thank you, sir. [Exit Gent.

Glo. You ever-gentle gentle, take my breath from me: Let not my worser spirit tempt me again To die before you please!

Edg. Well pray you, father.

Glo. Now, good sir, what are you?

Edg. A most poor man, made tame to fortune's blows;

Who, by the art of knowing and feeling sorrows, Am pregnant to good pity. Give me your hand, I'll lead you to some biding.

Glo. Hearty thanks; The bounty and the benison of heaven To boot, and boot!

Enter Oswald.

Osw. A proclaim'd prize! Most happy! That eyeless head of thine was first fram'd flesh To raise my fortunes.—Thou old unhappy traitor, Briefly thyself remember,—the sword is out [Drawing That must destroy thee.

Glo. Now let thy friendly hand Put strength enough to it. [Edgar interposes

Osw. Wherefore, bold peasant, Dar'st thou support a publish'd traitor? Hence: Lost that th' infection of his fortune take Like hold on thee. Let go his arm.

Edg. Ch'ill not let go, zir, without varther casion.

Osw. Let go, slave, or thou diest.

Edg. Good gentleman, go your gait, and let poor Folk pass. And ch'ud ha' been swagger'd out of my life; it would not ha' been so long as 'tis by a vort-night. Nay, come not near the old man; keep out, ehe vor'y, or see try whether your costard or my bawb* be the harder. Ch'ill be plain with you.

Osw. Out, duaghill!

KING

Edg. Ch'ill pick your teeth, zir. Come; no matter for your foins.

[They fight; and EDGAR strikes him down.

Osw. Slave, thou hast slain me.—Villain, take my purse.
If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body;
And give the letters, which thou find'st about me,
To Edmund earl of Gloster: seek him out
Upon the British party.—O, unimply death! [Dies.

Edg. I know thee well; a serviceable villain;
As duteous to the vices of thy mistress,
As badness would desire.

Glo. What! is he dead?

Edg. Sit you down, father: rest you.
Let's see his pockets: these letters, that he speaks of,
May be my friends. —He's dead; I am only sorry
He had no other death's-man.—Let us see:—
Leave, gentle wax; and, mannerly, blame us not:
To know our enemies' minds we rip their hearts,
Their papers is more lawful.

[Reads.] "Let our reciprocal vows be remember'd.
You have many opportunities to cut him off; if your will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offer'd.
There is nothing done, if he return the conqueror; then,
and I the prisoner, and his bed my gaol, from the loathed warmth whereof deliver me, and supply the place for your labour.

"Your (wife, so I would say)
"Affectionate servant,
"Goneril."

O, unextinguish'd blaze of woman's will!
A plot upon her virtuous husband's life;
And the exchange, my brother:—Here, in the sands,
This I'll rake up, the post unsanctified
Of murderous leeches; and in the mature time,
With this ungracious paper strike the sight
Of the death-practis'd duke. For him 'tis well,
That of thy death and business I can tell.

Glo. The king is mad: how stiff is my vile sense,
That I stand up, and have ingenious feeling
Of my huge sorrow! Better I were distract;
So should my thoughts be sever'd from my griefs,
And woes, by wrong imaginations, loose.

The knowledge of themselves.

[Drum afar off.

Edg. Give me your hand:
Far off, methinks, I hear the beaten drum.
Come, father; I'll bestow you with a friend.] Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—A Tent in the French Camp. LEAR on a Bed, asleep; Doctor, Gentleman, and others, attending:
Enter CORDELLA and KENT.

Cor. O thou good Kent! how shall I live, and work,
To match thy goodness? My life will be too short,
And every measure fail me.

Kent. To be acknowledg'd, madam, is o'er-paid.
All my reports go with the modest truth;
Nor more, nor less, but so.

Cor. Be better suited:
These weeds are memories of those worser hours.
I pray thee, put them off.

Kent. Pardon me, dear madam;
Yet, to be known shortens my main intent:
My house I make it, that you know me not,
Till time and I think meet.

Cor. Then be't so, my goodlord.—How does the king?

[To the Physician.

Doct. Madam, sleepst still.

Cor. O ye kind gods,
Cure this great breach in his abused nature!
Th' untrun'd and jarring* senses, O, wind up
Of this child-changed father!

Doct. So please your master.
That we may wake the king? he hath slept long
Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and proceed
P' the sway of your own will. Is he array'd?

Doct. Ay, madam; in the heaviness of his sleep,
We put fresh garments on him.
Kent. Good madam, be by when we do awake him!
I doubt not of his temperance.

Cor. Very well. [Music.

Doct. Please you, draw near.—Louder the music
there.

Cor. O my dear father! Restoration, hang
Thy medicine on my lips; and let this kiss
Repair those violent harms, that my two sisters
Have in thy reverence made!

Kent. Kind and dear princess. Cor. Had you not been their father, these white flakes
Had challeng'd pity of them. Was this a face
To be expos'd against the warring* winds? Is
To stand against the deep dread-bolted thunder?
In the most terrible and nimble stroke
Of quick, cross lightning? to watch (poor perdu!)
With this thin helm? Mine enemy's dog,
Though he had bit me, should have stood that night
Against my fire; and wast thou, poor father
To hovel thee with swine, and rogues forborn,
In short and musty straw? Alack, alack!
'T is wonder, that thy life and wits at once
Had not concluded all.—He wakes; speak to him.

Doct. Madam, do you; it is fittest.

Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares you majesty?

LEAR. You do me wrong, to take me out o' the grave.—
Thou art a soul in bliss, but I am bound
Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do seald like molten lead.

Cor. Sir, do you know me?

LEAR. You are a spirit, I know. Where* did you die?

Cor. Still, still, far wide.

Doct. He's scarce awake: let him alone awhile.

LEAR. Where have I been? Where am I?—Fair day-light?

I am mightily abus'd.—I should even die with pity
To see another thus. —I know not what to say.—
I will not swear, these are my hands:—let's sec;
I feel this pin pricking. Would I were assur'd
Of my condition!

Cor. O! look upon me, sir,
And hold your hands in benediction o'er me.—
No, sir, you must not kneel.

LEAR. Pray, do not mock me:
I am a very foolish fond old man,
Fourscore and upward,* not an hour more nor less;
And, to deal plainly, I fear, I am not in my perfect mind.
Methinks, I should know you, and know this man;
Yet I am doubtful, for I am mainly ignorant.
What place this is: and all the skill I have Rememberes not these garments: nor I know not Where I did lodge last night. Do not laugh at me,
For, as I am a man, I think this lady

Cor. And so I am, I am.

Lear. Be your tears wet? Yes, faith, I pray, weep not:
If you have poison for me, I will drink it.
I know, you do not love me: for your sisters
Have, as I do remember, done me wrong:
You have some cause, they have not.

Cor. No cause, no cause.

Lear. Am I in France?

In your own kingdom, sir.

Lear. Do not abuse me.

Doct. Be comforted, good madam: the great rage,
You see, is cur'd in him; and yet it is danger
To make him even o'er the time he has lost.
Desire him to go in: trouble him no more,
Till farther settling.

Cor. Will 't please your highness walk?

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Camp of the British Forces, near Dover.

Enter, with Drums and Colours, EDMUND, REGAN, Officers, Soldiers, and others.

Edm. Know of the duke, if his last purpose hold;
Or whether since he is advis'd by augury
To change the course. He's full of alteration,
And self-reproving:—bring his constant pleasure.

[To an Officer, who exit.

Reg. Our sister's man is certainly miscarried.

Edm. 'Tis to be doubted, madam.

Reg. Now, sweet lord, you know the goodness
I intend upon you: Tell me, but truly, and then speak the truth,
Do you not love my sister?

Edm. In honour'd love.

Reg. But have you never found my brother's way
To the forefend place?

Edm. That thought abuses you.

Reg. I am doubtful that you have been conjunct,
And bosom'd with her, as far as we call hers.

Edm. No, by mine honour, madam.

Reg. I never shall endure her. Dear my lord,
Be not familiar with her.

Edm. Fear me; not.

She, and the duke her husband,—

Enter Albany, Goneril, and Soldiers.

Gon. I had rather lose the battle, than that sister
Should loon your hand and me. [Aside.

Alb. Our very lovely sister, well be met.—

Sir. this I hear,—the king is come to his daughter,
With others, whom the rigour of our state
For'd to cry out. Where I could not be honest,
I never yet was valiant: for this business,
It toucheth us, as France invades our land,
Not holds the king, with others. whom I fear,
Most just and heavy causes make oppose.

Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.

Reg. Why is this reason'd?

Gon. Combine together 'gainst the enemy;
For these domestic and particular broils
Are not the question here.

Alb. Let us, then, determine
With the ancient of war on our proceedings.

Lear. You must hear with me:
Pray you now, forget and forgive: I am old, and foolish.

[Exeunt Lear, Cordelia, Doctor, and Attendants.

Gent. Holds it true, sir, that the duke of Cornwall
Was so slain?

Kent. Most certain, sir.

Gent. Who is conductor of his people?

Kent. As 'tis said, the bastard son of Gloster.

Gent. They say, Edgar, his banished son, as with the Earl of Kent in Germany.

Kent. Report is changeable. 'Tis time to lock
About; the powers of the kingdom approach space.

Gent. The arbitrement is like to be bloody. Fare
You well, sir.

Kent. My point and period will be thoroughly wrought;
Or well or ill, as this day's battle's fought. [Exit

Edm. I shall attend you presently at your tent.

Reg. Sister, you'll go with us?

Gon. No.

Reg. 'Tis most convenient; pray you, go with us.

Gon. O, ho! I know the riddle. [Aside]—I will go.

Enter Edgar, disguised.

Edg. If o'er your grace had speech with man so poor,
Hear me one word.

Alb. I'll overtake you.—Speak.

[Exeunt Edmund, Regan, Goneril, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this letter.

If you have victory, let the trumpet sound
For him that brought it: wretched though I seem,
I can produce a champion, that will prove
What is avouched there. If you miscarry,
Your business of the world hath so an end,
And machination ceases. Fortune love you! [Going.

Alb. Stay, till I have read the letter.

Edg. I was forbid it.

When time shall serve, let but the herald cry,
And I'll appear again. [Exit.

Alb. Why, fare thee well; I will o'per look thy paper.

Re-enter Edmund.

Edm. The enemy's in view; draw up your powers.
Here's the guess of their true strength and forces
By diligent discovery; [Showing a Paper.] but your haste
Is now urg'd on you.

Alb. We will greet the time. [Exit.

Edm. To both these sisters have I sworn my love;
Each jealous of the other, as the stag
Are of the adder. Which of them shall I take?
Both? one? or neither? Neither can be enjoy'd,
If both remain alive: to take the widow
Exasperates, makes mad, her sister Goneril;
And hardly shall I carry out my side,
Her husband being alive. Now then, we'll use
His countenance for the battle; which being done,
Let her who would be rid of him devise
His speedy taking off. As for the mercy
Which he intends to Lear, and to Cordelia,
The battle done, and they within our power,
Shall never see his pardon; for my state
Stands on me to defend, not to debate. [Exit
KING LEAR.

ACT V.

SCENE II.—A Field between the two Camps.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, Lear, Cordelia, and their Forces; and execut.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this tree.

For your good host, pray that the right may thrive.

If ever I return to you again, I'll bring you comfort.

Atron; afterwards a Retreat. Re-enter Edgar.

Edg. Away, old man! give me thy hand: away!

King Lear hath lost, he and his daughter ta’en.

Give me thy hand; come on.

Glo. No farther, sir: a man may rot even here.

Edg. What! in ill thoughts again? Men must endure

Their going hence, even as their coming hither:

Ripeness is all. Come on.

And that's true too. [Execut.

SCENE III.—The British Camp near Dover.

Enter, in conquest, with Drum and Colours, Edmund; Lear and Cordelia, as Prisoners; Captain, Officers, Soldiers, &c.

Edm. Some officers take them away: good guard,

Until their greater pleasures first be known,

That are to censure them.

Cor. We are not the first, who, with best meaning, have incurred the worst.

For thee, oppressed king, am I cast down;

Myself could else out-frown false fortune's frowns.

Shall we not see these daughters, and these sisters?

Lear. No, no, no, no! Come, let's away to prison:

We two alone will sing like birds i' the cage;

When thou dost ask me blessing, I'll kneel down,

And ask of thee forgiveness. So we'll live,

And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh

At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues

Talk of court news; and we'll talk with them too,

Who loses, and who wins: who's in, who's out;

And take upon 's the mystery of things,

As if we were God's spies: and we'll wear out,

In a wall'd prison, packs and seets of great ones,

That ebb and flow by the moon.

Edm. Take them away.

Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia,
The gods themselves throw incense. Have I caused thee?

[Embracing her.

He that parts us shall bring a brand from heaven,

And fire us hence like foxes. Wipe thine eyes; the gougers shall devour them, flesh and fell,

Ere they shall make us weep: we'll see them starve first.

Come. [Execut Lear and Cordelia, guarded.

Edm. Come hither, captain; hark.

Take thou this note; [Giving a Paper. go, follow them to prison.

One step I have advance'd thee: if thou dost

As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way

To noble fortunes. Know thou this, that men

Are as the time is; to be tender-minded

Does not become a sword. Thy great employment

Will not bear question: either say they 'tis not,

Or thrive by other means.

Capt. I'll do't, my lord. [done

About it; and write happy, when thou hast

Mark.—I say, instantly; and carry it so,

As I have set it down.

Capt. I cannot draw a dart, nor eat dried oates;

If it be man's work, I will do it. [Exit Captains.

Flourish. Enter Albany, General, Regan, Officers, and Attendants.

Alb. Sir, you have shown to-day your valiant strain.

And fortune led you well. You have the captives,

Who were the opposites of this day's strife:

We do require them of you, so to use them,

As we shall find their merits, and our safety,

May equally determine.

Edm. Sir, I thought it fit

To send the old and miserable king

To some retention, and appointed guard;

Whose age has charms in it, whose title more,

To pluck the common bosom on his side,

And turn our impress'd lances in our eyes,

Which do command them. With him I sent the queen

My reason all the same; and they are ready

To-morrow, or at farther space, 't appear

Where you shall hold your session. At this time,

We sweat, and bleed; the friend hath lost his friend

And the best quarrels, in the heat, are curs'd

By those that feel their sharpness.—

The question of Cordelia, and her father,

Requires a fitter place.

Alb. Sir, by your patience,

I hold you but a subject of this war,

Not as a brother.

Reg. That's as we list to grace him:

Methinks, our pleasure might have been demanded,

If you had spoke so far. He led our powers,

Bore the commission of my place and person;

To which immediacy may well stand up,

And call itself your brother.

Gon. Not so hot:

In his own grace he doth exalt himself,

More than in your addition.

Reg. In my rights,

By me invested, he compeers the best.

Gon. That were the most, if he should husband you

Gon. Holla! holla! That eye that told you so look'd but a-squint.

Reg. Lady, I am not well; else I should answer

From a full-flowing stomach.—General,

Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony:

Dispose of them, of me; the walls are thine.

Witness the world, that I create thee here

My lord and master.

Gon. Mean you to enjoy him?

Alb. The let-alone lies not in your good will.

Edm. Nor in thine, lord.

Alb. Half-blooded fellow, yes.

Reg. Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine. [To Edmund.

Alb. Stay yet; hear reason.—Edmund, I arrest thee

On capital treason; and, in thy arrest,

This gilded serpent. [Pointing to Gon.]—For thy claim, fair sister,

I bar it in the interest of my wife;

'Tis she is sub-contracted to this lord,

And I, her husband, contradict your bans.

If you will marry, make your love to me,

My lady is bespoke.

Gon. An interlude! 14
Enter Edgar, armed, preceded by a Trumpet.

Alb. Ask him his purposes, why he appears Upon this call o' the trumpet.

Her. What are you? Your name? your quality? and why you answer This present summons?

Edg. Know, my name is lost; By treason's tooth bare-gnawn, and canker-bit: Yet am I noble, as the adversary I come to cope withal.

Alb. Which is that adversary?

Edg. What's he, that speaks for Edmund earl of Gloster?

Edm. Himself: what say'st thou to him?

Edg. Draw thy sword, That if my speech offend a noble heart, Thy arm may do thee justice; here is mine:

[Drawing.]

Behold, it is the privilege of mine honours, My oath, and my profession. I protest, Mauge thy strength, skill, youth, and eminence, Despite thy victor sword, and fire-new fortune, Thy valour, and thy heart, thou art a traitor: False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father; Conspirant gainst this high illustrious prince; And, from th' extremest upward of thy head, To the descent and dust below thy foot: A most toad-spotted traitor. Say thou, ‘No,’ This sword, this arm, and my best spairs, are bent

To prove upon thy heart, whereeto I speak, Thou liest.

Edm. In wisdom, I should ask thy name; But since thy outside looks so fair and warlike, And that thy tongue some say of breathing Breaths, What safe and nicely I might well delay By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn. Back do I toss these reasons to thy head; With the hell-hated lie o'erwhelm thy heart; Which, for they yet glance by, and scarcely bruise. This sword of mine shall give them instant way, Where they shall rest for ever.—Trumpets, speak

[Aclamations. They fight. Edmund falls]

Alb. O, save him! save him!

Gon. This is more practice, Gloster: By the laws of arms thou wast not bound to answer An unknown opposit: thou art not vanquish'd, But cozen'd and beguil'd.

Alb. Shut your mouth, dame; Or with this paper shall I stop it?—Hold, sir! Thou worse than any name, read thine own evil.

[She swatches at the Letter!]

No tearing, lady; I perceive, you know it.

[Given the Letter to Edmund]

Gon. Say, if I do, the laws are mine, not thine: Who can arraign me for this? Alb. Most monstrous! Know'st thou this paper?

Gon. Ask me not what I know. [Exit Goneril. Alb. Go after her: she's desperate; govern her. [Exit an Officer

Edm. What you have charg'd me with, that have I done, And more, much more; the time will bring it out: 'T is past, and so am I. But what art thou, That hast this fortune on me? If thou 'rt noble, I do forgive thee.

Edg. Let's exchange charity. I am no less in blood than thou art, Edmund; If more, the more thou hast wrong'd me.

[Taking off his Helmet]

My name is Edgar, and thy father's son. The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices Make instruments to plague: The dark and vicious place where thee he got Cost him his eyes. Edmund. Thou hast spoken right, 't is true; The wheel is come full circle: I am here. Alb. Methought, thy very gait did prophesy A royal nobleness. I must embrace thee: Let sorrow split my heart, if ever I Did hate thee, or thy father.

Edg. Worthy prince, I know't.

Alb. Where have you hid yourself? How have you known the miseries of your father?

Edg. By nursing them, my lord.—List a brief tale; And when 't is told, O, that my heart would burst!— The bloody proclamation to escape, That follow'd me so near. O, our lives' sweetness! That with! the pain of death we'd hourly die, Rather than die at once! taught me to shift Into a madman's rage; 't is an assumption That every does disdain'd; and in this habit Met I my father with his bleeding rings, Their precious stones new lost; became his guide, Led him, begg'd for him, sav'd him from despair; Never (O fault!) reveal'd myself unto him,
Until some half hour past, when I was arm'd,
Not sure, though hoping, of this good success,
I ask'd his blessing, and from first to last
Told him my pilgrimage: but his law'd heart,
[Alack! too weak the conflict to support]
Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief,
Burst smilingly.

Edm. This speech of yours hath mov'd me,
And shall, perchance, do good; but speak you on:
You look as you had something more to say.

Alb. If there be more mawful, hold it in,
For I am almost ready to dissolve,
Hearing of this.

Edg. This would have seem'd a period
To such as love not sorrow; but another,
To amplify too much, would make much more,
And top extremity.

Whilst I was big in clamour, came there a man,
Who, having seen me in my worst estate,
Shunn'd my abhor'd society; but then, finding
Who 't was that so endur'd, with his strong arros
He fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out
As he'd burst heaven; threw him on my father;
Told the most pitious tale of Lear and him,
That ever ear receiv'd; which in recounting,
His grief grew puissant, and the strings of life
Began to crack; twice, then, the trumpets sounded,
And there I left him trans'd.

Alb. But who was this?

Edg. Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent; who in disguise
Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service
Improper for a slave.

Enter a Gentleman hastily, with a bloody Knife.

Gent. Help, help! O help! What kind of help?
Alb. Speak, man.

Edg. What means that bloody knife?

Gent. 'Tis hot, it smokes;
It came even from the heart of—O! she's dead:

Gent. Your lady, sir, your lady: and her sister
By her is poison'd; she hath confess'd it.

Edm. I was contrived to them both: all three
Now marry in an instant.

Alb. Produce the bodies, be they alive or dead!
This judgment of the heavens, that makes us tremble,
Touches us not with pity.

[Exit Gentleman.]

Enter Kent.

Edg. Here comes Kent.

Alb. O! it is he.
The time will not allow the compliment,
Which very manners urges.

Kent. I am come
To bid my king and master aye good night:
Is he not here?

Alb. Great thing of us forgot!—
Speak, Edmund, where's the king? and where's Cor-
Seest thou this object, Kent? [delir.]

[The Bodies of Goneril and Regan are brought in.]
Kent. Alack! why thus?

Edm. Yet Edmund was belov'd:
The one the other poison'd for my sake,
And after slew herself.

Alb. Even so—Cover their faces.

Edm. I pant for life:—some good I mean to do,
Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send,—
Be brief in it,—to the castle; for my writ
Is on the life of Lear, and on Cordelia.—

Nay, send in time.

Alb. Run, run! O, run!

Edg. To whom, my lord?—Who has the office? send Thy token of reprieve.

Edm. Well thought on: take my sword,
Give it the captain.

Alb. Haste thee, for thy life. [Exit Edgar.
Edm. He hath commissio from thy wife and me
To hang Cordelia in the prison, and
To lay the blame upon her own despair,
That she forfend herself.

Alb. The gods defend her! Bear him hence awhile!
[Edmund is borne off.

Enter Lear with Cordelia dead in his Arms; Edgar,
Officer, and others.

Lear. Howl, howl, howl, howl!—O! you are men of stones:
Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so
That heaven's vault should crack.—She's gone for ever.—
I know when one is dead, and when one lives;
She's dead as earth.—Lead me a looking-glass:
If that her breath will mist or stain the shine,
Why, then she lives.

Kent. Is this the promis'd end?

Edg. Or image of that horror?

Alb. Fall, and cease!

Lear. This feather stirs; she lives! if it be so,
It is a chance which does redeem all sorrows
That ever I have felt.

Kent. O, my good master! [Kneeling

Lear. Pr'ythee, away.

Edg. 'T is noble Kent, your friend
Lear. A plague upon you, murderers, traitors all!
I might have save'd her; now, she's gone for ever.—
Cordelia, Cordelia! stay a little. Ha!

Kent. What is't thou say'st?—Her voice was ever soft,
Gentle, and low—an excellent thing in woman.
I kill'd the slave that was a haging thee.

Off. 'T is true, my lords, he did.

Lear. Did I not, fellow? I have seen the day, with my good biting faulechion
I would have made them skip: I am old now.
And these same crosses spoil me.—Who are you?
Mine eyes are not o' the best: I'll tell you straight.

Kent. If fortune brag of two she lov'd and hated,
One of them we behold.

Lear. This is a dull light:—are you not Kent?

Kent. The same
Your servant Kent. Where is your servant Caius?

Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you that;
He'll strike, and quickly too.—He's dead and rotten.

Kent. No, my good lord; I am the very man—
Lear. I'll see that straight.

Kent. That from your first of difference and decay,
Have follow'd your sad steps.

Lear. You are welcome hither.

Kent. Nor no man else. All's cheerless, dark, and deadly.

Your eldest daughters have fordone themselves,
And desperately are dead.

Lear. Ay, so I think.

Alb. He knows not what he says? and vain is it,
That we present us to him.

Edg. Very bootless.

[Enter an Officer.

Off. Edmund is dead, my lord.
That's but a trifle here—
You lords, and noble friends, know our intent.
What comfort to this great decay may come,
Shall be applied: for us, we will resign,
During the life of this old majesty,
To him our absolute power.—To you your rights.
[To Edgar and Kent.
With boot, and such addition, as your honours
Have more than merited.—All friends shall taste
The wages of their virtue, and all foes
The cup of their deserving.—O! see, see!

Lear. And my poor fool is hang'd! No, no, no life:
Why should a dog, a horse, a rat, have life,
And thou no breath at all? Thou 'rt come no more,
Never, never, never, never, never!
Pray you, undo this button: thank you, sir.—
Do you see this? Look on her,—look,—her lips.—
Look there, look there!—

Edg. He faints.—My lord, my lord!—

Kent. Break heart; I pray thee, break!

[Edg. looks up, my lord.

Kent. Vex not his ghost: O! let him pass: he hates him.
That would upon the rack of this tough world
Stretch him out longer.

Edg. He is gone, indeed.

Kent. The wonder is, he hath endure'd so long:
He but usurp'd his life.

Alb. Bear them from hence. Our present business
Is general woe.—Friends of my soul, you twain
[To Kent and Edgar.

Rule in this realm, and the gory state sustain.

Kent. I have a journey, sir, shortly to go:
My master calls me;* I must not say, no.

Alb.* The weight of this sad time we must obey,
Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say.
The oldest hath borne most: we, that are young,
Shall never see so much, nor live so long.

[Exeunt, with a dead March.
Othello. The Moor of Venice.

Dramatis Personae.

Montano, Governor of Cyprus.
Clown, Servant to Othello.
Herald.
Desdemona, Daughter to Brabantio, and Wife to Othello.
Emilia, Wife to Iago.
Bianca, a Courtezan of Venice.

Officers. Gentlemen, Messengers, Musicians, Sailors, Attendants, &c.

Scene, for the first Act, in Venice; during the rest of the Play, at a Sea-Port in Cyprus.

Act I.

Scene I.—Venice. A Street.

Enter Rodrigo in Choler, and Iago.

Rod. Tush! never tell me, I take it much unkindly, at thou, Iago, who hast had my purse, as if the strings were thine, should'st know of this. Iago, 'Sblood! but you will not hear me: if ever I did dream of such a matter, abhor me. Rod. Thou told'st me thou didst hold him in thy hate; Iago. Despise me, if I do not. Three great ones of the city, in personal suit to make me his lieutenant, Off-capp'd to him: and, by the faith of man, I know my price: I am worth no worse a place; but he, as loving his own pride and purposes, Evades them, with a bombast circumstance, Horribly stuff'd with epithets of war: And, in conclusion, counsel my mediators; "For certes," says he, "I have already chose my officer." And what was he? Forsooth, a great arithmetician, One Michael Cassio, a Florentine, A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife; That never set a squadron in the field, Nor the division of a battle knows More than a spinner; unless the bookish theore, Wherein the toged' consuls can propose As masterly as he; mere prattle, without practice Is all his soldiership. But he, sir, had th' election, and I.—of whom his eyes had seen the proof, At Rhodes, at Cyprus, and on other grounds, Christian and heathen,—must be be-lee'd and calm'd By debitor and creditor, this counter-caster: He, in good time, must his lieutenant be, and I, God bless the mark! his Moor-ship's ancient. Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his hangman. Iago. But there's no remedy: 'tis the curse of service, Preferment goes by favour and affection. Not by the old gradation, where each second Stood heir to the first. Now, sir, be judge yourself. Whether I in any just terms am affin'd To love the Moor. Rod. I would not follow him, then. Iago. O, sir! content yeot: I follow him to serve my turn upon him: We cannot all be masters, nor all masters Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall mark Many a dueots and knee-crooking knave, That, doting on his own obscurous bondage, Wears out his time, much like his master's ass. For nought but provender; and when he's old, coucher's. Whip me such honest knaves. Others there are, Who, learn'd in forms and usages* of duty, Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves, And, throwing but shows of service on their lords, Do well thrive by them: and when they have lin'd their coats, Do themselves homage: these fellows have some soul And such a one do I profess myself. Foi, sir, It is as sure as you are Roderigo, Were I the Moor, I would not be Iago. In following him, I follow but myself; Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty, But seeming so, for my peculiar end: For when my outward action doth demonstrate The native act and figure of my heart In compliment extern, 't is not long after But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve For, draw to peck at: I am not what I am. Rod. What a full* fortune does the thick-lips owe, If he can carry 't thus! Iago. Call up her father, Rouse him: make after him, poison his delight, Proclaim him in the streets: incense his kinsmen; And though he in a fertile climate dwell, Plague him with flies: though that his joy be joy,
Yet throw such changes of vexation on't,
As it may lose some colour.

Rod. Hero is her father's house: I'll call aloud.
Ingo. Do; with like clamoros5 accent, and dire yell,
As when, by night and negligence, the fire
Is spied in populous cities.

Rod. What ho! Brabantio! signior Brabantio, ho!
Ingo. Awake, what, ho! Brabantio! thieves! thieves!

Look to your house, your daughter, and your bags!
Thieves! thieves!

Enter Brabantio, above, at a Window.

Br. What is the reason of this terrible summons?
What is the matter there?

Ingo. Are your doors look'd at?

Br. Why? wherefore ask you this?

Ingo. 'Zounds! sir, you are robbed; for shame, put on your gown:
Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soul:
Even now, now, very now, an old black ram
Is yapping your white ewe. Arise, arise!
Awake the snorting citizens with the bell.
Or else the devil will make a grandire of you.

Arise, I say.

Br. What, have you lost your wits?

Ingo. Most reverend signior, do you know my voice?

Br. Not I: what are you?

Ingo. My name is Roderigo.

Br. The worse welcome:
I have charg'd thee not to haunt about my doors.
In honest plainness thou hast heard me say,
My daughter is not for thee; and now, in madness,
Being full of supper and distempering draughts,
Upon malicious bravery dost thou come
To start my quiet.

Rod. Sir, sir, sir,—

Br. But thou must needs be sure,
My spirit and my place have in them power
To make this bitter to thee.

Rod. Patience, good sir.

Br. What tell'st thou me of robbing? this is Venice;
My house is not a grange.

Rod. Most grave Brabantio,
In simple and pure soul I come to you.

Ingo. 'Zounds! sir, you are one of those, that will not serve God, if the devil bid you. Because we come to do you service, and you think we are ruffians, you'll have your daughter covered with a Barbary horse; you'll have your nephews neigh to you; you'll have cousins for cousins, and genets for germans.

Br. What profane witch art thou?

Ingo. I am one, sir, that comes to tell you, your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs.

Br. Thou art a villain.

Ingo. You are—a senator.

Br. This shall answer: I know thee, Roderigo.

Rod. Sir, I will answer any thing. But I beseech
If 't be your pleasure, and most wise consent,
(As partly, I find it) that your fair daughter,
At this odd-even and dull watch o' the night,
Transported with no worse nor better guard,
But with a knave of common hire, a gondolier,
To the gross clausps of a lascivious Moor, —
If this be known to you, and your allowance,
We then have done you bold and saucy wrongs;
But if you know not this, my manners tell me,
We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe
That from the sense of all civility,
I thus would play and trifle with your reverence:
Your daughter, if you have not given her leave,
I say again, hath made a gross revolt,
Laying her duty, beauty, wit, and fortunes,
'Un an extravagant and wheeling stranger,
Of here and every where. Straight satisfy yourself
If she be in her chamber, or your house,
Let loose on me the justice of the state
For thus deluding you.

Br. Strike on the tinder, ho!
Give me a taper!—call up all my people!—
This accident is not unlike my dream;
Belief of it oppresses me already.—
Light, I say! light!

[Exit from above
Ingo. Farewell, for I must leave you
It seems not meet, nor wholesome to my place,
To be produc'd (as if I stay I shall)
Against the Moor: for, I, in knowing the state,
However this may gait him with some check
Cannot with safety cast him; for he's embark'd
With such loud reason to the Cyprus wars
(Which even now stand in act) that, for their souls,
Another of his fathom they have none,
To lead their business: in which regard,
Though I do hate him as I do hell pains,
Yet for necessity of present life,
I must show out a flag and sign of love,
Which is indeed but sign. That you shall surely find
him,
Lead to the sagittary the raised search;
And there will I be with him. So, farewell. [Exit.

Enter Brabantio, and Servants with Torches.

Br. It is too true an evil: gone she is;
And what's to come of my despaired time
Is sought but bitterness.—Now, Roderigo,
Where didst thou see her?—O, unhappy girl!—
With the Moor, 'say'st thou?—Who would be a father?
How didst thou know 't was she?—O! thou deceiv'st me
Past thought.—What said she to you?—Get more tapers!—
Raise all my kindred!—Are they married, think you?
Rod. Truly, I think, they are.

Br. O heaven!—How got she out?—O, treason of my blood!—

Fathers, from hence trust not your daughters' minds
By what you see them act.—Are there not charms,
By which the property of youth and maidhood
May be abus'd? Have you not read, Roderigo,
Of some such thing?

Rod. Yes, sir: I have, indeed. 18

Br. Call up my brother.—O, that you had ha her!—

Some one way, some another.—Do you know
Where we may apprehend her and the Moor?

Rod. I think, I can discover him, if you please
To get good guard, and go along with me.

Br. Pray you, lead on. 11 At every house I'll call;
I may command at most.—Get weapons, ho!
And raise some special officers of night.—
On, good Roderigo.—I'll desire your pains. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Street.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Attendants, with Torches.

Iago. Though in the trade of war I have slain men,
Yet do I hold it very stuff o’ the conscience
To do no contriv’d murder: I lack iniquity.
Sometimes, to do me service. Nine or ten times
I had thought to have jerk’d him here, under the ribs.

Oth. ’Tis better as it is.

Iago. Nay, but he prated,
And spoke such servy and provoking terms
Against your honour,
That, with the little godliness I have,
I did full hard forbear him. But, I pray, sir,
Are you fast married? for, be sure of this,
That the magnifico is much beloved;
And hath, in his effect, a voice potential,
As double as the duke’s: he will divorce you;
Or put upon you what restraint, or grievance,
The law (with all his might) enforce it on
Will give him cale.

Oth. Let him do his spite:
My services, which I have done the signiory,
Shall out-tongue his complaints. ’Tis yet to know,
Which, when I know that boasting is an honour,
I shall promulgate, I fetch my life and being
From men of royal siege: and my demerits
May speak, unbonneted, to as proud a fortune
As this that I have reach’d: for know, Iago,
But that I love the gentle Desdemona,
I would not my unhoused free condition
Put into circumscription and confine
For the sea’s worth. But, look! what lights come Yonder?

Iago. These are the raised father, and his friends:
You were best go in.

Oth. Not I; I must be found:
My parts, my title, and my perfect soul,
Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they?

Iago. By Janus, I think no.

Enter Cassio, and certain Officers with Torches.

Oth. The servants of the duke, and my lieutenant.
The goodness of the night upon you; friends,
What is the news?

Cas. The duke does greet you, general;
And be requires your haste, post-haste appearance,
Even on the instant.

Oth. What is the matter, think you?

Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine.
It is a business of some heat: the galleys
Have sent a dozen sequent messengers,
This very night, at one another’s heels;
And many of the consuls, rais’d and met,
Are at the duke’s already. You have been hotly call’d
When, being not at your lodging to be found, [for;
The senate sent above three several quests,
To search you out.

Oth. ’Tis well I am found by you.
Will but spend a word here in the house,
ND go with you. [Exit.

Cas. Ancient, what makes he here?

Iago. ’Faith, he to-night hath boarded a land carack’;
If it prove lawful prize, he’s made for ever.

Cas. I do not understand.

Iago. He’s married.

To whom?

Re-enter Othello.

Iago. Marry, to—Come, captain, will you go?

Oth. Have with you

Cas. Here comes another troop to seek for you.

Iago. It is Brabantio.—General, be advis’d:
He comes to bad intent.

Enter Brabantio, Roderigo, and Officers, with Torches and Weapons.

Oth. Holla! stand there!

Rod. Signior, it is the Moor.

Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them.—

Good signior, you shall more command with years.
Than with your weapons.

Oth. 0, thou foul thief! where hast thou stow’d my daughter?

Dann’d as thou art, thou hast enchanted her,
For I’ll refer me to all things of sense.
If she in chains of magic were not bound,?
Whether a maid so tender, fair, and happy,
So opposite to marriage, that she shunn’d
The wealthy earled darlings of our nation,
Would ever have, to incur a general mock,
Run from her guardiance to the sooty bosom
Of such a thing as thou; to fear, not to delight.
Judge me the world, if ’tis not gross in sense;?
That thou hast practis’d on her with foul charms;
Abus’d her gentle youth with drugs, or minerals,
That weaken motion.—I’ll have ’t disputed on;
’T is probable, and palpable to thinking.
I therefore, apprehend, and do attach thee
For an abuser of the world, a practiser
Of arts inhabited, and out of warrant.—
Lay hold upon him! if he do resist,
Subdue him at his peril.

Oth. Hold your hands!

Both you of my inclining, and the rest:
Wet in my eye to fight, I should have known it
Without a prompter.—Where will you that I go,
To answer this your charge?

Oth. What if I do obey?

How may the duke be therewith satisfied,
Whose messengers are here about my side,
Upon some present business of the state,
To behold me to him? [Off.

Oth. ’T is true, most worthy signor

The duke’s in council, and your noble self,
I am sure, is sent for.

Oth. How! the duke in council,
In this time of the night!—Bring him away.
Mines not an idle cause: the duke himself,
Or any of my brothers of the state,
Cannot but feel this wrong, as ‘t were their own;
For if such actions may have passage free,
Bond-slaves and pagans shall our statesmen be.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Council-Chamber.

The Duke, and Senators, sitting in state; Officers attending.

Duke. There is no composition in these news,
That gives them credit.

1 Sen. Indeed, they are disproportion’d

My letters say, a hundred and seven galleys,

1 be assured: in folio. 2 and: in quarto. 3 height: in quarto. 4 Merlin. 5 frequent: in quarto. 6 about: in folio. 7 freight: in folio. 8 This line is not in quarto, 1622. 9 dealing: in folio. 10 This and the five following words, are not in quarto, 1622. 11 bring
Scene III.

Othello, the Moor of Venice.

Duke. And mine, a hundred and forty.
2 Sen. And mine, two hundred.

But though they jump not on a just account,
As in these cases, with the same reports,
'Tis oft with difference, yet do they all confirm
A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.

Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgment.

I do not so secure me in the error,
But the main article I do approve
In fearful sense.

Enter an Officer, with a Sailor.

Off. A messenger from the galleyes.

Duke. Nay, now the business?

Sail. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes:
So was I bid report here to the state,
By signior Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change?

1 Sen. This cannot be,
By no assay of reason: 'tis a pageant,
To keep us in false gaze. When we consider
The importunity of Cyprus to the Turk;
And let us trust ourselves again but understand,
That, as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,
So may he with more facile question bear it,
For that it stands not in such warlike brace,
But altogether lacks th' abilities
That Rhodes is dress'd in:—if we make thought of this,
We must not think the Turk is so unskillful,
To leave that latest which concerns him first,
Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain,
To wake, and wage, a danger profitless.

Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Rhodes.

Off. Here is more news.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Ottomites, reverend and graciously,
Steering with due course toward the isle of Rhodes,
Have there injointed them with an after fleet.

1 Sen. Ay, so I thought.—How many, as you guess?

Mess. Of thirty sail; and now do they restem
Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance,
Their purposes toward Cyprus.—Signior Montano,
Your trusty and most valiant servitor,
With his free duty recommits you, Othello,
And prays you to believe him.

Duke. 'Tis certain, then, for Cyprus.

Marcus Luceicos, is not he in town?

1 Sen. He's now in Florence.

Duke. Write us from him to post; post-haste dispatch.

1 Sen. Here comes Brabantio, and the valiant Moor.

Enter Brabantio, Othello, Leco, Roderigo, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you
Against the general enemy Ottoman.

I did not see you; welcome, gentle signior;
[To Brabantio,

We lack'd your counsel and your help to-night.

Bra. So did I yours. Good your grace, pardon me.

Neither my place, nor aught I heard of business,
Hath rais'd me from my bed; nor doth the general care
Take hold of me, for my particular grief.

Is of so blood-gate and o'er-hearing nature,
That it engulfs and swallows other sorrows,
And it is still itself.

Duke. Why, what's the matter?

Bra. My daughter! O, my daughter!

Sen. Dead?

Bra. Ay; to me.

She is abus'd, stolen from me, and corrupted
By spells and medicines bought of mountebanks;
For nature so preposterously to err,
(Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense)
Sans witchcraft could not.

Duke. Who'er he be that, in this foul proceeding,
Hath thus beguil'd your daughter of herself,
And you of her, the bloody book of law
You shall yourself read in the bitter letter.
After its' own sense; yea, though our proper son
Stood in your action.

Bra. Humbly I thank your grace.

Here is the man, this Moor; whom now, it seems,
Your special mandate, for the state affairs,
Hath lither brought.

Duke and Sen. We are very sorry for it.

Duke. What, in your own part, can you say to this?

[To Othello,

Bra. Nothing, but this is so.

Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend signiors.

My very noble and approved good masters,
That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter,
It is most true; true, I have married her:
The very head and front of my offending
Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech,
And little bless'd with the set' phrase of peace;
For since these arms of mine had seven years' pith,
Till now, some nine moons wasted, they have use'd
Their dearest action in the tented field;
And little of this great world can I speak,
More than pertains to feats of broil and battle;
And, therefore, little shall I grace my cause,
In speaking for myself. Yet, by your graces patience,
I will a round novel tale deliver
Of my whole course of love: what drugs, what charms,
What conjuration, and what mighty magic,
(For such proceeding I am charg'd withal)

I won his daughter with.

Bra. A maiden never bold;

Of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion
Blush'd at herself; and she,—in spite of nature,
Of years, of country, credit, every thing,—
To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on?

It is a judgment main'd, and most imperfect,
That will confess perfection so could err
Against all rules of nature; and must be driven
To find out practices of cunning hell,
Why this should be. I, therefore, vouch again,
That with some mixtures powerful o'er the blood,
Or with some dram conjur'd to this effect,
He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this is no proof

Without more evidence and overt test,

These are thin habits, and poor likelihoods
Of modern seeming, you prefer against him.

1 Sen. But, Othello, speak:
Did you by indirect and forced courses
Subdue and poison this young maid's affections,
Or came it by request, and such fair question
As soul to soul affordeth.

Oth. I do beseech you,

Send for the lady to the Sagittary;

And let her speak of me before her father:
If you do find me foul in her report,
'The trust, the office, I do hold of you,

Not only take away, but let your sentence
Even fall upon my life.

_Duke._ Fetch Desdemona hither.

_Oth._ Ancient, conduct them; you best know the place. —

[Exit IAGO and ATTENDANTS.]

And, till she come, as truly as to heaven
I do confess the vices of my blood,
So justly to your grave ears I'll present
How I did thrive in this fair lady's love,
And she in mine.

_Duke._ Say it, Othello.

_Oth._ Her father lov'd me; oft invited me;
Still question'd me the story of my life,
From year to year; the battles, sieges, fortunes,
That I had pass'd.

I ran it through, even from my boyish days,
To the very moment that he bade me tell it:
Wherein I spake of most disastrous chances,
Of moving accidents, by flood, and field;
Of hair-breadth escapes; of th' imminent deadly breach;
Of being taken by the insolent foe,
And sold to slavery; of my redemption thence,
And portance in my travels: wherein
Wherein all antres vast, and deserts idle,
Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads touch heaven,
It was my hint to speak, such was the process;
And of the Cannibals that each other eat,
The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads
Do grow beneath their shoulders. This to hear,
Would Desdemona seriously incline:
But still the house affairs would draw her thence;
Which ever as she could with haste despatch,
She'd come again, and with a greedy ear
Devour up my discourse. Which I observing,
Took once a piant hour; and found good means
To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart,
That I would all my pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels she had something heard,
But not intentionally: I did consent;
And often did beguile her of her tears,
When I did speak of some distressful stroke,
That my youth suffer'd. My story being done,
She gave me for my pains a world of sighs:
She swore,—in faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange:
'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful:
She wish'd she had not heard it; yet she wish'd
That heaven had made her such a man: she thank'd me;
And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story.
And that would woo her.—On this hint I spake;
She lov'd me for the dangers I had pass'd,
And I lov'd her, that she did pity them.
This only is the witchcraft I have us'd:
Here comes the lady; let her witness it.

_Enter DESDEMONA, IAGO, and ATTENDANTS._

_Duke._ I think, this tale would win my daughter too.

Good Brabantio,

Take up this mangled matter at the best:
Men do their broken weapons rather use,
Than their bare hands.

_Bra._ I pray you, hear her speak:
If she confess that she was half the woer,
 Destruction on my head, if my bad blame
Light on the man.—Come hither, gentle mistress:
Do you perceive in all this noble company,

Where most you owe obedience?

_Des._ My noble father.

I do perceive here a divided duty.

To you, I am bound for life, and education:
My life and education both do learn me
How to respect you; you are the lord of duty;
I am hither to your daughter: but here's my husband
And so much duty as my mother show'd
To you, preferring you before her father,
So much I challenge that I may profess
Due to the Moor, my lord.

_Bra._ God be with you!—I have done—

Please it your grace, on to the state affairs:
I had rather to adopt a child, than get it.—

Come hither, Moor:

I here do give thee that with all my heart,
Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart;
I would keep from thee.—For your sake, jewel,
I am glad at soul I have no other child,
For thy escape would teach me tyranny,
To hang eels on them.—I have done, my lord.

_Duke._ Let me speak like yourself; and say a sentence.
Which, as a grace, or step, may help these lovers
Into your favour.

When remedies arc past, the griefs are ended
By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended.
To mourn a mischeif that is past and gone,
Is the next way to draw new, mischief on.
What cannot be preserved when fortune takes.
Patience her injury a mockery makes.
The robb'd, that smiles, steals something from the thief.
He robs himself, that sinds a bootless grief.

_Bra._ So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile.

We lose it not, so long as we can smile.
He bears the sentence well, that nothing bears
But the free comfort which from thence he hears,
But he bears both the sentence and the sorrow,
That to pay grief, must of poor patience browe.
These sentences, to sugar, or to gall,
Being strong on both sides, are equivocal:
But words are words; I never yet did hear,
That the bruish'd heart was prick'd through the ear.
Beseech you, now to the affairs of state.

_Duke._ The Turk, with a most mighty preparation,

Makes for Cyprus. Othello, the fortitude of the place
Is best known to you; and though we have a substitute
Of most allowed sufficiency, yet opinion,
A most sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you: you must, therefore, be content to shubber the gloss of your new fortunes with this more stubborn and boisterous expedition.

_Oth._ The tyrant custom, most grave senators,

Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war
My thricedriven bed of down: I do agnize
A natural and prompt alacrity,
I find in hardiness; and do undertake
These present wars against the Ottomites.
Most humbly, therefore, binding to your state,
I crave fit disposition for my wife;
Due reference of place, and exhibition,
With such accommodation, and resort
As levels with her breeding.

_Duke._ If you please

Be't at her father's:—

_Bra._ I'll not have it so.

_Oth._ Nor I.

_Des._ Nor I; I would not there reside,

To put my father in impatient thoughts
By being in his eye. Most gracious duke,
To my unfolding lend a prosperous ear:
And let me find a charter in your voice,
To assist my simpleness.
Duke. What would you, Desdemona?
Des. That I did love the Moor to live with him,
My downright violence and storm of fortunes
May trumpet to the world: my heart's subdued
Even to the very quality of my lord:
I saw Othello's visage in his mind;
And to his honours, and his valiant parts,
Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate.
So that, dear lords, if I be left behind,
A moth of peace, and he go to the war,
The rites for which I love him are bereft me,
And I a heavy interim shall support
By his dear absence. Let me go with him.

Oth. Your voices, lords: 'tis needeth
Have a free way;
Vouch with me, heaven, I therefore beg it not,
To please the palate of my appetite;
Nor to comply with the young affects of heat,
(In me defined) and proper satisfaction;
But to be free and bounteous to my mind:
And heaven defend your counsels, that you think
I will your serious and great business scant,
When she is with me. No, when light-wing'd toys,
Of feather'd Cupid foil with wanton dulness
My speculative and active insitious instruments,
That my disports corrupt and taint my business,
Let housewives make a skilet of my helm,
And all indig and base adversities
Make head against my reputation!
Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine,
Either for her stay, or going. Th' affair cries haste,
And speed must answer it: you must hence to-night.
Des. To-night, my lord? This night.
Oth. With all my heart.

Duke. At nine the morning here we'll meet again.
Othello, leave some officer behind,
And he shall our commission bring to you;
With such things else of quality and respect,
As do import you.

Oth. Please your grace, my ancient;
A man he is of honesty, and trust;
To his conveyance I assign my wife,
With what else needful your good grace shall think
To be sent after me.

Duke. Let it be so.
Good night to every one. —And, noble signior,
To Brabantio.

If virtue no delighted beauty lack,
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black.

1 Sen. Adieu, brave Moor! use Desdemona well.

Bra. Look to her, Moor, if thou hast eyes to see:
She has deceiv'd her father, and may thee.

[Exeunt Duke, Senators, Officers, &c.

Oth. My life upon her faith. —Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee;
I pr'ythee, let thy wife attend on her,
And bring her forth in the best advantage.

Come, Desdemona: I have but an hour
Of love, of worldly matters and direction,
To spend with thee: we must obey the time.

[Exeunt Othello and Desdemona.

Iago. Iago. What say'st thou, noble heart?
Iago. What will I do, thou gentle heart?
Iago. Why. go to bed, and sleep.
Iago. I will incontinently drown myself.
Iago. Well, if thou dost, I shall never love thee after it. Why, thou silly gentleman!

Rod. It is swelliness to live, when live is a torment and then we have a prescription to die, when death is our physician.

Iago. O villainous! I have looked upon the world for four times seven years, and since I could distinguish betwixt a benefit and an injury; I never found a man that knew how to love himself. Ere I would say, I would drown myself for the love of a Guinea-hen, I would change my humanity with a baboon.

Rod. What should I do? I confess, it is my shame to be so fond: but it is not in my virtue to amend it.

Iago. Virtue! a fig! 'tis in ourselves that we are thus, or thus. Our bodies are gardens to which our wills are gardeners; so that if we will plant nettles, or sow lettuce; set hyssop, and weed up thyme, supply it with one gender of herbs, or distract it with many; either to have it sterile with idleness, or manured with industry; why, the power and incorrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the balance66 of our lives had not one scale of reason to poise another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most preposterous conclusions: but we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unbitted lusts, wherein I take this, that you call—love, to be a sect, or secton.

Rod. It cannot be.

Iago. It is merely a lust of the blood, and a permission of the will. Come, be a man: drown thyself! drown cats, and blind puppies. I profess69 me thy friend, and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdurable toughness; I could never better stead thee than now. Put money in thy purse; follow these wars; defeat thy favour68 with an unserved beard; I say, put money in thy purse. It cannot be, that Desdemona should long continue her love to the Moor—put money in thy purse;—nor he his to her: it was a violent commencement, and thou shalt see an answerable sequestration—put money in thy purse. These Moors are changeable in their wills;—kill thy purse with money; the food that to him now is as luscious as locusts, shall be to him shortly as bitter62 as coloquintida. She must change for youth: when she is sated with his body, she will find the error of her choice. She must have change, she must: therefore, put money in thy purse. If thou wilt needs damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning. Make all the money thou canst. If sanctimony and a frail vow, betwixt an erring barbarian and a super-supple Venetian, be not too hard for my wits, and all the tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her; therefore make money. A pox of drowning thyself! it is clean out of the way: seek thou rather to be hanged in compassing thy joy, than to be drowned and go without her.

Rod. Wilt thou be fast to my hopes,71 if I depend on the issue?

Iago. Thou art sure of me. —Go, make money. —I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee again and again. I hate the Moor: my cause is hearted; thine hath no less reason. Let us be complices in our revenge against him: if thou canst cuckold him, thou dost SCENE I.—A Sea-port Town in Cyprus. A Platform.

Enter Montano and Two Gentlemen.

Mon. What from the cape can you discern at sea?
1 Gent. Nothing at all: it is a high-wrought flood;
I cannot, 'twixt the heaven and the main,
Desery a sail.

Mon. Methinks, the wind hath spoke aloud at land;
A fuller blast never shook our battlements:
If it hath ruffled so upon the sea,
What ribs of oak, when mountains melt on them,
Can hold the mortise? what shall we hear of this?

2 Gent. A segregation of the Turkish fleet:
For do but stand upon the foaming shore,
The chidden billow seems to pelt the clouds,
The wind-shak'd surge, with high and monstrous mane,
Seems to cast water on the burning bear,
And quench the guards of the ever-fixed pole.
I never did like molestation view
On the enchafted flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish fleet
Be not in-shelter'd and embay'd, they are drown'd;
It is impossible to bear it out.

Enter a Third Gentleman.

3 Gent. News, lads! our wars are done.
The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turks,
That their desigament halts: a noble ship of Venice
Hath seen a grievous wreck and suflerance
On most part of their fleet.

Mon. How! is this true?

3 Gent. The ship is here put in:
A Florentine, Michael Cassio,
Lieutenant to the warlike Moor, Othello,
Is come on shore: the Moor himself's at sea,
And is in full commission here for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on't; 'tis a worthy governor.

3 Gent. But this same Cassio, though he speak of comfort,
Touching the Turkish loss, yet he looks sadly,
And prays the Moor be safe: for they were part
With foul and violent tempest.

Mon. Pray heaven he be;
For I have serv'd him, and the man commands

He has done my office: I know not if 't be true.
Yet I, for mere suspicion in that kind,
Will do as if for surety. He holds me well;
The better shall my purpose work on him.
Cassio's a proper man: let me see now;
To get his place, and to plume up my will
In double knavery.—How, how?—Let's see:
After some time, to abuse Othello's ear
That he is too familiar with his wife:
He hath a person, and a smooth dispose,
To be suspected; fram'd to make women false.
The Moor is of a free and open nature,
That thinks men honest, that but seem to be so,
And will as tenderly be led by the nose,
As asses are.
I have 't;—it is engender'd:—hell and night.
Must bring this monstrous birth to the world's light.

Exeunt.

ACT II.

Like a full soldier. Let's to the sea-side, ho!
As well to see the vessel that's come in,
As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello,
Even till we make the main, and th' aerial blue,
An indistinct regard.

3 Gent. Come, let's do so;
For every minute is expectation
Of more arravance.

Enter Cassio, and several Islanders.

Cas. Thanks you, the valiant of the warlike isle,
That so approve the Moor.—O! let the heavens
Give him defence against the elements,
For I have lost him on a dangerous sea.

Mon. Is he well shipp'd?

Cas. His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his pilot
Of very expert and approv'd allowance;
Therefore my hopes, not surfeited to death,
Stand in bold cure.

[Within.] A sail, a sail, a sail!

Enter a Messenger.

Cas. What noise?

Mess. The town is empty; on the bow of the sea
Stand ranks of people, and they cry, "a sail!"

Cas. My hopes do shape him for the governor.

[Gun heard.]

2 Gent. They do discharge their shot of courtesy:
Our friends, at least.

Cas. I pay you, sir, go forth,
And give us truth who 't is arriv'd.

2 Gent. I shall.

[Exit.

Mon. But, good lieutenant, is your general wiv'd?

Cas. Most fortunately: he hath achieve'd a maid,
That paragon description, and wild fame;
One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens,
And in the essential vesture of creation,
Does bear all excellency. — How now! who has put in?
Re-enter Second Gentleman.

2 Gent. 'T is one Iago, ancient to the general.

Cas. He has had most favourable and happy speed:
Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling winds,
The guller's rocks, and congregated sands,
Traitors enstee'd to clag the guiltless keel,
As having sense of beauty, do omit

The divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is she?

Cas. She that I spake of, our great captain's captain,

Mon. Left in the conduct of the bold Iago;

Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts,

Cas. A seignior's speed.—Great Love! Othello guard,

Mon. And swell his sail with thine own powerful breath,

That he may bless this bay with his tall ship,

Cas. Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's arms,

Mon. Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits,

And bring all Cyprus comfort.—O, behold!

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, IAGO, RODERIGO, and

Mon. Attendants.

Des. The riches of the ship is come on shore.

Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees.—

[They kneel.]

Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,

Cas. Before, behind thee, and on every hand,

Mon. Enwhele thee round.

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio.

Cas. What tidings can you tell me of my lord?

Des. He is not yet arriv'd; nor know I aught

Mon. But that he is well, and will be shortly here.

Des. O! but I fear.—How lost you company?

Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies

Mon. Parted our fellowship.

[Within.] A sail, a sail!

But, hard! a sail.

[Gun's heard.]

Cas. They give their greeting to the citadel:

2 Gent. This likewise is a friend.

Mon. See for the news.—

[Exit Gentleman.]

Good ancient, you are welcome.—Welcome, mistress.—

[To EMILIA.]

Let it not gall your patience, good Iago,

Mon. That I extend my manners: 'tis my breeding

Cas. That gives me this bold show of courtesy. [Kissing her.

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips,

Mon. As of her tongue she oft bestows on me,

Cas. You'd have enough.

Des. Alas! she has no speech.

Iago. In faith, 'tis enough;

Mon. 'Tis found still, when I have lust to sleep:

Cas. Murry, before your ladyship, I grant,

Mon. She puts her tongue a little in her heart,

Cas. And chides with thinking.

Emil. You have little cause to say so,

Iago. Come on, come on; you are pictures out of doors.

Cas. Bells in your parlours, wild cats in your kitchens,

Mon. Saints in your injuries, devils being offended,

Cas. Players in your housewifery, and housewives in your beds.

Des. O, fie upon thee, slanderer!

Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk:

Mon. You rise to play, and go to bed to work.

Emil. You shall not write my praise.

Iago. No, let me not.

Des. What wouldst thou write of me, if thou shouldst

Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to 't,

Mon. For I am nothing, if not critical.

Des. Come on; essay.—There's one gone to the Cas. Ay, madam.

Des. I am not merry; but I do beguile

Come; how wouldst thou praise me?

Iago. I am about it, but, indeed, my invention

Mon. Comes from my pate, as birdlime does from frize,

Des. It plucks out brains and all; but my muse labours,

Iago. And thus she is deliver'd such calms.

Mon. If she be fair and wise,—fairness, and wit,

Des. The one's for use, the other useth it.

Iago. Well prais'd!—How, if she be black and witty?

Mon. If she be black, and thereto have a wit,

Iago. She'll find a white that shall her blackness fit.

Des. Worse and worse.

Emil. How, if fair and foolish?

Iago. She never yet was foolish that was fair;

Mon. For even her folly helps her to an heir.

Des. These are old fond paradoxes, to make fools

Iago. Laugh if the alehouse. What miserable praise hast

Mon. thou for that's foul and foolish?

Iago. There's none so foul, and foolish thereunto,

Mon. But does foul pranks which fair and wise does.

Des. O heavy ignorance! thou praisest the worst

Iago. But what praise couldst thou bestow on a de-

Mon. serving woman indeed? one that, in the authority of Iago. Her merit, did justly put on the vouch of so much

Mon. Virtue itself?

Iago. She that was ever fair, and never proud;

Mon. Had tongue at will, and yet was never loud;

Cas. Never lack'd gold, and yet went never gay:

Iago. Flewd from her wish, and yet said,—"Now I may:

Mon. She that, being anger'd, her revenge being nigh,

Cas. Bade her wrong stay, and her displeasure fly;

Mon. That in wisdom never was so frail,

Cas. To change the cod's head for the salmon's tail;

Mon. That she could think, and ne'er disclose her mind,

Cas. See suitors following, and not look behind.

Mon. She was a wight,—if ever such wight were,

Des. To do what?

Iago. To suckle fools, and chronic small beer.

Des. O, most lame and impotent conclusion!—Do

Mon. not learn of him. Emilia, though he be thy husband.

Cas. How say you, Cassio? is he not a most profane and

Mon. Liberal censurer?

Cass. He speaks home, madam; you may relish him

Mon. more in the soldier, than in the scholar.

[Alack! with DESD.]

Iago. [Aside.] He takes her by the palm: ay, well

Mon. said, whispering with a little a web as this, will I en-

Iago. snare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her,

Mon. do; I will gyve thee in thine own courtship. You say

Des. true; 't is so, indeed: if such tricks as these strip

Mon. you out of your lieutenantry, it had been better you had

Emil. not kissed your three fingers so oft, which now again

Iago. you are most apt to play the sir in. Very good; well

Emil. kissed! an excellent courtesy! 't is so indeed. Yet

Iago. again your fingers to your lips? would, they were

Mon. oyster-pipes for your sake.—[A Trumpet heard.] The Cas. Moor! I know his trumpet.

Cas. 'Tis truly so.

Des. Let's meet him, and receive him.

Cas. Lo, where he comes!

Iago. Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. O, my fair warrior!

Des. My dear Othello!

Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content,

Mon. To see you here before me. O, my soul's joy!

Cas. If after every tempest come such calms.

Mon. May the winds blow, till they have waken'd death,

Cas. And let the labouring hark climb hills of seas,

Odis. Olympus-high, and duck again as low.
As hell's from heaven. If it were now to die,
'T were now to be most happy; for, I fear,
My soul hath her content so absolute,
That not another comfort like to this
Succeeds in unknown fate.

Des. The heavens forbid,
But that our loves and comforts should increase,
Even as our days do grow!

Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers!—
I cannot speak enough of this content:
It stops me here; it is too much of joy:
And this, and this, the greatest discord is,
That e'er our hearts shall make!
[...]
Oth. Come, let us to the castle.

News, friends; our wars are done, the Turks are drown'd.

How does my old acquaintance of this isle?—
Honey, you shall be well desir'd in Cyprus,
I have found great love amongst them. O my sweet,
I prattle out of fashion, and I desire
In mine own comforts.—I pray thee, good Iago,
Go to the bay, and disembarck my coffers.
Bring thou the master to the citadel!
He is a good one, and his worthiness
Does challenge much respect.—Come, Desdemona,
Once more well met at Cyprus.

[Exeunt Othello, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Iago. Do thou meet me presently at the harbour.
Come hither.—If thou be'st valiant—as they say base men, being in love, have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them,—list me. The lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard.—First, I must tell thee this—Desdemona is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him! why, 'tis not possible.

Iago. Lay thy finger—thus, and let thy soul be instructed.
Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor,
but for bragging, and telling her fantastical lies;
and will she love him still for prating? let not thy discreet heart think it.
Her eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil? when
The blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be,—again to inflame it, and to give satiate a fresh appetite, loveliness in favour, sympathy in years, manners, and beauties; all which the Moor is defective in.
Now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor; very nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice.
Now, sir, this granted, (as it is a most pregnant and unforced position) who stands so eminently in the degree of this fortune, as Cassio does? a knife very valuable; no farther conceivable, than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection? why, none; why, none a subtle slippery knife; a finder out of occasions; that has an eye can stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present itself: a devilish knife! besides, the knife is handsome, young, and hath all those requisites in him, that folly and green minds look after; a persistent complete knife, and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her: she is full of most blessed condition.

Iago. Blessed fig's end! the wine she drinks is made of grapes: if she had been blessed, she would never have loved the Moor: bless'd pudding! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of her hand? didst not mark that?

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was but courtesy.

Iago. Lechery, by this hand; an index, and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts.

They met so near with their lips, that their breaths embraced together. Villainous thoughts, Roderigo!
when these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, the incorporative conclusion. Fie! But, sir, be you ruled by me: I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to-night; for the command, I'll lay 't upon you. Cassio knows you not:—I'll not be far from you: do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or taunting his discipline; or from what other cause you please, which the time shall more favourably minister.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he is rash, and very sudden in choler, and,
haply, with his truncheon may strike at you: provoke him, that he may; for even out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny, whose qualification shall come into no true taste again, but by the displacing of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires, by the means I shall then have to prefer them; and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if I can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadel: I must fetch his necessaries ashore. Farewell.

Rod. Adieu.

[Exit Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it,
That she loves him, 'tis apt, and of great credit:
The Moor—howbeit that I endure him not,—
Is of a constant, loving, noble nature,
And, I dare think, he'll prove to Desdemona
A most dear husband. Now, I do love her too,
Not out of absolute lust, (though, peradventure, I stand accountant for as great a sin)
But partly led to diet my revenge,
For that I do suspect the lustful Moor
Hath leap'd into my seat; the thought whereof
Doth like a poisonous mineral gnaw my inwards,
And nothing can, or shall, content my soul,
Till I am even'd with him, wise for wife;
Or, failing so, yet I that I put the Moor
At least into a jealousy so strong
That judgment cannot cure. Which thing to do,—
If this poor brach' of Venice, whom I transe,"
For his quick hunting, stand the putting on,
I'll have our Michael Cassio on the lip;
Abuse him to the Moor in the rank garb,—
For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too;
Make the Moor thank me, love me, and reward me,
For making him egregiously an ass,
And practising upon his peace and quiet,
Even to madness. 'Tis here, but yet confus'd:
Knavey's plain face is never seen, till us'd.

SCENE II. A Street.

Enter a Herald, with a Proclamation; People following

Her. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and valiant general, that upon certain tidings now arrived, importing the mere perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph; some to dance, some to make onfires, each man, to what sport and revels his addiction leads him; for, besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptials. So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices are open: and there is full liberty of feasting, from this present hour of five, till the bell hath told eleven. Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus, and our noble general, Othello!

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. A Hall in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Desdemona, Cassio, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard to-night: Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop, Not to out-sport discretion.

Cas. Iago hath direction what to do;
But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye Will I look to 't.

Oth. Iago is most honest.
Michael. good night: to-morrow, with your earliest, Let me have speech with you. Come, my dear love: The purse made, the fruits are to ensure;

[To Desdemona.

That profit 's yet to come: 'twixt me and you. —
Good night.

[Exeunt Ort., Des., attended. Enter Iago.

Cas. Welcome, Iago: we must to the watch.
Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 'tis not yet ten o'clock. Our general cast us thus early for the love of his Desdemona, whom let us not therefore blame: he hath not yet made wanton the night with her, and she is sport for Jove.

Cas. She 's a most exquisite lady.
Iago. And 'l I warrant her, full of game.
Cas. Indeed, she 's a most fresh and delicate creature.
Iago. What an eye she has! methinks it sounds a parley of provocation.
Cas. An inviting eye; and yet methinks right modest.
Iago. And, when she speaks, is it not an alarum to love?
Cas. She is, indeed, perfection.
Iago. Well, happiness to their sheets! Come, lieutenant, I have a steet of wine; and here without arc a brace of Cypress gallants, that would fain have a measure to the health of the black Othello.
Cas. Not to-night, good Iago. I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking: I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.
Iago. O! they are our friends: but one cup: 'l I drink for you.

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified too, and, behold, what innovation it makes here. I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness with any more.

Iago. What, man! 'tis a night of revels: the gallants desire it.

Cas. Where are they?
Iago. Here at the door; I pray you, call them in.
Cas. I 'l do't, but it dislikes me.

[Exeunt Cassio.

Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon him, With that which he hath drunk to-night already, He 'l be as full of quarett and offence As my young mistress' dog. Now, my sick fool, Roderigo, Whom love has turn'd almost the wrong side outward, To Desdemona hath to-night carous'd Potatoes pottle deep; and he 's to watch.

Three elves of Cyprus,—noble, swelling spirits, That hold their honours in a wary distance, The very elements of this warlike isle,— Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups, And they watch too. Now, 'mongst this flock of drunkards, Am I to put our Cassio in some action That may offend the isle.—But here they come. If consequence do but approve my dream, My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Re-enter Cassio, with him Montano, and Gentlemen. Cas. 'Fore heaven, they have given me a rouse already.
Mon. Good faith, a little one; not past a pint, as I am a soldier.
Iago. Some wine, ho!
And let me the canakin clink, clink; [Sings
And let me the canakin clink;
A soldier's a man;
A life's but a span;
Why then let a soldier drink.

Some wine, boys! [Wine brought.
Iago. 'Fore heaven, an excellent song.
Iago. I learned it in England, where (indeed) they are most potent in potting: your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander,—Drink, ho! are nothing to your Englishman.
Cas. Is your Englishman so exquisite in his drinking?
Iago. Why, he drinks you, with facility, your Dane dead drunk; he swears not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit, ere the next pottle can be filled.
Cas. To the health of our general.
Mon. I am for it, lieutenant; and I 'l do you justice.
Iago. O sweet England!
King Stephen was a worthy peer;
His breeches cost him but a crown;
He held them sixpence all too dear,
With that he call'd the tailor—lown.
He was a weight of high renown,
And thou art but of low degree;
'Tis pride that pulls the country down,
Then take thine addl clock about thee.

Some wine, ho!
Cas. Why, this is a more exquisite song than the other.
Iago. Will you hear it again?
Cas. No; for I hold him to be unworthy of his place that does those things.—Well, heaven's above all; and there be souls must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved.
Iago. It is true, good lieutenant.
Cas. For mine own part,—no offence to the general nor any man of quality,—I hope to be saved.
Iago. And so do I too, lieutenant.
Cas. Ay: but, by your leave, not before me. th lieutenant is to be saved before the ancient.—Let's have no more of this: let's to our affairs.—May God Forgive us our sins!—Gentlemen, let's look to our business. Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk: this is my ancient;—this is my right hand, and this is my left hand,—I am not drunk now; I can stand well enough, and speak well enough.

All. Excellent well.
Cas. Why, very well, then; you must not think, then, that I am drunk.

[Exeunt.

Mon. To the platform, masters come, let's set the watch.
Iago. You see this fellow, that is gone before:
He is a soldier, fit to stand by Caesar
And give direction; and do but see his vice.
'T is to his virtue a just equinoct,
The one as long as th' other: 'tis pity of him,
I fear, the trust Othello puts in him,
On some odd time of his infirmity,
Will shake this island.

Mon. But is he often thus?

Iago. 'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep:
He'll watch the horologe a double set,
If drink rock not his cradle.

Mon. It were well,
The general were put in mind of it.
Perhaps, he sees it not: or his good nature
Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio,
And looks not on his evils. Is not this true?

Enter Roderigo.

Iago. How now, Roderigo? [Aside to him.]
I pray you, after the lieutenant; go. [Exit Roderigo.

Mon. And 't is great pity, that the noble Moor
Should hazard such a place as his own second,
With one of an ingrate infirmity:
It were an honest action to say
So to the Moor.

Iago. Not I, for this fair island:
I do love Cassio well, and would do much
To cure him of this evil. But hatch! what noise?
[Cry within,—Help! Help!

Re-enter Cassio, pursuing Roderigo.

Cas. You rogue! you rascal!

Mon. What's the matter, lieutenant?

Cas. A knave!—teach me my duty?
I'll beat the knave into a wicker bottle.

Rod. Beat me!

Cas. Dost thou prate, rogue? [Striking Roderigo.

Mon. Nay, good lieutenant; [Staying him.

I pray you, sir, hold your hand.

Cas. Let me go, sir,
Or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard.

Mon. Come, come; you're drunk.

Cas. Drunk! [They fight.

Iago. Away, I say! [Aside to Rod.] Go out, and cry a mutiny. [Exit Rod.

Nay, good lieutenant,—alas, gentlemen!—
Help, ho!—Lieutenant,—sir,—Montano,—sir;—
Help, masters!—Here's a goodly watch, indeed!—

Bell rings.

Who's that that rings the bell?—Diablo, ho!
The town will rise: God's will! lieutenant, hold!
You will be shambled for ever.

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here?

Mon. 'Zounds! I bleed still: I am hurt to the death.

He faints.

Oth. Hold, for your lives!

Iago. Hold, hold, lieutenant!—sir, Montano,—gentleman!—
Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?
Hold, hold! the general speaks to you: hold, for shame!

Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence ariseth this?
Are we turn'd Turks, and to ourselves do that,
Which heaven hath forbidden the Ottomites?
For Christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl:
He that stirs next to carve for his own rage,
Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.—
Silence that dreadful bell! it frights the idle
From her propriety.—What is the matter, masters?—
Honest Iago, that look'st dead with grieving,
Speak, who began this? on thy love, I charge thee.

Iago. I do not know:—friends all but now, even now
In quarter, and in terms like bride and groom
Divesting them for bed; and then, but now,
(As if some planet had unwitted them)
Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast,
In opposition bloody, I cannot speak
Any beginning to this peevish odds;
And would in action glorious I had lost
Those legs, that brought me to a part of it.

Oth. How camest it, Michael, you were thus forgot.
Cas. I pray you, pardon me; I cannot speak.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont be civil,
The gravity and stillness of your youth
The world hath noted, and your name is great
In mouths of wisest censure: what's the matter,
That youundle your reputation thus?
And spend your rich opinion, for the name
Of a night-brawler? give me answer to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger:
Your officer, Iago, can inform you.
While I spare speech, which something now offends me
Of all that I do know; nor know I aught
By me that is said or done amiss this night,
Unless self-charity be sometime a vice,
And to defend ourselves it be a sin,
When violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven, My blood begins my safer guides to rule;
And passion, having my best judgment quelled,*
Assays to lead the way. If I once stir,
Or do but lift this arm, the best of you
Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know
How this foul rout began, who set it on;
And he that is approv'd in this offence,
Though he had twain'd with me, both at a birth,
Shall lose me.—What! in a town of war,
Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear,
To manage private and domestic quarrel,
In night, and on the court of guard and safety?
'T is monstrous.—Iago, who began it?

Mon. If partially aff'd, or leagued in office,
Thou dost deliver more or less than truth,
Thou art no soldier.

Iago. Touch me not so near.
I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth,
Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio;
Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth
Shall nothing wrong him.—Thus it is, general,
Montano and myself being in speech,
There comes a fellow crying out for help,
And Cassio following him with determined sword
To execute upon him. Sir, this gentleman
Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause:—
Myself the crying fellow did pursue,
Lost by his clamour (as it so fell out)
The town might fall in fright: he, swift of foot,
Outran my purpose; and I return'd, the rather
For that I heard the clink and fall of swords,
And Cassio high in oath, which, till to-night,
I ne'er might say before. When I came back,
(For this was brief) I found them close together
At blow and thrust, even as again they were,
When you yourself did part them.

More of this matter can I not report:—
But men are men; the best sometimes forget:—
Though Cassio did some little wrong to him,
As men in rage strike those that wish them best.
Yet, surely, Cassio, I believe, received

1 Prase: in quartos. 2 twigen: in folio. 3 comes: in folio. 4 collied: in f. s.
From him that dide some strange indignity,
Which patience could not pass.
Oth. I know, Iago,
Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter,
Making it light to Cassio.—Cassio, I love thee:
But never more be officer of mine.—

Enter Desdemona, attended.
Look, if my gentle love be not raised up!—
I'll make thee an example.

Des. What's the matter? 2
Oth. All's well now, sweeting; come away to bed.—
Sir, for your hurts, myself will be your surgeon.

Lead him off.  [Montano is led off.

Iago, look with care about the town,
And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted—
Come. Desdemona; 'tis the soldier's life,
To have their baleful slumber'd with strife.

[Exeunt all but Iago and Cassio.

Iago. What, are you hurt, lieutenant?
Cas. Ay, past all surgery.

Iago. My heart is sore forbid! 1
Cas. Reputation, reputation, reputation! O! I have lost my reputation. I have lost the immortal part of myself, and what remains is base. — My reputation, Iago, my reputation!

Iago. As I am an honest man, I thought you had received some bodily wound; there is more offence in that, than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving: you have lost no reputation at all, unless you repulse yourself such a loser. What, man! there are ways to recover the general again: you are but now east in his mood, a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his own faceless dog, to affright an imperious lion. Sue to him again, and he's yours.

Cas. I will rather sue to be despised, than to deceive so good a commander, with so light, so drunken, and so indiscreet an officer. Drunk? 4 and speak parrot? and squabble? and swagger? swear? and discourse fustian with one's own shadow? — O thou invisible spirit of wine! if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee—devil.

Iago. What was he that you follow'd with your sword? What had he done to you?

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is't possible?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore.—O God! that men should put an enemy in their mouths, to steal away their brains! that we should, with joy, revel, pleasure, 4 and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!

Iago. Why, but you are now well enough: how came you thus recovered.

Cas. It hath pleased the devil, drunkenness, to give place to the devil, wrath: one unperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moralizer. As the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not befallen; but, since it is as it is, mend it for your own good.

Cas. I will ask him for my place again: he shall tell me, I am a drunkard. Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man by and by a fool, and presently a beast! O strange! — Every inordinate cup is unblessed, and the ingredient is a devil.

1 Folio adds: dear. 2 sense: in folio. 3 alight: in folio. 4 This sentence to "O" is not in quarto, 1022. 5 plesur: in folio. 6 Theobald reads: denotement. 7 brav: in quarto, 1022 8 prob: in f. c. 9 Resc. 10 This word is not added in f. c.
ACT III.

SCENE I.—Before the Castle.

Enter Cassio, and some Musicians.

Cas. Masters, play here, I will content your pains:
Something that's brief; and bid good-morrow to the general.

[Musick.]

Enter Clown.

Clo. Why, masters, have your instruments been in Naples, that they squeak? 'tis the nose thus?

1 Mus. How, sir, how?

Clo. Are these, I pray you, called? wind instruments?

2 Mus. Ay, marry, are they, sir.

Clo. O! thereby hangs a tale, sir?

1 Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir?

Clo. Marry, sir, by many a wind instrument that I know. But, masters, here's money for you; and the general so likes your music, that he desires you, for love's sake, to make no more noise with it.

1 Mus. Well, sir, we will not.

Clo. If you have any music that may not be heard, to't again; but, as they say, to hear music the general
does not greatly care.

1 Mus. We have none such, sir.

Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away.

Go; vanish into air; away! [Exeunt Musick.

Cas. Dost thou hear, mine honest friend?

Clo. No, I hear not your honest friend; I hear you.
Cas. Pr'ythee, keep up thy quillettes. There's a poor piece of gold for thee. If the gentlewoman that attends the general's wife be stirring, tell her there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech: wilt thou do this?

Clo. She is stirring, sir; if she will stir hither, I shall seem so to notify her.

[Exit.

Enter Iago.

Cas. Do, good my friend.—In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not been a-bed, then?

Cas. Why, no; the day had broke
Before we parted. I have made bold, Iago,
To send in to your wife: my suit to her
Is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona
Procure me some access.

Iago. I'll send her to you presently;
And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor
Out of the way, that your converse and business
May be more free.

[Exit.

Cas. I humbly thank you for't. I never knew
A Florentine more kind and honest.

[Enter Emilia.

Emil. Good-morrow, good lieutenant. I am sorry
For your displeasure; but all will soon be well.

The general and his wife are talking of it,
And she speaks for you stoutly: the Moor replies,

Nay, get thee gone. [Exit Ron.] Two things are to be done.

My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress.
I'll set her on:

Myself, the while, to draw the Moor apart,
And bring him jump where he may Cassio find
Soliciting his wife.—Ay, that's the way:
Dull not device by coldness and delay.

[Exit.
OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE.

SCENE III.

I'ld watch him tame, and talk him out of patience; His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift; I'll intermingle everything he does.

With Cassio's suit. Therefore, be merry, Cassio; For thy solicitor shall rather die, Than give thy cause away.

Enter Othello and Iago, at a distance.

Oth. Madam, here comes my lord.

Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave.

Des. Why, stay, and hear me speak.

Cas. Madam, not now: I am very ill at ease; Unfit for mine own purpose.

Des. Well, do your discretion. [Erit Cassio.]

Iago. Ha! I like not that.

Oth. What dost thou say?

Iago. Nothing, my lord: or if—I know not what.

Oth. Was not that Cassio parted from my wife?

Iago. Cassio, my lord? No, sure, I cannot think it, That he would steal away so guilty-like,

Seeing you coming.

Oth. I do believe 't was he.

Des. How, now, my lord!

I have been talking with a suitor here,

A man that languishes in your displeasure.

Oth. Who is 't you mean?

Des. Why, your lieutenant, Cassio. Good, my lord, If I have any grace, or power to move you,

His present reconciliation take:

For if he be not one that truly loves you,

That error in ignorance, and not in cunning,

I have no judgment in an honest face.

I prythee, call him back.

Oth. Went he hence now?

Des. Ay, sooth; so humbled,

That he hath left part of his grief with me,

To suffer with him. Good love, call him back.

Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other time.

Des. But shall 't be shortly?

Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you.

Des. Shall 't be to-night at supper?

Oth. No, not to-night.

Des. To-morrow dinner then?

I shall not dine at home:

I meet the captains at the citadel.

Des. Why then, to-morrow night; or Tuesday morn; On Tuesday noon, or night; on Wednesday morn:

I prythee, name the time, but let it not

Exceed three days: in faith, he's penitent;

And yet his trespass, in our common reason,

(Save that, they say, the wars must make examples

Out of our best) is not almost a fault

'T was a private check. When shall he come?

Tell me, Othello: I wonder in my soul,

What you could ask me that I should deny,

Or stand so marvelling on. What? Michael Cassio,

That came a wooing with you, and so many a time,

When I have spoke of you displeasingly,

Hath ta'en your part, to have so much to do

To bring him in? Trust me, I could do much.—

Oth. Prythee, no more: let him come when he will,

I will deny thee nothing.

Des. Why, this is not a boon;

'T is as I should entreat you wear your gloves,

Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you warm,

Or sue to you to do a peculiar profit.

To your own person: nay, when I have a suit

Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed,

It shall be full of poise and difficult weight, And fearful to be granted.

Oth. I will deny thee nothing.

Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this,

To leave me but a little to myself.

Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona: I'll come to thee straight.

Des. Emilia, come.—Be it as your fancies teach you;

Whate'er you be, I am obedient. [Erit, with EMILIA.]

Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my soul,

But I do love thee, and when I love thee not,

Chaos is come again.

Iago. My noble lord,—

What dost thou say, Iago?

Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you wou'd my lady, Know of your love?

Oth. He did, from first to last: why dost thou ask?

Iago. But for a satisfaction of my thought;

No further harm.

Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?

Iago. I did not think, he had been acquainted with it.

Oth. O, yes; and went between us very oft.

Iago. Indeed?

Oth. Indeed! ay. indeed:—discern'st thou anguish in that?

Is he not honest?

Iago. Honest, my lord?

Iago. My lord, for aught I know.

Oth. What dost thou think?

Iago. Think, my lord?

Oth. Think, my lord.

By heaven, he echoes me,

As if there were some monster in his thought
Too hideous to be shown.—Thou dost mean something;
I heard thee say but now,—thou likest not that,

When Cassio left my wife: what didst not like?

And, when I told thee, he was of my counsel

In my whole course of wooing, thou criedst, 'Indeed!' And didst contract and purport thy brow together,

As if thou hadst shut up in thy brain
Some horrible conceit. If thou dost love me,

Show me thy thought.

Iago. My lord, you know I love you.

Oth. I think, thou dost.

And,—for I know thou art full of love and honesty,

And weight'st thy words before thou giv'st them breath,—

Therefore, these stops of thine fright me the more;
For such things, in a false disloyal knave,

Are tricks of custom; but in a man that's just,

They are close delations, working from the heart.

That passion cannot rule.

Iago. For Michael Cassio.

I dare be sworn, I think that he is honest.

Oth. I think so too.

Iago. Men should be what they seem
Or, those that be not, would they seem none!

Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.

Iago. Why, then, I think Cassio's an honest man.

Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this:

I pray thee, speak to me as to thy thinnest,

As thou dost ruminate; and give thy worst of thoughts

The worst of words.

Iago. Good my lord, pardon me:

Though I am bound to every act of duty,
I am not bound to that all slaves are free to.
Utter my thoughts? Why, say, they are vile and

As where’s that palace, whereunto foul things
Sometimes intrude not? who has a breast so pure,
But sometimes uneasily apprehensions
Keep leets, and law-days, and in session sit
With meditations lawful?

Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend, Iago.
If thou but thinkst him wrong’d, and maketh his ear
A stranger to thy thoughts.

Iago.
I do beseech you,—
Though I, perchance, am vicious in my guess,
(As, I confess, it is my nature’s plague
To spy into abuses, and oft? my jealousy
Shapes faults that are not)—that your wisdom yet,
From one that so imperfectly conceits,
Would take no notice; nor build yourself a trouble
Out of his scattering and unsure observance.
It were not for your quiet, nor your good,
Nor for my manhood,* honesty, or wise,
To let you know my thoughts.

Oth.
What dost thou mean?

Iago. Good name, in man, and woman, dear my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls:
Who steals my purse, steals trash; ’tis something,
nothing;
’Twas mine, ’tis his, and has been slave to thousands;
But he, that fitches from me my good name,
Robes me of that, which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. By heaven, I’ll know thy thoughts.

Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand;
Nor shall not, whilst 1 is in my custody.

Oth. Ha!

Iago. O! beware, my lord, of jealousy;
It is the green-ey’d monster, which doth make
The meat it feeds on: that cuckold lives in bliss,
Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger;
But, O! what dammed minutes tells he o’er,
Who dotes, yet doubts; suspects, yet fondly loves!

Oth. O misery!

Iago. Poor and content is rich, and rich enough;
But riches baseless is as poor as winter,
To him that ever fears he shall be poor.—
Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend
From jealousy!

Oth. Why? why is this?

Think’st thou, I’d make a life of jealousy,
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions? No: to be once in doubt,
Is once to be resolv’d. Exchange me for a goat,
When I shall turn the business of my soul
To such excommunicate and blotted surmises,
Matching thy inference. ’T is not to make me jealous,
To say—my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances well;* Where virtue is, these are more virtuous:
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear, or doubt of her revolt;
For she had eyes, and chose me: no, Iago;
I’ll see, before I doubt; when I doubt, prove;
And, on the proof, there is no more but this,
A way at once with love, or jealousy.

Iago. I am glad of it;* for now I shall have reason
To show the love and duty that I bear you
With franker spirit: therefore, as I am bound,

Receive it from me. * I speak not yet of proof.
Look to your wife: observe her well with Cassio:
Wear your eye—thus, not jealous, nor secure;
I would not have your free and noble nature,
Out of self-bounty, be abus’d; look to’t.
I know our country disposition well:
In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks
They dare not show their husbands; their best con science,
Is, not to leave’t undone, but keep’t unknown.

Oth. Doest thou say so?

Iago. She did deceive her father, marrying you,
And, when she seem’d to shake, and fear your looks,
She lov’d them most.

Oth. And so she did.

Iago. Why, go to, then;
She that, so young, could give out such a seeming,
To seal her father’s eyes up, close as oak,—
He thought, ’t was witchcraft.—But I am much to blame;
I humbly do beseech you of your pardon,
For too much loving you.

Oth. I am bound to thee for ever.

Iago. I see, this hath a little dash’d thy spirits.

Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.

Iago. Should you do so, my lord,
My speech should fall into such vile success,
As my thoughts aim not at. Cassio’s my worthy* friend.

My lord, I see you are mov’d.—

Oth. No, not much mov’d.—

I do not think but Desdemona’s honest.

Iago. Long live she so; and long live you to think so.

Oth. And yet, how nature curring from itself,

Iago. Ay, there’s the point:—as, to be bold with you,—
Not to affect many proposed matches,
Of her own clime, complexion, and degree,
Wherefore, we see, in all things nature tends.
Foh! one may smell in such a will most rank,
Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural.
But pardon me; I do not in suspicion;
Distinctly speak of her, though I may fear,
Her will, recoiling to her better judgment,
May fall to match you with her country forms,
And happily repent.

Oth. Farewell, farewell.
If more thou dost perceive, let me know more;
Set on thy wife to observe. Leave me, Iago.

Iago. My lord, I take my leave. [Going

Oth. Why did I marry?—This honest creature

Iago. My lord, I would I might entreat your honours

To scan this thing no farther; leave it to time.
Although ’t is fit that Cassio have his place,
(For, sure, he fills it up with great ability)
Yet if you please to hold him off a while,
You shall by that perceive him and his means.

(As worthy cause I have to fear I am)
And hold her free, I do beseech your honour.

Oth. Fear not my government.

Iago. I once more take my leave.

Oth. This fellow's of exceeding honesty,
And knows all qualities with a learned spirit
Of human dealings: if I do prove her haggard,1 Though that her jesses2 were my dear heart-strings, I'd thistle her off, and let her down the wind,3
To prey at fortune. Haply, for I am black,
And have not those soft parts of conversation
That chamberers have; or, for I am declin'd
Into the vale of years;—yet that's not much.
She's gone; I am abus'd; and my relief
Must be to loath her. O, curse of marriage!
That we can call these delicate creatures ours,
And not their appetites. I had rather be a toad,
And live upon the vapour of a dungeon.
Yet keep a corner in the thing I love
For others' uses. Yet, 'tis the plague of great ones;
Prerogativ'd are they less than the base;
'T is destiny unshunnable, like death:
Even then this forlorn plague is fated to us,
When we do quicken. Desdemona4 comes.

Enter Desdemona and Emilia.

If she be false, O! then heaven mocks itself.—
I'll not believe it.

Des. How now, my dear Othello!
Your dinner and the generous islanders,
By you invited, do attend your presence.

Oth. I am to blame.

Des. Why is your speech so faint?5 are you not well?
Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.

Des. Faith, that's with watching; 't will away again:
Let me but bind it hard, within this hour
It will be well. — [Offers to bind his Head.]

Oth. Your napkin is too little; [Lets fall her Napkin!]
Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you.

Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.

[Exit Oth. and Des.]

Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin.
This was her first remembrance from the Moor:
My wayward husband hath a hundred times
Woo'd me to steal it; but she so loves the token,
(For he conjur'd her she should ever keep it)
That she reserves it evermore about her,
To kiss, and talk to. I'll have the work 'tai'en out,6
And give 't Iago: what he will do with it,
Heaven knows, not I;
nothing, but to please his fantasy.

[Exit Iago.]

Iago. How now! what do you here alone?

Emil. Do not you chide, I have a thing for you.

Iago. A thing for me?—it is a common thing.

Iago. To have a foolish wife.

Emil. O. is that all? What will you give me now for that same handkerchief?

Iago. Emil. What handkerchief?

Iago. Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona;
That which so often you did bid me steal.

Iago. Hast stolen it from her?

Emil. No, 't faith; she let it drop by negligence,
And, to th' advantage, I, being here, took 't up.

Look, here it is.

Iago. A good wench; give it me.

Emil. What will you do with it? that you have been so earnest
To have me flinch it?

Iago. Why, what's that to you? [Snatching it

Emil. If it be not some purpose of import,
Give 't me again; poor lady! she'll run mad,
When she shall lack it.

Iago. Be not acknowledg'd on 't; I have use for it.

Go: leave me. — [Exit Emilia.]

I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin,
And let him find it; trifles, light as air,
Are to the jealous confirmations strong
As proofs of holy writ. This may do something.
The Moor already changes with my poison:6
Dangerous congenials are in their natures poisons,
Which at the first are scarce found to distaste;
But with a little act upon the blood,
Burn like the mines of sulphur.—I did say so:—

Enter Othello.

Look, where he comes! Not poppy, nor mandragora
Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world,
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep,
Which thou ow'dst yesterday.

Oth. Ha! ha! false to me? to me?

Iago. Why, how now, general! no more of that.

Oth. Avant! be gone! thou hast set me on the rack.—
I swear, 't is better to be much abus'd,
But than to know 't a little.

Iago. How now, my lord!

Oth. What sense had I of her stolen hours of lust?
I saw it not, thought it not, it harm'd not me:
I slept the next night well;7 was free and merry;
I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips:
He that is rob'd, not wanting what is stolen,
Let him not know 't, and he's not rob'd at all.

Iago. I am sorry to hear this.

Oth. I had been happy, if the general camp,
Pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet body,
So I had nothing known.—O! now, for ever,
Farewell the tranquil mind; farewell content:
Farewell the plumed troop, and the big wars.
That make ambition virtue: O, farewell!
Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill trumpet;
The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife,
The royal banner, and all quality,
Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war!
And O! you mortal engines, whose rude8 throats
Th' immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit,
Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone.

Iago. Is it possible?—My lord,—

Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a whore,
Be sure of it: give me the ocular proof,

[Taking him by the Throat]

Or, by the worth of mine11 eternal soul,
Thou hadst been better have been born a dog,
Than answer my wak'd wrath.

Iago. Make me to see 't; or, at the least, so prove it.

OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE.

ACT III.

That the probation bear no bingle, nor loop,
To hang a doubt on, or woe upon thy life!

Iago. My noble lord,—
Oth. If thou dost slander her, and torture me,

Never pray more: abandon all remorse;
Or horror's head horrors accumulate;
Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth amaz'd.
For nothing canst thou to damnation add,
Greater than that. [Releasing him.]

Iago. O grace! O heaven defend me!
Are you a man? have you a soul, or sense?—
God be wi' you; take mine office.—O wretched fool,
That liv'st? to make thine honesty a vice!
O monstrous world! Take note, take note, O world!
To be direct and honest, is not safe.—
I thank you for this profit: and, from hence.
I'll love no friend, since love breeds such offence.
Oth. Nay, stay.—Thou shouldst be honest.
Iago. I should be wise; for honesty's a fool,
And loses that it works for.

Oth. By the world, I think my wife be honest, and think she is not:
I think that thou art just, and think thou art not:
I'll have some proof: her name, that was as fresh
As Dian's visage, is now begrimed and black
As mine own face. If there be cords, or knives,
Poison, or fire, or suffocating streams,
I'll not endure it.—Would I were satisfied!
Iago. I see, sir, you are eaten up with passion:
I do repent me that I put it to you.
You would be satisfied?

Oth. Would! nay, I will.
Iago. And nay; but how? how satisfied, my lord?
Would you the supervision! grossly gape on?
Behold her topp'd?

Oth. Death and damnation! O!
Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think,
To bring it to that prospect. Damn them then,
If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster,
More than their own! What then? how then?
What shall I say? Where's satisfaction?
It is impossible you should see this,
Were they as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys,
As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as gross
As ignorance made drunk: but yet, I say,
If imputation, and strong circumstances,
Which lead directly to the door of truth,
Will give you satisfaction, you may* have it.

Oth. Give me a living reason she's disloyal.

Iago. I do not like the office;
But, sith I am enter'd in this cause so far,
Prick'd to 't by foolish honesty and love,
I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately,
And being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not sleep.
There are a kind of men, so loose of soul,
That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs:
One of this kind is Cassio.

In sleep I heard him say,—"Sweet Desdemona,
Let us be wary, let us hide our loves!"
And then, sir, would he grope, and wring my hand,
Cry,—"O, sweet creature!" and then kiss me hard,
As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots,
That grew upon my lips: then, laid his leg
Over my thigh, and sigh'd, and kiss'd; and then,
Cried,—"Cursed fate, that gave thee to the Moor!"

Oth. O monstrous! monstrous! monstrous!

---

Iago. Nay, this was but his dream.

Oth. But this denoted a foregone conclusion:
'T is a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream.

Iago. And this may help to thicken other proofs.
That do demonstrate thinly.

Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces.
Iago. Nay, but be wise: yet we see nothing done:
She may be honest yet. Tell me but this:
Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief,
Spotted with strawberries, in your wife's hand?

Oth. I gave her such a one: 't was my first gift.
Iago. I know not that: but such a handkerchief,
(I am sure it was your wife's) did I to-day
See Cassio wipe his heard with.

Oth. If it be that,—
Iago. If it be that, or any that* was hers,
It speaks against her with the other proofs.

Oth. O, that the slave had forty thousand lives!
One is too poor, too weak for my revenge.
Now do I see 't is true.—Look here, Iago;
All my fond love thus do I blow to heaven: 't is gone.—

Arise, black vengeance, from thy hollow cell!*
Yield up, O Love! thy crown, and hearted throne,
To tyrannous hate! swell, bosom, with thy fraught.
For 't is of asperses' tongues!

Iago. Pray,!* be content.

Oth. O, blood, Iago, blood!

Iago. Patience, I say: your mind, perhaps, may change.

Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontick sea,
Whose icy current and compulsive course
Ne'er knows* retiring ebb, but keeps due on
To the Propontick, and the Hellespont;
Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace,
Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love,
Till that a capable and wide revenge
Swallow them up.—Now, by your marble heaven.
In the due reverence of a sacred vow
[Kneeling
I here engage my words.

Iago. Witness, you ever-burning lights above!
You elements that clap us round about!
Witness, that here Iago doth give up
The execution of his wit, hands, heart,
To wrong'd Othello's service. Let him command,
And to obey shall be in me remorse,
What bloody work* soever.

Oth. I greet thee lovingly,
Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance bounteous,
And will upon the instant put thee to 't.
Within these three days let me hear thee say,
That Cassio's not alive.
Iago. My friend is dead. 't is done at your request;
But let her live.

Oth. Damn her, lewd minx! O, damn her!
Come, go with me apart; I will withdraw,
To furnish me with some swift means of death
For the fair devil. Now art thou my lieutenant.

Iago. I am your own for ever.

[Exeunt

SCENE IV.—The Same.

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and CASSIO.

Des. Do you know, sirrah, where the lieutenant

Cassio lies?

Clo. I dare not say, he lies any where.

Des. Why, man?
Scene IV.

Othello, the Moor of Venice.

819

Clo. He is a soldier; and for one to say a soldier's lies, is stabbing.

Des. Go to. Where lodges he?

Clo. To tell you where he lodges, is to tell you where I lie.

Des. Can any thing be made of this?

Clo. I know not where he lodges; and for me to deceive a lodging, and say, he lies here, or he lies there, were to lie in mine own throat.

Des. Can you inquire him out, and be edited to report?

Clo. I will catechize the world for him; that is,
make questions, and by them answer.

Des. Seek him; bid him come hither: tell him, I have moved my lord in his behalf, and hope all will be well.

Clo. To do this is within the compass of man's wit:
and therefore I will attempt the doing it. [Exit.

Des. Where should I lose that handkerchief, Emilia?

Emil. I know not, madam.

Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse
Full of cruzeados; and but my noble Moor is true of mind, and made of no such baseness
As jealous creatures are, it were enough
To put him to ill thinking.

Emil. Is he not jealous?

Des. Who? he! I think the sun, where he was born,
Drew all such humour from him.

Emil. Look, where he comes.

Enter Othello.

Des. I will not leave him now, till Cassio
Be call'd to him.—How is 't with you, my lord?

Oth. Well, my good lady.—[Aside.] O. hardness to dissemble!—

How do you, Desdemona?

Des. Well, my good lord.

Oth. Give me your hand. This hand is moist, my lady.

Des. It yet hath felt no age, nor known no sorrow.

Oth. This argues fruitfulness, and liberal heart.

Hot, hot and moist: this hand of yours requires
A sequester from liberty, fasting and praying, 6
Much castigation, exercise devout:
For here's a young and sweating devil here,
That commonly rebels. 'Tis a good hand;
A frank one.

Des. You may, indeed, say so:
For 't was that hand that gave away my heart.

Oth. A liberal hand: the hearts of old gave hands,
But our new heraldry is—hands, not hearts.

I cannot speak of this. Come now, your promise.

Oth. What promise, chuck?

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you.

Oth. I have a salt and sudden rheum offends me.

Lend me thy handkerchief.

Des. Here, my lord. [Offering it.]

Oth. That which I gave you.

Des. I have it not about me.

Oth. No, indeed, my lord.

Des. That is a fault.

This handkerchief
Did an Egyptian to my mother give;
She was a charmer, and could almost read
The thoughts of people: she told her, while she kept it,
'T would make her amiable and subdue my father
Entirely to her love; but if she lost it,
Or made a gift of it, my father's eye
Should hold her leathen, and his spirits should hunt
After new fancies. She, dying, gave it me;
And bid me, when my fate would have me wive,
To give it her. I did so; and take heed on 't:
Make it a darling like your precious eye:
To lose or give 't away were such perdition,
As nothing else could match.

Oth. 'T is true: 'tis magic in the web of it.

A sibyl, that had number'd in the world
The sun to course; two hundred compasses,
In her prophetic fury sew'd the work;
The worms were hallow'd that did breed the silk,
And it was dyed in mummy, which the skilful
Conserv'd of maidens' hearts.

Oth. Indeed! 'tis true?

Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to 't well.

Des. Then, would to heaven that I had never seen it.

Oth. Ha! 'wherefore?

Des. Why do you speak so startlingly and rash?

Oth. Is 't lost? is 't gone? speak, is it out o' the way?

Des. Heaven bless us!

Oth. Say you?

Des. It is not lost; but what an if it were?

Oth. How?

Des. I say, it is not lost.

Oth. Fetch 't, let me see 't.

Des. Why, so I can, sir; 8 but I will not now.

This is a trick to put me from my suit:
I pray, let Cassio be receiv'd again.

Oth. Fetch me that handkerchief: my mind mis-
Des. Come, come; [gives.

You'll never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. I pray, talk me of Cassio.

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. A man that, all his time,
Hath founded his good fortunes on your love;
Shar'd dangers with you;—

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. In sooth, you are to blame.

Oth. Away 11

[Exit Othello.

Emil. Is not this man jealous?

Des. Ne'er saw this before.

Sure, there's some wonder in this handkerchief: I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

Emil. 'T is not a year or two shows us a man:
They are all but stomachs, and we all but food;
They eat us hungerly, and when they are full,
They belie us.

Enter Iago and Cassio.

Cass. Look you! Cassio, and my husband
Iago. There is no other way; 'tis she must do't:
And, lo, the happiness! go, and importune her.

Des. How now, good Cassio! what's the news with you?

Cas. Madam, my former suit. I do beseech you,
That by your virtuous means I may again
Exist, and be a member of his love.
Whom I, with all the office of my heart,
Entirely honour: I would not be delay'd.
If my offence be of such mortal kind,
That nor my service past, nor present sorrows,
Nor purpose merit in futurity,
Can ransom me into his love again, 12

Des. Alas! thrice-gentle Cassio,
My advocation is not now in tune;
My lord is not my lord; nor should I know him,
Were he in favour, as in honour, alter'd.
So help me every spirit sanctified,
As I have spoken for you all my best,
And stood within the blank of his displeasure,
For my free speech. You must a while be patient:
What I can do, I will; and more I will,
Than for myself I dare: let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my lord angry?

Emil. He went hence but now.
And, certainly, in strange unquietness.

Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon,
When it hath blown his ranks into the air,
And, like the devil, from his very arm
Puff'd his own brother:—and can he be angry?
Something of moment, then: I will go meet him.

There's matter in't, indeed, if he be angry.

Des. I pr'ythee, do so. [Exit Iago.]—Something, sure, of state,—
Either from Venice, or some unwatch'd practice,
Made demonstrable here in Cyprus to him,—
Hath puddled his clear spirit; and, in such cases,
Men's natures wrangle with inferior things,
Though great ones are their object. 'Tis even so;
For let our finger ache, and it induces
Our other heathful members ev'n to that sense
Of pain; nay, we must think, men are not gods;
Nor of them look for such observances
As fit the bridal.—Beshrew me much, Emilia,
I was (unhandsome warrior as I am)
Arraigning his unkindness with my soul;
But now I find, I had subORN'd the witness,
And he's indicted falsely.

Emil. Pray heaven, it be state matters, as you think,
And no conception, nor no jealous toy,
Concerning you.

Des. Alas, the day! I never gave him cause,

Emil. But jealous souls will not be answer'd so;
They are not ever jealous for a cause,
But jealous for they are jealous: 'tis a monster,
Begot upon itself. born on itself.

Des. Heaven keep that monster from Othello's mind!

Emil. Lady, amen.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same.

Enter Othello and Iago.

Iago. If they do nothing, 'tis a venial slip
But if I give my wife a handkerchief,—

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why, then 'tis hers, my lord; and, being acess
She may, I think, bestow 't on any man.

Oth. She is protectress of her honour too:
May she give that?

Iago. Her honour is an essence that's not seen;
They have it very oft, that have it not:

Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it
Then said,—O! it comes o'er my memory,
As doth the raven o'er the infected house,
Beding to all,—he had my handkerchief.
Iago. Ay, what of that?

Oth. That's not so good, now.

Iago. What, if I had said, I had seen him do you wrong?

Oth. Or heard him say,—as knaves be such abroad,
Who having, by their own importunate suit,
Or voluntary dullage of some mistress,
Convinced or supplied them, cannot choose
But they must blab.

Oth. Hath he said any thing?

Iago. He hath, my lord; but be you well assur'd,
No more than he'll unswear.

Oth. What hath he said?

Iago. 'Faith, that he did,—I know not what he did.

Oth. What? what?

Iago. Lie—

Oth. With her?

Iago. With her, on her; what you will.

Oth. Lie with her! lie on her!—We say, lie on her, when they belie her. Lie with her! that's false.—
Handkerchief,—confessions,—handkerchief!—To confes-
and be hanged for his labour.—First, to be hanged, and then to confess:—I tremble at it. Nature would not invest herself in such shuddering passion without some instruction. It is not words, that shake me thus:
—Pish!—Noses, ears, and lips.—Is it possible?—Confes-
fess!—Handkerchief!—O devil!—

[Enter Cassio.]

Iago. Work on,

My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are caught:
And many worthy and chaste dames, even thus,
All guilless, meet reproach.—What, ho! my lord!

Enter Cassio.

Cassio. My lord, I say! Othello!—How now, Cassio!

Cas. What's the matter?

Iago. My lord is fallen into an epilepsy:
This is his second fit; he had one yesterday.

Cas. Rub him about the temples.

Iago. No, forbear. The lethargy must have his quiet course,
If not, he foams at mouth; and, by and by,
Breaks out to savage madness. Look, he stirs:
Do you withdraw yourself a little while,
He will recover straight: when he is gone,
I would on great occasion speak with you.—

[Exit Cassio.]

How is it, general? have you not hurt your head?

Oth. Dost thou mock me?

Iago. I mock you! no, by heaven.

Would you would bear your fortunes like a man.

Oth. A horned man's a monster, and a beast.

Iago. There's many a beast, then, in a populous city,
And many a civil monster.

Oth. Did he confess it?

Iago. Good sir, be a man;
Think, ever bearded fellow, that's but yok'd,
May draw with you: there's millions now alive,
That nightly lie in those unproper beds,
Which they dare swear peculiar: your case is better.
O! 'tis the spite of hell, the fiend's arch-mock,
To lip a wanton in a secure couch,
And to suppose her chaste. No, let me know;
And, knowing what I am, I know what she shall be.

Oth. O! thou art wise; 'tis certain.

Iago. Stand you awhile apart;

Confin'd yourself but in a patient list,
Whilst you were here, o'erwhelm'd with your grief,
(A passion most unfitting such a man)
Oth. Crying, O dear Cassio! as it were: his gesture imports it.
[Aside.]
Cas. So hangs', and lolls, and weeps upon me; so halts, and pulls me; ha, ha, ha!—
Oth. Now he tells, how she plucked him to my chamber. O! I see that rose of yours, but that dog I shall throw it to.
[Aside.]
Cas. Well, I must leave her company.
Iago. Before me! look where she comes.
Enter Bianca.
Cas. 'Tis such another fitcheon! marry, a perfumed one.—What do you mean by this haunting of me?
Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you! What did you mean by that same handkerchief, you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to take it. I must take out the work!—A likely piece of work, that you should find it in your chamber, and know not who left it there. This is some minx's token, and I must take out the work? There, give it your hobby-horse: wherever you had it, I'll take out no work on't.
Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca! how now, how now!
Oth. By heaven, that should be my handkerchief!
[Aside.]
Iago. An you'll come to supper to-night, you may: an you will not, come when you are next prepared for.
[Exit.]
Jago. After her, after her.
Cas. 'Faith, I must; she'll rail in the street else.
Iago. Will you sup there?
Cas. 'Faith, I intend so.
Iago. Well, I may chance to see you, for I would very fain speak with you.
Cas. Prythee, come; will you?
Iago. Go to; say no more.
[Exit Cassio.]
Oth. [Advancing.] How shall I murder him, Iago?
Iago. Did you perceive how he laughed at his vice?
Oth. O, Iago!
Iago. And did you see the handkerchief?
Oth. Was that mine?
Iago. Yours, by this hand: and to see how he prizes the foolish woman your wife! she gave it him, and he hath given it his whore.
Oth. I would have him nine years a killing.—A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman!
Iago. Nay, you must forget that.
Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be damned to-night, for she shall not live. No, my heart is turned to stone; I strike it, and it hurts my hand. O! the world hath not a sweeter creature: she might be by an emperor's side, and command him tasks.
Iago. Hang her! I do but say what she is.—So delicate with her needle!—An admirable musician! O! she will sing the savageness out of a bear.—Of so high and plentiful wit and invention!—
Iago. She's the worse for all this.
Oth. O! a thousand thousand times. And then, of gentle a condition.
Iago. Ay, too gentle.
Oth. Nay, that's certain:—but yet the pity of it, Iago!—O, Iago! the pity of it, Iago!
Iago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend; for if it touch not you, it comes near nobody.
Oth. I will chop her into messes.—Cuckold me!
Iago. O! 'tis foul in her.
Oth. With mine officer!
Iago. That's foul'er.

Am I the occasion of these tears, my lord? If, haply, you my father do suspect An instrument of this your calling back, Lay not your blame on me: if you have lost him, Why, I have lost him too.

Oth. Had it pleas'd heaven To try me with affliction; had he rain'd All kinds of shores, and shames, on my bare head. Snoop'd me in poverty to the very lips; Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes: I should have found in some part of my soul A drop of patience: but, alas! to make me A fixed figure, for the hand of scorn To point his slowly moving finger at; Yet could I bear that too; well, very well: But there, where I have garner'd up my heart, Where either I must live, or bear no life, The fountain from which my current runs Or else dries up; to be discardedtheme, Or keep it as a cistern, for foul toads To knot and gender in!—turn thy complexion there, Patience, thou young and rose-lipp'd cherubin; Ay, there, look grim as hell! Emil. O, fie upon them! some such squire he was.
That turn'd your wit the seamy side without,
And made you to suspect me with the Moor.

Iago. You are a fool; go to.

Des. O good Iago!

What shall I do to win my lord again?
Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of heaven,
I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel:
If e'er my will did trespass against his love,
Either in discourse of thought, or actual deed;
Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense,
Delighted them in any other form;
Or that I do not yet, and ever did,
And ever will,—though he do shake me off
To beggarly divorce,—love him dearly,
Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much;
And his unkindness may defeat my life,
But never taint my love. I cannot say where:
It does abhor me now I speak the word:
To do the act that might the addition earn,
Not the world's mass of vanity could make me.
Iago. I pray you, be content; 't is but his humour:
The business of the state does him offence,
And he does chide with you.

Des. If 'twere no other,

Iago. 'Tis but so, I warrant. [Music.

Hark, how these instruments summon to supper!
The messengers of Venice stay the meat.
Go in, and weep not; all things shall be well.

[Exeunt Desdemona and Emil.]

Enter Roderigo.

How now, Roderigo!

Rod. I do not find that thou deal'st justly with me.

Iago. What in the contrary?

Rod. Every day thou dost me with some device,
Iago; and rather, as it seems to me now, keep'st from me all conveniency, that supplest me with the least advantage of hope. I will, indeed, no longer endure it; nor am I yet persuaded, to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffered.

Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo?

Rod. Faith, I have heard too much; for your words, and performances, are not kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly.

Rod. With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means; the jewels you have had from me, to deliver to Desdemona, would half have corrupted a votarist; you have told me, she has received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquittance; but I find none.

Iago. Well; go to; very well.

Rod. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man; nor 'tis not very well: by this hand, I say, it is very seurry; and begin to find myself fobbed in it.

Iago. Very well.

Rod. I tell you, 'tis not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona: if she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit; and repent my unlawful solicitation; if not, assure yourself, I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now.

Rod. Ay, and I have said nothing, but what I profess intend of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee; and even, from this instant, do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand. Roderigo: thou hast taken against me a most just exception: but, yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair. Roder. It hath not appeared. Iago. I grant, indeed, it hath not appeared, and your suspicion is not without wit and judgment. But, Roderigo, if thou hast that within thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever,—I mean, purpose, courage, and valour,—this night show it: if thou the next night following enjoyest not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery, and devise engines for my life.

Rod. Well, what is it? is it within reason, and compass?

Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice, to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

Iago. O, no! he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident; wherein none can be so determinate as the removing of Cassio.

Rod. How do you mean removing of him?

Iago. Why, by making him uncapable of Othello's place; knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me do?

Iago. Ay; if you dare do yourself a profit, and a right. He sups to-night with a harlotry, and thither will I go to him: he knows not yet of his honourable fortune. If you will watch his going thence, (which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one) you may take him at your pleasure: I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a necessity in his death, that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste: about it.

Rod. I will hear farther reason for this.

Iago. And you shall be satisfied. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Lodovico, Desdemona, Emilia, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no farther.

Oth. O! pardon me; 't will do me good to walk.

Lod. Madam, good-night; I humbly thank your ladyship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome.

Oth. Will you walk, sir?—

Des. My lord?

Oth. Get you to bed on the instant; I will be returned forthwith. Dismiss your attendant there: look, it be done.

Des. I will, my lord. [Exeunt Othello, Lodovico, and Attendants.

Emil. How goes it now? he looks gentler than he did. Des. He says, he will return incontinent. He hath commanded me to go to bed, and bade me to dismiss you.

Emil. Dismiss me! Des. It was his bidding; therefore, good Emilia, give me my nightly wearing, and adieu: We must not now displease him.

Emil. I would you had never seen him.

Des. So would not I: my love doth so approve him,

That even his stubbornness, his cheeks, and frowns,—Pr'ythee, unpin me,—have grace and favour in them.

Emil. I have laid those sheets you bade me on the bed.

Des. All's one.—Good faith, how foolish are our minds!—If I do die before thee, pr'ythee, shroud me in one of those same sheets.

Emil. Come, come, you talk.

Des. My mother had a maid call'd Barbara:
She was in love; and she lov'd prov'd mad,
And did forsake her: she had a song of—willow,
An old thing 't was, but it express'd her fortune,
And she did singing it: that song, to-night,
Will not go from my mind; I have much to do,
Not to go hang my head all at one side,
And sing it like poor Barbara. Pr'ythee, despatch.

Emil. Shall I go fetch your night-gown?

Des. No, unpin me here.—This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emil. A very handsome man.

Des. He speaks well.

Emil. I know a lady in Venice would have walked barefoot to Palestine for a touch of his nether lip.

Des. A poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree. [Singing.

Sing all a green willow;
Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee,
Sing willow, willow, willow;
The fresh streams ran by her and murmur'd her nooks;
Sing willow, willow, willow;
Her salt tears fell from her, and soften'd the stones; Lay by these.—

Pr'ythee, hie thee; 't will come anon.

Sing all a green willow must be my garland,
Let nobody blame him, his scorn I approve,—
Nay, that's not next.—Hark! who is it that knocks?

Emil. It is the wind.

Des. I call'd my love false love; but what said he then?

Sing willow, willow, willow:
If I court no women, you'll conch with no men
So, get thee gone; good night. Mine eyes do itch;
Doth that bode weeping?

Emil. 'Tis neither here nor there.

Des. I have heard it said so,—O, these men, these men!—

Dost thou in conscience think,—tell me, Emilia,—That there be women do abuse their husbands
In such gross kind?

Emil. There be some such, no question.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. Why, would not you?

Des. No, by this heavenly light

Emil. Nor I neither by this heavenly light:
I might do 't as well I the dark.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. The world is a huge thing: 'tis a great price
For a small vice.

Des. In troth, I think thou wouldst not

Emil. In troth, I think I should, and undo't, when I had done. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring, nor for measures of lawn, nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition, but, for the whole world,—why, who would not make her hus-

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Street.

Enter IAGO and RODERIGO.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk; straight will he come:
Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home.
Quick, quick; fear nothing; I'll be at thy elbow.
It makes us, or it mars us; think on that,
And fix most firm thy resolution.

Rod. Be near at hand; I may miscarry in't.
Iago. Here, at thy hand: be bold, and take thy stand.

Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed;
And yet he has given me satisfying reasons—
Tis but a man gone:—forth, my sword; he dies.

[Stands back.]

Iago. I have rubb'd this young quat almost to the sense,
And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill Cassio,
Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my game;—live Roderigo,
He calls me to a restitution large
Of gold, and jewels, that I bobb'd from him,
As gifts to Desdemona;
It must not be: if Cassio do remain,
He hath a daily beauty in his life,
That makes me ugly; and, besides, the Moor
May unfold to him:—there stand I in much peril.
No, he must die:—be't so; I hear him coming.

[Retiring.]

Enter Cassio.

Rod. I know his guilt: 'tis he.—Villain, thou diest.
[Drawing, and wounding Roderigo.]

Iago starts forward, cuts Cassio behind
In the Leg, and exit.

Cas. I am main'd for ever.—Light, ho! murder, murder!

[Enter Othello, at a distance.]

Oth. The voice of Cassio. Iago keeps his word.

Rod. O, villain that I am!—

Oth. It is even so.

Cas. O, help! ho! light! a surgeon!

Oth. 'Tis he.—O brave Iago! honest, and just,
That hast such noble sense of thy friend's wrong;
Thou teachest me. Minion, your dear lies dead,
And your unblest fate hies:—strumpet, I come.
Forth of my heart those charms, thine eyes, are blotted;
Thy bed, lust-stain'd, shall with lust's blood be spotted.

[Exit Othello.

Enter LODVICO and GRATIANO, at a distance.]

Cas. What, ho! no watch? no passage? murder! murder!

Gra. 'Tis some mischance; the cry is very direful.

Cas. O, help!

Lod. Hark!

Rod. O, wretched villain!

Lod. Two or three groan.—It is a heavy night.

These may be counterfeits: let's think't unsafe.
To come in to the cry without more help.

Rod. No body come? then, shall I bleed to death.

[Enter Iago, unready, 16 with a Light.

Lod. Hark!

Gra. Here's one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.

Iago. Who's there? whose noise is this, that cries out murder thus?

Lod. We do not know.

Cas. Did not you hear a cry?

Iago. What's the matter?

Gra. This is Othello's ancient, as I take it.

Lod. The same indeed; a very valiant fellow.

Iago. What are you here, that cry so grievously?

Cas. Iago? O! I am spoil'd; undone by villains:
Give me some help.

Iago. O me, lieutenant! what villains have done this?

Cas. I think that one of them is hereabout,
And cannot make away.

Iago. O treacherous villains!—

What are you there? come in, and give some help.

[To LODVICO and GRATIANO.

Rod. O, help me! here.

Cas. That's one of them.

Iago. O murderous slave! O villain!

[Enter Iago, stabb'd RODERIGO.]

Iago. Signior Lodovico?
 Lod. He, sir.
Iago. I cry you mercy. Here’s Cassio hurt by villains.
Gra. Cassio?
Iago. How is it, brother?
Cas. My leg is cut in two.
Iago. Gentleman, all I do suspect this trash To be a party in this injury. —
Patience a while, good Cassio. —Come, come, Lend me a light. —Know we this face, or no?

[Looking at Rod.]

Iago. How do you, Cassio? —O, a chair, a chair! Gra. Roderigo! Iago. He, he, ’tis he! —O! that’s well said:—the chair. —[A chair brought.]
Some good man bear him carefully from hence; I’ll fetch the general’s surgeon. —For you, mistress, [To Bianca.]
Save you your labour. —He that lies slain here, Cassio, Was my dear friend. What malice was between you? Cas. None in the world: nor do I know the man. Iago. What, look you pale? —O, bear him out of the air. —[Cassio and Rod. are borne off.]
Stay you, good gentlemen. —Look you pale, mistress? Do you perceive the gappiness of her eye? Nay an you stir:—we shall hear more anon.
Behold her well; I pray you, look upon her: Do you see, gentlemen? nay, guiltiness will speak, Though tongues were out of use, [Enter Emilia.
Emil. Alas! what’s the matter? what’s the matter, husband?
Iago. Cassio hath here been set on in the dark By Roderigo, and fellows that are scant’d: He’s almost slain, and Roderigo dead. —
Emil. Alas, good gentleman! alas, good Cassio! Iago. This is the fruit of whoring. —Yr’theke, Emilia, Go know of Cassio where he supp’d to-night. —
What! do you shake at that?
Bian. He supp’d at my house; but I therefore shake not.
Iago. O! did he so? I charge you, go with me. Emil. O, fie upon thee, strumpet! —
Bian. I am no strumpet; but of life as honest, As you that thus abuse me. Emil. As I? fie upon thee!
Iago. Kind gentlemen, let’s go see poor Cassio dress’d. —
Come, mistress, you must tell ’s another tale. —
Emilia, run you to the citadel, And tell my lord and lady what hath happ’d. —
Will you go on, I pray? —This is the night, [Aside. That either makes me, or fordoe me quite. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Bedchamber.

DESDEMONA in Bed asleep. A Light burning. Enter Othello, locking the Door after him.
Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul, —
Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars! —
It is the cause. —Yet I’ll not shed her blood; Nor scar that whiter skin of hers than snow, And smooth as monumental alabaster. Yet she must die, else she ’ll betray more men. Put out the light, and then—put out the light? If I quench thee, thou flaming minister, I can again thy former light restore, Should I repent me; but once put out thy light, ‘Thou cunningst’st® pattern of excelling nature, I know not where is that Prometheus’ heat, That can thy light relume. When I have pluck’d the rose, I cannot give it vital growth again, It needs must wither: —I’ll smell it till on the tree, —[Kissing her.
O balmy breath, that dost almost persuade Justice to break her sword! —One more, one more. —
Be thou with me, my lord! And I will kill thee, And love thee after. —One more, and this the last:
So sweet was ne’er so fatal. I must weep, But they are cruel tears: this sorrow’s heavenly; It strikes, where it doth love. —She wakes —
Des. Who’s there? Othello?
Oth. Ay, Desdemona.
Des. Will you come to bed, my lord?
Oth. Have you pray’d to-night, Desdemona?
Des. Yes, my lord. Oth. If you bethink yourself of any crime, Unreconcil’d as yet to heaven and grace, Solicit for it straight.
Des. Alas, my lord! what may you mean by that?
Oth. Well, do it, and be brief: I will walk by: I would not kill thy unpurified spirit; No, heaven forfend, I would not kill thy soul. Des. Talk you of killing?
Oth. Ay, I do. Des. Then, heaven Have mercy on me! Oth. Amen, with all my heart. Des. If you say so, I hope you will not kill me. Oth. Humph! Des. And yet I fear you: for you are fatal then, When your eyes roll so. Why I should fear, I know not Since guiltiness I know not; but yet, I feel I fear. Oth. Think on thy sins. Des. Des. That death's unnatural, that kills for loving.—

Alas! why ganst thou so thy mother's lip?

Somes bloody passion shakes thy very frame:
These are portents: but yet, I hope, I hope,
They do not point on me.

Oth. Peace, and be still!

Des. I will so. What's the matter?

Oth. That handkerchief, which I so lov'd, and gave thee,

Thou gav'st to Cassio.

Des. No, by my life and soul!

Send for the man, and ask him.

Oth. Sweet soul, take heed,

Take heed of perjury; thou'rt on thy death-bed.

Des. Ay, but not yet to die.

Oth. Therefore, confess thee freely of thy sin;

For to deny each article with oath,

Cannot remove, nor chace, the strong conception,

That I do groan withal. Thou art to die.

Des. Then, Lord, have mercy on me!

Oth. I say, amen.

Des. And have you mercy too!—I never did

Offend you in my life; never lov'd Cassio,

But with such general warranty of heaven

As I might love: I never gave him token.

Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in his hand.

O perjur'd woman! thou dost stone my heart,
And mak'st me call, what I intend to do,

A murder, which I thought a sacrifice.

I saw the handkerchief.

Des. He found it then;

I never gave it him.—Send for him hither;

Let him confess a truth.

Oth. He hath confess'd.

Des. What, my lord?

Oth. That he hath—ne'd thee.

Des. How? unlawfully?

Oth. Ay.

Des. He will not say so.

Oth. No, his mouth is stopp'd;

Honest Iago hath ta'en order for 't.

Des. My fear interprets then.—What! is he dead?

Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge

Had stomach for them all.

Des. Alas! he is betray'd, and I undone.

Oth. Out, strumpet! Weep'st thou for him to my face?

Des. O! banish me, my lord, but kill me not.

Oth. Down, strumpet! Easy. Kill me to-morrow; let me live to-night.

Des. Nay, if you strive,—

But half an hour.

Oth. Being done,

There is no pause.

Des. But while I say one prayer.

Oth. It is too late.

Des. O Lord, Lord, Lord! [He smothers her.]

Emil. [Within.] My lord, my lord! what ho! my lord, my lord!

Oth. What noise is this? Not dead: not yet quite dead?

I, that am cruel, am yet merciful;

I would not have thee linger in thy pain.

So, so.

Emil. [Within.] What ho! my lord, my lord!

Oth. Who's there? 1

Emil. [Within.] O, good my lord! I would speak a word with you.

Oth. Yes!—'tis Emilia.—By and by,—She's dead.
'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death;

The noise was high. [Hark! no more moving?]

Still as the grave.—Shall she come in? Were 't good?

If she come in, she'll sure speak to my wife:

My wife! my wife! what wife?—I have no wife:

O insupportable, O heavy hour!

Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse

Of sun and moon, and that th' affrighted globe

Should yawn at alteration.

Emil. [Within.] I do beseech you, I may speak with you.

O, good my lord!

Oth. I had forgot thee. O! come in, Emilia.—

Soit,—by and by;—let me the curtains draw.—

Where art thou? What's the matter with thee now?

[Unlocks the Door.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. O, good my lord! yender's soul murder done,

Oth. What! now?

Emil. But now, my lord!

Oth. It is the very error of the moon;

She comes more near the earth than she was wont

And makes me mad.

Emil. Cassio, my lord, has kill'd a young Venetian.

Call'd Roderigo.

Oth. Roderigo kill'd?

And Cassio kill'd?

Emil. No; Cassio is not kill'd.

Oth. Not Cassio kill'd? Then murder's out of tune,

And sweet revenge grows harsh.

Des. O, falsely, falsely murder'd!

Emil. Alas! what ery is that?

Oth. That! what?

Emil. Out, and alas! that was my lady's voice—
Help! Help, ho! help!—O lady, speak again!

[Going to the bed.

Sweet Desdemona! O, sweet mistress, speak!

Des. A guiltless death I die.

Emil. O! who hath done

This deed?

Des. Nobody; I myself; farewell:

Command me to my kind lord. O farewell! [Dies.

Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd?

Emil. Alas, who knows.

Oth. You heard her say herself, it was not I.

Emil. She said so; I must needs report a truth.

Oth. She's like a liar gone to burning hell:—
'Twas I that kill'd her.

Emil. O! the more angel she,

And you the blacker devil.

Oth. She turn'd to folly, and she was a whore.

Emil. Thou dost belie her, and thou art a devil.

Oth. She was false as water.

Emil. Thou art rash as fire to say

That she was false: O! she was heavenly true.

Oth. Cassio did top her; ask thy husband eise.—

O! I was damn'd beneath all depth in hell,
But that I did proceed upon just grounds

To this extremity.—Thy husband knew it all.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. Thy husband.

Emil. That she was false to wedlock?

Oth. Ay, with Cassio. Nay, she had been true,
If heaven would make me such another world.
Scene II.

OtheLlo, the Moor of Venice.

(Of one entire and perfect chrysolite, I'd not have sold her for it.)

Emil. My husband?

Oth. Ay, 'tis he that told me first:

An honest man he is, and hates the slime
That sticks on filthy deeds.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. What needs this iteration, woman? I say, thy husband.

Emil. O mistress! villainy hath made mocks with love.—

My husband say, that she was false?

Oth. He, woman; I say, thy husband: dost understand the word? My friend, thy husband, honest, honest Iago.

Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the heart:

She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.

Oth. Ha! [Threatening her,]

Emil. Do thy worst:

This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven,
Than thou wast worth her.

Oth. Peace! you were best.

Emil. Thou hast not half the power to do me harm,
As I have to be hurt. O gull! O bolt!
Ar ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed,—
I care not for thy sword; I'll make thee known,
Though I lost twenty lives. —Help! help! oh! help!

The Moor has kill'd my mistress! Murder! murder!

Enter Montano, Gratiano, and Iago.

Mon. What is the matter? — How now, general! Emil. O! are you come, Iago? you have done well,
That men must lay their murders on your neck.

Gra. What is the matter?

Emil. Disprove this villain, if thou be'st a man:
He says, thou toldst him that his wife was false.

I know, thou didst not, thou'st not such a villain.

Speak, for my heart is full.

Iago. I told him what I thought; and told no more.

Thar what he found himself as apt and true.

Emil. But did you ever tell him, she was false?

Iago. I did.

Emil. You told a lie; an odious, damned lie;

Upon my soul, a lie; a wicked lie,—

She false with Cassio! — Did you say with Cassio?

Iago. With Cassio, mistress. Go to, charm your tongue.

Emil. I will not charm my tongue; I am bound to speak.

My mistress here lies murder'd in her bed. —

All, O, heaven forfend! —

Emil. And your reports have set the murderer on.

Oth. Nay, stare not, masters: it is true, indeed.

Gra. 'Tis a strange truth.

Mon. O monstrous act!

Emil. Villainy! villainy! villainy! I think upon't, — I think, — I smell 't: — O villainy! I thought so then: — I'll kill myself for grief. —

O villainy, villainy! Iago. What! are you mad? I charge you, get you home.

Emil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave to speak:

'T is proper I obey him, but not now. —

Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home.

Oth. O! O! O! [Falling on the ground.]

Emil. Nay, lay thee down and roar,

For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent,

That e'er did lift up eye.

Oth. O! she was foul— [Starting up]

I scarce did know you, uncle: there lies your niece,
Whose breath, indeed, these hands have newly stopp'd

I know, this act shows terrible and grim.

Gra. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father's dead

Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief

Shore his old thread in twain: did he live now,

This sight would make him do a desperate turn,

Yea, curse his better angel from his side,

And fall to reprobration. —

Oth. 'T is pitiful; but yet Iago knows,

That she with Cassio hath the act of shame

A thousand times committed: Cassio confess'd it;

And she did gratify his amorous works

With that recognizance and pledge of love

Which I first gave her. I saw it in his hand;

It was a handkerchief, an antique token

My father gave my mother.

Emil. O heaven! O heavenly powers!

Iago. Come, hold your peace.

Emil. 'T will out, 't will out: — I hold my peace,

sir? no:

No, I will speak as liberal as the wind.

Let heaven, and men, and devils, let them all,

All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.

Iago. Be wise, and get you home. [Drawing.

Emil. I will not. [Iago offers to stab Emil. Gra.

Fie! —

Your sword upon a woman?

Emil. O thou dull Moor! that handkerchief thou speak'st of,

I found by fortune, and did give my husband:

For often, with a solemn earnestness,

(More than, indeed, belong'd to such a trible)

He begg'd of me to steal it.

Iago. Villainous whore! [They hold him.]

Emil. She give it Cassio! no, alas! I found it,

And I did give it my husband.

Iago. Filth, thou liest. [Stabs her, and exit instantly.

O murderous coxcomb! what should such a fool

Do with so good a wife? —

Oth. Are there no stones in heaven,

But what serve for the thunder? — Precious villain!

Gra. The woman falls: sure, he has kill'd his wife.

Emil. Ay, ay—O, lay me by my mistress' side!

Gra. He's gone, but his wife's kill'd.

Mon. 'T is a notorious villain. Take you this weapon,

Which I have here recover'd from the Moor.

Come, guard the door without: let him not pass,

But kill him rather. I'll after that same villain,

For 't is a damned slave.

[Enter Montano and Gratiano.]

Oth. I am not valiant neither,

But every puny whisper gets my sword.

But why should honour outline honesty?

Let it go all.

Emil. What did thy song bode, lady?

Hark, canst thou hear me? I will play the swan,

And die in music:— Willow, willow, willow.—

Moor, she was chaste; she lov'd thee, cruel Moor:

So come my soul to bliss, as I speak true;

So speaking as I think, I die,—I die. [Dies.

Oth. I have another weapon in this chamber,

It is a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's temper.

O! here it is.—Uncle, I must come forth.

Othello, the Moor of Venice.

ACT V.

Gra. [Within.] If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear:
Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.

Oth. Look in upon me, then, and speak to me,
Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee.

Re-enter Gratiano.

Gra. What is the matter?

Oth. Behold! I have a weapon;
A better never did itself sustain
Upon a soldier’s thigh: I have seen the day,
That, with this little arm, and this good sword,
I have made my way through more impolliments
Than twenty times your stop.—But, O vain boast!
Who can control his fate? ’Is not so now.—
Be not afraid, though you do see me weapon’d;
Here is my journey’s end, here is my butt,
And very sea-mark of my utmost sail,
Do you go back dismay’d? ’tis a lost fear;
Man but a rush against Othello’s breast,
And he retires.—Where should Othello go?—
Now, how dost thou look now? O ill-star’d wench
Pale as thy smock! when we shall meet at comb,
This look of thine will hurl my soul from heaven,
And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my girl;
Even like thy chastity,—O, cursed slave!—
Whip me, ye devils,

From the possession of this heavenly sight!
Blow me about in winds! roast me in sulphur!
Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire!

O Desdemona! Desdemona! dead? O! O!"

Enter Lodovico and Cassio.

Lod. Where is this rash and most unfortunate man?
Oth. That’s he, that was Othello: here I am.

Lod. Where is that viper? Bring the villain forth.

Enter Montano with Iago, bound, and Officers.

Oth. I look down towards his feet—but that’s a fable:
If that thou be’st a devil, I cannot kill thee.

Othello wounds Iago.

Iago. Wrench his sword from him,

Iago. I bleed, sir; but not kill’d.

Oth. I am not sorry neither: I’d have thee live;
For, in my sense, ’tis happiness to die.

Lod. O thou Othello! that wert once so good,
Fall’n in the practice of a damned slave,
What shall be said to thee?

Oth. Why, any thing:
An honourable murderer, if you will;
For nought I did in hate, but all in honour.

Lod. This wretch hath part confess’d his villainy.

Did you and he consent in Cassio’s death?

Oth. Ay.

Cas. Dear general, I never gave you cause.
Oth. I do believe it, and I ask your pardon.

Will you, I pray, demand that demi-devil,
Why he hath thus ensn’rd my soul and body?

Jago. Demand me nothing: what you know, you know.

From this time forth I never will speak word.

Lod. What! not to pray?

Gra. Torments will ope your lips.

Oth. Well, then dost best.

Lod. Sir, you shall understand what hath befall’n,
Which, as I think, you know not. Here is a letter,
Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo; [Showing it.
And here another: the one of them imports
The death of Cassio to be undertook
By Roderigo.

Oth. O villain!

Cas. Most heathenish, and most gross

Lod. Now, here’s another discontented paper,

[Producing it.

Found in his pocket too; and this, it seems,
Roderigo meant to have sent this damned villain,
But that, be like, Iago in the interim;*

Came in and satisfied him.

Oth. O, the pernicious caiff!—

How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief,
That was my wife’s?

Cas. I found it in my chamber;

And he himself confess’d, but even now;
That there he dropp’d it, for a special purpose,
Which wrought to his desire.

Oth. O! fool! fool! fool!

Cas. There is, besides, in Roderigo’s letter,
How he upbraids Iago, that he made him

Brave me upon the watch; whereon it came
That I was cast: and even but now he spake,
After long seeming dead,—Iago hurt him,

Iago set him on.

Lod. You must forsake this room, and go with us
Your power and your command is taken off,
And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this slave,
If there be any cunning cruelty
That can torment him much, and hold him long,
It shall be his. You shall close prisoner rest
Till that the nature of your fault be known
To the Venetian state.—Come: bring them away.

Oth. Soft you; a word or two, before you go,
I have done the state some service, and they know it;
No more of that.—I pray you, in your letters,
When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,
Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate,
Nor set down aught in mære: then must you speak
Of one that lov’d, not wisely, but too well;
Of one not easily jealous, but, being jealous;
Perplex’d in the extreme; of one, whose hand,
Like the base Indian,14 threw a pearl away
Richer than all his tribe; of one, whose subdued eyes,
Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their medicinal gun. Set you down this;
And say, besides, that in Aleppo once,
When15 a malignant and a turban’d Turk
Beat a Venetian, and traduced the state,
I took by the throat the circumcised dog,
And smote him—thus. [Stabs himself

Lod. O bloody period!

Gra. All that’s spoke is marr’d

Oth. I kiss’d thee, ere I kill’d thee:—no way but this,
Killing myself, to die upon a kiss. [Dies on the Bed

Cas. This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon
For he was great of heart.

Lod. O Spartan dog!

More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea,
Look on the tragic loading16 of this bed;

To Iago
This is thy work: the object poisons sight;
Let it be hid; Gratiano, keep the house,
And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor,
For they succeed on you. —To you; lord governor,
Remains the censure of this heathish villain;
The time, the place, the torture:—O, enforce it!
Myself will straight aboard, and to the state
This heavy act with heavy heart relate. [Exit

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

M. ANTONY, OCTAVIUS CAESAR, M. AEMIL. LEPIDUS, Sextus Pompeius, DOMITIUS ENOBARBUS, VENTIDIVUS, EROS, SCARUS, DERCESTAS, DEMETRIUS, PHILO, MECENAS, AGRIPPAL, DOLABELLA, PROCULEIUS, THYREUS, GALLUS, MENAS, MENECRATES, Friends to Pompey, VARRIUS, TAURUS, Lieutenant-General to Caesar, CAHNTHUS, Lieutenant-General to Antony SILIUS, an Officer under Ventidius, EUPHRONIUS, Ambassador from Antony to Caesar ALEXAS, MARDIAN, SELEUCUS, and DIOMEDES Attendants on Cleopatra. A Soothsayer. A Clown.

CLEOPATRA, Queen of Egypt. OCTAVIUS, Sister to Caesar, and Wife to Antony. CHARMIAN, Attendants on Cleopatra. IRAS, Officers, Soldiers, Messengers, and other Attendants.

SCENE, in several Parts of the Roman Empire.

ACT I.

Enter Demetrius and Philo.

Phi. Nay, but this dotage of our general's O'erflows the measure: those his goodly eyes, That o'er the files and musters of the war Have glow'd like plated Mars, now bend, now turn The office and devotion of their view Upon a towny front: his captain's heart, Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst The buckles on his breast, reneget all temper, And is become the bellows, and the fan, To cool a gipsy's lust. Look, where they come.

Flourish. Enter Antony and Cleopatra, with their Trains; Eunuchs fanning her.
Take but good note, and you shall see in him The triple pillar of the world transform'd into a strumpet's foot: behold and see.

Cleo. If it be love indeed, tell me how much.

Ant. There's begging in the love that can be reck'n'd.

Cleo. I'll set a bourn how far to be belov'd.

Ant. Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. News, my good lord, from Rome.

Ant. Grates me:—the sum.

Cleo. Nay, hear them, Antony:
Fulvia, per chace, is angry; or, who knows If the scarce-bearded Caesar have not sent His powerful mandate to you, "Do this, or this;''

Denies 3 damn: in f. e. 3 Know.

Take in that kingdom, and enfranchise that; Perform 't, or else we doom thee.'

Ant. How, my love!

Cleo. Perchance,—nay, and most like,—
You must not stay here longer; your dismissal Is come from Caesar; therefore hear it, Antony,— Where's Fulvia's process? Caesar's, I would say — Both?—

Call in the messengers. —As I am Egypt's queen, Thou boldest, Antony, and that blood of thine Is Caesar's homager; else so thy cheek pays shame, When shrill-tong'd Fulvia scolds —The messengers

Ant. Let Rome in Tyber melt, and the wide arch Of the rang'd empire fall! Here is my space. Kingdoms are clay: our dungy earth alike Feeds beast as man: the nobleness of life Is to do thus; when such a mutual pair, [Embracing And such a twain can do't, in which I bind, On pain of punishment, the world to weet, We stand up peerless.

Cleo. Excellent falsehood! Why did he marry Fulvia, and not love her?— I'll seem the fool I am not; Antony Will be himself.

Ant. But stir'd by Cleopatra.—

Now, for the love of Love, and her soft hours, Let's not confound the time with conference harsh: There's not a minute of our lives should stretch Without some pleasure now. What sport to-night?

Cleo. Hear the ambassadors.

Ant. Fie, wrangling queen! Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh,
To weep; whose every fashion filthily strives
To make itself, in thee, fair and admir'd.
No messenger; but thine, and all alone,
To-night we'll wander through the streets, and note
The qualities of people. Come, my queen;
Last night you did desire it.—Speak not to us.

[Exeunt Ant. and Cleop. with their Train.

Dem. Is Caesar with Antonius priz'd so slight?
Phil. Sir, sometimes, when he is not Antony,
He comes too short of that great property
Which still should go with Antony.

Dem. I am full sorry,
That he approves the common liar, who
Thus speaks of him at Rome; but I will hope
Of better deeds to-morrow. Rest you happy. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter Charmian, Iras, Alexas, and a Soothsayer.

Char. Lord Alexas, most sweet Alexas, most any thing Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the soothsayer that you praised so to the queen? O! that I knew this husband, which you say, must charge his horns with garlands!

Alex. Soothsayer!

Sooth. Your will?

Char. Is this the man?—Is't you, sir, that know things?

Sooth. In nature's infinite book of secrecy
A little I can read.

Alex. Show him your hand.

Enter Enobarbus.

Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly; wine enough,
Cleopatra's health to drink.

Char. Good sir, give me good fortune.
Sooth. I make not, but foresee.
Char. Pray, then, foresee me one.
Sooth. You shall be yet far fairer than you are.
Char. He means, in flesh.
Iras. No, you shall paint when you are old.
Char. Wrinkles forbid!

Alex. Vex not his presence; be attentive.
Char. Hush!

Sooth. You shall be more behoving, than belov'd.
Char. I had rather heat my liver with drinking.

Alex. Nay, hear him.

Char. Good now, some excellent fortune. Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all: let me have a child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do homage: find me to marry me with Octavian Caesar, and companion me with my mistress.

Sooth. You shall outlive the lady whom you serve.

Char. O excellent! I love long life better than figs.

Sooth. You have seen, and proved a fairer former fortune,

Than that which is to approach.

Char. Then, belike, my children shall have no names. Pr'ythee, how many boys and wenches must I have?

Sooth. If every of your wishes had a womb,
And fruitful every wish, a million.
Char. Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch.

Alex. You think, none but your sheets are privy to your wishes.

Char. Nay, come; tell Iras hers.

Alex. We'll know all our fortunes.
Eno. Mine, and most of our fortunes, to-night, shall be, drunk to bed.

Iras. There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else.

Char. Even as the overflowing Nilus prospageth famine.

Iras. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay.
Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear.—Pr'ythee, tell her but a work-day fortune.

Sooth. Your fortunes are alike.

Sooth. I have said.

Iras. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she?

Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it?

Iras. Not in my husband's nose.

Char. Our worser thoughts heavens mend?—Alexas, come, his fortune, his fortune.—O! let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee: and let her die too, and give him a worse; and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fifty-fold a cuckold. Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight, good Isis, I beseech thee!

Iras. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people; for, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man loose-wived, so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul knife uneuckoeld: therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly!

Char. Amen.

Alex. Lo, now! if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores, but they'd do't.

Char. Not he, the queen.

Enter Cleopatra.

Cleo. Saw you my lord?

Eno. No, lady.

Cleo. Was he not here?

Char. No, madam.

Cleo. He was disposed to mirth; but on the sudden,

A Roman thought hath struck him.—Enobarbus!—

Eno. Madam.

Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither. Where's Alexas?

Alex. Here, at your service.—My lord approaches.

Enter Ant. with a Messenger and Attendants.

Cleo. We will not look upon him: go with us.

[Exeunt Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Alexas, Iras, Charmian, Soothsayer, and Attendants.

Mess. Fulvia, thy wife, first came into the field.
Ant. Against my brother Lucius?

Mess. Ay.

But soon that war had end, and the time's state
Made friends of them, jointly their force against Caesar;
Whose better issue in the war, from Italy
Upon the first encounter drave them.

Ant. Well, what worst?

Mess. The nature of bad news infests the teller.

Ant. When it concerns the fool, or coward.—On:

Things, that are past, are done, with me.—'T is thus:
Who tells me true, though in his tale lie death,
I hear him as he flatter'd.

Mess. Labienus.

(Labienus (This is stiff news) hath with his Parthian force
Extended* Asia from Euphrates;
His conquering banner shook from Syria
To Lydia, and to Ionia; whilst——

Ant. Antony, thou wouldst say,—

Mess. O, my lord!

Ant. Speak to me home, minee not the general tongue;

* Seized.
SCENE III.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

Name Cleopatra as she is call’d in Rome; Rail thou in Fulvia’s phrase, and taunt my faults With such full license, as both truth and malice have power to utter. O! then we bring forth weeds, When our quick winds lie still; and our ills told us, Is as our eating. 1] Fare thee well awhile. 2

Mess. At your noble pleasure. 3

[Exit. 4

Ant. From Sicily now the news? Speak there. 5

1. Att. The man from Sicily!—is there such an one? 6

2. Att. He stays upon your will. 7

Ant. Let him appear.— 8

These strong Egyptian letters I must break, 9

Enter another Messenger. 10

Or lose myself in detage.—What are you? 11

2 Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead. 12

Ant. Where died she? 13

2 Mess. In Sicily: 14

Her length of sickness, with what else more serious Importeth thee to know, this bears. 15

[Giving a Letter. 16

Forbear me.— 17

[Exit Messenger.

There’s a great spirit gone. Thus did I desire it: What our contempts do often hurt from us, We wish it ours again; the present pleasure, By repetition souring, 2 becomes 3

The opposite of itself: she’s good, being gone; 4

The hand would pluck her back, that shou’d her on. 5

I must from this enchanting queen break off; 6

Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know, My idleness death hatch. —How now! 7

Enter ENOBARBUS! 8

Eno. What’s your pleasure, sir? 9

Ant. I must with haste from hence. 10

Eno. Why, then, we kill all our women. We see how mortal an unkindness is to them: if they suffer our departure, death’s the word. 11

Ant. I must be gone. 12

Eno. Under a compelling occasion, let women die: it were pity to cast them away for nothing: though, between them and a great cause, they should be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra, catching but the least voice of this, dies instantly: I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment. I do think, there is mettle in death, which commits some loving act upon her, she hath such a celerity in dying. 13

Ant. She is cunning past man’s thought. 14

Eno. Alack, sir! no: her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love. We cannot call her winds and waters, sighs and tears; they are greater storms and tempests than almanacs can report: this cannot be cunning in her; if it be, she makes a shower of rain as well as love. 15

Ant. Would I had never seen her! 16

Eno. O, sir! you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work, which not to have been blessed withal would have discredited your travel. 17

Ant. Fulvia is dead. 18

Eno. Sir? 19

Ant. Fulvia is dead. 20

Eno. Fulvia! 21

Ant. Dead. 22

Eno. Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice. When it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shows to man the tailors of the earth; comforting therein, that when old robes are worn out, there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented: this grief is crowned with consolation; your old smock brings forth a new petticoat; and, indeed, the tears live in an onion, that should water this sorrow.

Ant. The business she hath broached in the state Cannot endure my absence. 23

Eno. And the business you have broached here cannot be without you: especially that of Cleopatra’s, which wholly depends on your absence.

Ant. Ne more light answers. Let our officers Have notice what we purpose. I shall break The cause of our expeditions to the queen, And get her leave 2 to part: for not alone The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches, Do strongly speak to us, but the letters, too, Of many our contriving friends in Rome Petition us at home. Sextus Pompeius Half given the dare to Caesar, and commands The empire of the sea: our slippery people (Whose love is never link’d to the deserver, Till his deserts are past) begin to throw Pompey the great, and all his dignities, Upon his son: who, high in name and power, Higher than both in blood and life, stands up For the main soldier; whose quality, going on, The sides o’ the world may danger. Much is breeding, Which, like the courser’s hair, hath yet but life, And not a serpent’s poison. Say, our pleasure, To such whose place is under us, requires Our quick remove from hence. 25

Eno. I shall do it. [Exeunt. 26

SCENE III.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Where is he? 27

Char. I did not see him since. 28

Cleo. See where he is, who’s with him, what he does. I did not send you.—If you find him sad, Say, I am dancing; if in mirth, report That I am sudden sick: quick, and return. [Exit ALEXAS

Char. Madam, methinks, if you did love him dearly, You do not hold the method to enforce The like from him. 29

Cleo. What should I do, I do not? 30

Char. In each thing give him way, cross him in nothing. 31

Cleo. Thou teachest, like a fool, the way to lose him: 32

Char. Tempt him not so too far; I wish, forbear. 33

In time we hate that which we often fear. 34

[Enter ANTONY.

But here comes Antony. 35

Cleo. I am sick, and sullen. 36

Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose.— 37

Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian, I shall fall: It cannot be thus long; the sides of nature Will not sustain it. 38

Ant. Now, my dearest queen,— 39

Cleo. Pray you, stand farther from me. 40

Ant. What’s the matter? 41

Cleo. I know, by that same eye, there’s some good news. What says the married woman?—You may go: Would, she had never given you leave to come! Let her not say, ‘t is I that keep you here, I have no power upon you; hers you are. 42

Ant. The gods best know.— 43

Cleo. O! never was there queen So mightily betray’d; yet at the first I saw the treasons planted.

1 Ploughing our quick winds which dry the soil for the plough. 2 By revolution lowering: in s.c. 3 Dece reads He 4 Exiled.
ACT ONE.

Enter Octavius Cæsar, Lepidus, and Attendants.

CaS. You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth know
It is not Cæsar’s natural vice to hate
Our great competitor. From Alexandria
This is the news: he fishes, drinks, and wastes
The lamps of night in revel; is not more manlike
Than Cleopatra, nor the queen of Ptolemy,
More wondrous than he: hardly gave audience, or Veils’d to think he had partners: you shall find
A man, who is the abstract of all faults
That all men follow.

Lep. I must not think, there are
Evils enough to darken all his goodness:
His faults, in him, seem as the spots of heaven,
More fiery by night’s blackness; hereditary,
Rather than purchased: what he cannot change,
Than what he chooses.

CaS. You are too indulgent. Let us grant, it is not Amiss to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy,
To give a kingdom for a mirth; to sit
And keep the turn of tipping with a slave;
To reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet
With knives that smell of sweat: say, this becomes him.
(As his composure must be rare indeed,
Whom these things cannot blemish) yet must Antony
No way excuse his follies: when we do bear
So great weight in his lightness. If he filleth
His vacancy with his voluptuosity,
Full surfeits, and the dryness of his bones,
Fall on him for’t; but, to confound such time
That drums him from his sport, and speaks as loud
As his own state, and ours,—is to be chid
As we rate boys, who, being mature in knowledge,
Paw their experience to their present pleasure,
And so rebel to judgment.

Enter a Messenger.

Mss. Thy biddings have been done; and every hour
Most noble Cæsar, shalt thou have report
How ’tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea,
And it appears, he is belov'd of those,
That only have fear'd Caesar: to the fleets
The discontents repair, and men's reports
Give him much wrong'd.

Cæs. I should have known no less.

It hath been taught us from the primal state,
That he, which is, was wish'd, until he were:
And the ebb'd man ne'er lov'd, till ne'er worth love,
Comes lov'd by being lack'd. This common body,
Like to a vagabond flag upon the stream,
Go to, and back, and lackeying\(^4\) the varying tide,
To rot itself with motion.

Ant. Caesar, I bring thee word,
Menemotrites and Menas, famous pirates,
Make the sea serve them; which they can and wound
With keen of every kind; many hot inroads
They make in Italy; the borders maritime
Lack blood to think on't, and flush youth revolt.
No vessel can peep forth, but 'tis as soon
Taken as seen; for Pompey's name strikes more,
Than could his war resisted.

Cæs. Antony,
Leave thy lascivious vessels.\(^{*}\) When thou once
Wast beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st
Hirtius and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel
Did famine follow; whom thou fought'st against,
Though daintily brought up, with patience more
Than savages could suffer; thou didst drink
The stale of horses, and the gilded puddle,
Which beasts would cough at: thy palate then did deign
The roughest berry on the roughest hedge:
Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheathes,
The bars of trees thou brows'st: on the Alps
It is reported, thou didst eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on; and all this
(It wounds thine honour, that I speak it now)
Was borne so like a soldier, that thy cheek
So much as lank'd not.

T'is pity of him.

Cæs. Let his shame's quickly
Drive him to Rome. 'T is time we twain
Did show ourselves i’ the field: and, to that end,
Assemble we* immediate council: Pompey
Thrives in our idleness.

To-morrow, Caesar,
I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly
Both what by sea and land I can be able,
To front this present time.

Cæs. Till which encounter,
It is my business too. Farewell.

Lep. Farewell, my lord. What you shall know mean
Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
To let me be partaker.

Cæs. Doubt not, sir; I knew it for my bond.

SCENE V.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian.

Cleo. Charmian!

Char. Madam.

Cleo. Ha, ha!—

Give me to drink mandragora.

Char. Why, madam?

Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap of time,
My Antony is away.

Char. You think of him too much!

Cleo. O, 'tis treason!
SCENE I.—Messina. A Room in Pompey’s House.

Enter Pompey, Menecrates, and Menas.

Pom. If the great gods be just, they shall assist
The deeds of justest men.

Mene. Know, worthy Pompey,
That what they do delay, they not deny.

Pom. Whiles we are suitors to their throne, decays
The thing we sue for.

Mene. We, ignorant of ourselves,
Beg often our own harms, which the wise powers
Deny us for our good; so find we profit
By losing of our prayers.

Pom. I shall do well.

The people love me, and the sea is mine;
My powers are crescent, and my auguring hope
Says, it will come to the full. Mark Antony
In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make
No wars without doors: Caesar gets money, where He loses hearts: Lepidus flatters both,
Of both is flatter’d; but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him.

Men. Caesar and Lepidus
Are in the field: a mighty strength they carry.

Pom. Where have you this? ’tis false.

Men. From Silvius, sir.

Pom. He dreams: I know, they are in Rome together,
Looking for Antony. But all the charms of love,
Salt Cleopatra, soften thy warm¹ lip!
Let witchcraft join with beauty, lust with both:
Let love⁴ up the libertine in a flood² of feasts,
Keep his brain tuming; Epicurean cooks,
Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite,
That sleep and feeding may protract his honour,
Even till a Leath’d dulness. — How now, Varrius!

Enter Varrius.

Var. This is most certain, that I shall deliver.
Mark Antony is every hour in Rome
Expected; since he went from Egypt, ’tis
A space for farther travel.

Pom. I could have given less matter
A better ear.—Menas, I did not think,
This amorous surfeiter would have don’d his helm
For such a petty war: his soldiership
Is twice the other twain. But let us rear
The higher our opinion, that our stirring
Can from the lap of Egypt’s widow pluck
The ne’er lust-wearyed Antony.

Men. I cannot hope,
Cesar and Antony shall well greet together:
His wife that ’s dead did trespasses to Caesar;
His brother warr’d upon him, although, I think,
Not mov’d by Antony.

Pom. I know not, Menas,
How lesser enmities may give way to greater.
Weren’t not that we stand up against them all,

Char. By your most gracious pardon,
I sing but after you.

Cleo. My sallad days,
When I was green in judgment:—cold in blood,
To say as I said then! — But come, away:
Get me ink and paper;
He shall have every day a severa’ greeting,
Or I’ll unpeople Egypt. [Exeunt

ACT II.

SCENE II.—Rome. A Room in the House of LEPIDUS.

Enter Enobarbus and Lepidus.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, ’tis a worthy deed,
And shall become you well, to entreat your captain
To soft and gentle speech.

Eno. I shall entreat him
To answer like himself: if Caesar move him,
Let Antony look over Caesar’s head,
And speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter,
Were I the wearer of Antonius’ beard,
I would not shave ’t to-day.

Lep. ‘Tis not a time
For private stomaching.

Eno. Every time
Serves for the matter that is then born in ’t.

Lep. But small to greater matters must give way.

Eno. Not if the small come first.

Lep. Your speech is passion
But, pray you, stir no embers up. Here comes
The noble Antony.

Enter Antony and Ventrivius.

Eno. And yonder, Cesar.

Enter Cesar, Mecenas, and Agrippa.

Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthia:
Hark you, Ventidius.

Cas. I do not know,
Mecenas; ask Agrippa.

Lep. Noble friends,
That which combin’d us was most great, and let not
A leaner action rend us. What’s amiss,
May it be gently heard: when we debate
Our trivial difference loud, we do commit
Murder in healing wounds. Then, noble partners,
(The rather, for I earnestly beseech)
Touch you the sorest points with sweetest terms,
Nor curstness grow to the matter.

Ant. ’Tis spoken well.
Were we before our armies, and to fight,
I should do thus. [Shake hands

Cas. Welcome to Rome.

Ant. Thank you.

Cas. Sit.

Ant. Sit, sir.

Cas. Nay, then—

Ant. I learn, you take things ill, which are not so
Or, being, concern you not.
scene ii.

antony and cleopatra.

837

Cas. I must be laugh'd at,
If, or for nothing, or a little,
I should say myself offended; and with you
Chiefly 'tis the world: more laugh'd at, that I should Once name you derogately, when to sound your name
It not concern'd me.

Ant. My being in Egypt, Caesar,
What wasn't to you?
Cas. No more than my residing here at Rome
Might be to you in Egypt: yet, if you there
Did practise on my state, your being in Egypt
Might be my question.

Ant. How intend you, practis'd?
Cas. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent,
By what did here hold me. Your wife, and brother,
Made wars upon me, and their contestation
Was theme for you: you were the word of war.

Ant. You do mistake your business: my brother never Did urge me in his act: I did enquire it:
And have my learning from some true reports,
That drew their swords with you. Did lie not rather Discred it my authority with yours;
And make the wars alike against my stomach,
Having alike your cause? Of this my letters
Before did satisfy you. If you'll patch a quarrel,
No matter where you have to make it with,
It must not be with this.

Cas. You praise yourself
By laying defects of judgment to me; but
You patch'd up your excuses.

Ant. Not so; not so;
I know you could not lack, I am certain on't,
Very necessity of this thought, that I,
Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,
Could not with graceful eyes attend those wars
Which frost'd mine own peace. As for my wife,
I would you had her spirit in such another:
The third o' the world is yours, which with a snaffle,
You may pace easy, but not such a wife.

Ero. Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to wars with the women!

Ant. So much uncurable, her garboils, Caesar,
Made out of her impatience, (which not wanted
Shrewdness of policy too) I grieving grant,
Did you too much disquiet: for that, you must
But say, I could not help it.

Cas. I wrote to you,
When rioting in Alexandria; you
Did pocket up my letters, and with faults
Did give my missive out of audience.

Ant. Sir,
He fell upon me, ere admitted: then
Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want
Of what I was I the morning; but, next day,
I told him of myself, which was as much
As to have ask'd him pardon. Let this fellow
Be nothing of our strife: if we contend,
Out of our question wipe him.

Cas. You have broken
The article of your oath, which you shall never Have tongue to charge me with.

Lep. Soft, Caesar.

Ant. No, Lepidas, let him speak:
The honour's sacred which he talks on now,
Supposing that I lack'd it. But on, Caesar;
The article of my oath.

Cas. To lend me arms and aid when I requir'd them,
The which you both denied.

Ant. Neglected, rather;

And then, when poison'd hours had bound me up
From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I may,
I'll play the penitent to you; but mine honesty
Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my power
Work without it. Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Egypt, made wars here;
For which myself, the ignorant motive, do
So far ask pardon, as befits mine honour
To stoop in such a case.

Lep. 'tis nobly spoken.

Mec. If it might please you, to enforce no farther:
The griefs between ye: to forget them quite,
Were to remember that the present need
Speaks to alone you.

Lep. Worthy spoken, Mecenas.

Ero. Or, if you borrow another's love for the instant, you may, when you hear no more words of Pompey, return it again: you shall have time to wangle in, when you have nothing else to do.

Ant. Thou art a soldier only: speak no more.

Ero. That truth should be silent I had almost forgot

Ant. You wrong this presence; therefore, speak no more.

Ero. Go to then; you? considerate stone.

Cas. I do not much dislike the matter, but
The manner of his speech; for it cannot be,
We shall remain in friendship, our conditions
So differing in their acts. Yet, if I knew What hoop should hold us stanch, from edge to e

O' the world I would pursue it.

Agr. Give me leave, Caesar,

Cas. Speak, Agrippa.

Agr. Thou hast a sister by the mother's side,
Admir'd Octavia: great Mark Antony
Is now a widower.

Cas. Say not so, Agrippa:

If Cleopatra heard you, your reproof
Were well deserv'd for rashness.

Ant. I am not married, Caesar: let me hear
Agrippa farther speak.

Agr. To hold you in perpetual amity,
To make you brothers, and to knit your hearts
With an unslipping knot, take Antony
Octavia to his wife: whose beauty claims
No worse a husband than the best of men,
Whose virtue and whose general graces speak
That which none else can utter. By this marriage,
All little jealousies, which now seem great,
And all great fears, which now import their dangers,
Would then be nothing: truths would be tales.
Where now half tales be truths: her love to both,
Would, each to other, and all love to both,
Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke,
For 't is a studied, not a present thought,
My duty ruminated.

Ant. Will Caesar speak?

Cas. Not till he hears how Antony is touch'd
With what is spoke already.

Ant. What power is in Agrippa
If I would say, "Agrippa, be it so?"

To make this good?

Cas. The power of Caesar, and
His power unto Octavia.

Ant. May I never
To this good purpose, that so fairly shows,
Dream of impediment!—Let me have thy hand
Further this act of grace, and from this hour,
The hearts of brothers govern in our loves,
And sway our great designs.

Cas. A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother [Ant. takes it! Did ever love so dearly: let her live To join our kingdoms, and our hearts; and never Fly off our loves again!

Lep. Happily, amen.

Ant. I did not think to draw my sword 'gainst Pompey; For he hath laid strange courtesies, and great Of late upon me: I must thank him, only Lest my remembrance suffer ill report;
At heel of that, defy him.

Lep. Time calls upon us:
Of us must Pompey presently be sought, Or else he seeks out us.

Ant. Where lies he?
Cas. About the Mount Misenum.

Ant. What's his strength
By land?

Cas. Great, and increasing; but by sea He is an absolute master.

Ant. So is the fame.
Would we had spoke together! Haste we for it;
Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms, despatch we The business we have talk'd of.

Cas. With most gladness;
And do invite you to my sister's view,
Whither straight I'll lead you.

Ant. Let us, Lepidus,
Not lack your company.

Lep. Noble Antony,
Not sickness should detain me.

Mec. Welcome from Egypt, sir.

Eno. Half the heart of Caesar, worthy Mecenas!—

Agr. Good Enobarbus!

Mec. We have cause to be glad, that matters are so well digested. You stay'd well by it in Egypt.

Eno. Ay, sir; we did sleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking.

Mec. Eight wild boars roasted, whole at a breakfast, and but twelve persons there; is this true?

Eno. This was but as a fly by an eagle: we had much more monstrous matter of feast, which worthily deserved noting.

Mec. She's a most triumphant lady, if report be square to her.

Eno. When she first met Mark Antony, she pursed up his heart, upon the river of Cydnus.

Agr. There she appeared indeed, or my reporter devised well for her.

Eno. I will tell you.
The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd throne, Burn'd on the water: the poop was beaten gold; Purple the sails, and so perfumed, that The winds were love-sick with them: the cars were silver;

Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made The water, which they beat, to follow faster, As amorous of their strokes. For her own person, It beggar'd all description; she did lie in her pavilion, [cloth of gold and tissue] O'er-picturing that Venus, where we see, The fancy out-work nature: on each side her, Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids, With diverse-colour'd fans, whose wind did seem To blow* the delicate cheeks which they did cool,

And what they us'd did.

Agr. O, rare for Antony:

Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nerides, So many mermaids, tending her i' the eye, And made their bonds adornings: at the helm A seeming mermaid steers; the silken tackle Smell* with the touches of those flower-soft hands That yarely* frame the office. From the barge A strangeinvisible perfume hits the sense Of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast Her people out upon her: and Antony Enthron'd i' the market-place, did sit alone, Whistling to the air; which, but for vacancy, Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too, And made a gap in nature.

Agr. Rare Egyptian!

Eno. Upon her landing Antony sent to her, Invited her to supper: she replied, It should be better he became her guest, Which she entreated. Our courteous Antony, Whom ne'er the word of "No?" woman heard speak Being barber'd ten times o'er, goes to the feast; And for his ordinary pays his heart For what his eyes eat only.

Agr. Royal wench! She made great Caesar lay his sword to bed; He plough'd her, and she crop't.

Eno. I saw her once Hop forty paces through the public street; And having lost her breath, she spoke, and panted, That she did make defect perfection, And, breathless, power breathe forth.

Mec. Now Antony must leave her utterly.

Eno. Never; he will not.

Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale Her infinite variety: other women cloy The appetites they feed, but she makes hungry, Where most she satisfies; for vilest things Become themselves in her, that the holy priests Bless her when she is rich.

Mec. If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle The heart of Antony, Octavia is A blessed lottery to him.

Grot. Let us go.—
Good Enobarbus, make yourself my guest, Whilst you abide here.

Eno. Humbly, sir, I thank you. [Exeunt

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in CAESAR'S House

Enter Cæsar, Antony, Octavia between them;

Attendants.
Ant. The world, and my great office, will sometimes Divide me from your bosom.

Octa. All which time, Before the gods my knee shall bow with prayers To them for you.

Ant. Good night, sir.—My Octavia, Read not my blemishes in the world's report I have not kept my square, but that to come Shall all be done by the rule. Good night, dear lady.—

Good night, sir.

Cas. Good night. [Exeunt Cæsar and Octavia

Enter a Soothsayer.

Ant. Now, sirrah: you do wish yourself in Egypt. Sooth. Would I had never come from thence, not you thither!

Ant. If you can, your reason?

Sooth. I see it in my metim, have it lot in my tongue: but yet hie you to Egypt again.
SCENE V.  ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.  839

Ant. Say to me, whose fortune shall rise higher,
Caesar's, or mine?
Sotho. Caesar's.
Therefore, O Antony! stay not by his side:
Thy daemon, that's thy spirit which keeps thee, is Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable,
Where Caesar's is not; but near him thy angel
Becomes afeard, 1 as being o'erpow'd: therefore,
Make space enough between you.
Ant. Speak this no more.
Sotho. To none but thee; no more, but when to thee.
If thou dost play with him at any game,
Thou art sure to lose: and, of that natural luck,
He beats thee 'gainst the odds: thy lustre thickens,
When he shines by. I say again, thy spirit
Is all afraid to govern thee near him,
But, he away, 'tis noble.
Ant. Get thee gone:
Say to Ventidius, I would speak with him.
[Exit Sotho.sayer.
He shall to Parthia.—Be it art, or hap,
He hath spoken true: the very dice obey him;
And in our sports my better cunning faints.
Under his chance: if we draw lots, he speeds;
His cocks do win the battle still of mine.
When it is all to nought; and his quails ever
Beat mine, inhoop'd, at odds: I will to Egypt:
[Enter VEntIDtUS.
I' the east my pleasure lies.—O! come, Ventidius,
You must to Parthia: your commission 's ready;
Follow me, and receive it.  [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Same.  A Street.

Enter LEPIIDUS, MECENAS, and AGrippa.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no farther: pray you, hasten
Your generals after.
Agr. Sir, Mark Antony
Will 'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow.
Lep. Till I shall see you in your soldier's dress,
Which will become you both, farewell.
Mec. As I conceive the journey, be at Mount 2
Before you, Lepidus.
Lep. Your way is shorter;
My purposes do draw me much about:
You'll win two days upon me.

SCENE V.—Alexandria.  A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Give me some music; music, moody food
Of that trade in love.
Attend.  The music, ho!

Enter MARDIAN.

Cleo. Let it alone; let's to billiards: come, Charmian.
Char. My arm is sore, best play with Mardian.
Cleo. As well a woman with an eunuch play'd,
As with a woman.—Come, you'll play with me, sir?
Mar. As well as I can, madam.  [too short,
Cleo. And when good will is show'd, though 't come
The actor may plead pardon.  I'll none more now.—
Give me mine angle,—we'll go to the river: there,
My music playing far, I'll betray
Tawny-fish'd 3 fishes; my bended hook shall pierce
Their slimy jaws, and as I draw them up,
I'll think them every one an Antony,
And say, Ah, ha! you're caught.

Char. 'T was merry, when
You wager'd on your angling; when your diver
Did hang a salt-fish on his hook, which he
With fervency drew up.

Cleo. That time. —O times—
I laugh'd him out of patience; and that night
I laugh'd him into patience: and next morn,
Ere the ninth hour, I drunk him to his bed;
Then, put my tires and mantles on him, whilst
I wore his sword Phampilian.—

Enter Elfis, a Messenger.  4

O! from Italy?

Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears,
That long time have been barren.

Mec. Madam, madam,—
Cleo. Antony's dead?
If thou say so, villain, thou kill'st thy mistress;
But well and free,
If thou so yield him, there is gold, and here
My bluest veins to kiss; a hand, that kings
Have lipp'd, and trembled kissing.

Mec. First, madam, he is well.

Cleo. Why, there's more gold
But, sirrah, mark, we use
To say the dead are well: bring it to that,
The gold I give thee wilt I melt, and pour
Down thy illuttering throat.

Mec. Good madam, hear me.

Cleo. Well, go to, I will:
But there's no goodness in thy face.  If Antony
Be free, and healthful, why so tart a favour
To trumpet such good tidings? if not well.
Thou shouldst come like a fury crown'd with snakes.
Not like a formal man.

Mec. Will't please you hear me?

Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee, ere thou speakest
Yet, if thou say, Antony lives, 't is well;
Or friends with Caesar, or not captive to him,
I'll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail
Rich pearls upon thee.

Mec. Madam, he's well.

Cleo. Well said.

Mec. And friends with Caesar.

Cleo. Thou'rt an honest man.

Mec. Caesar and he are greater friends than ever.
Cleo. Make thee a fortune from me.

Mec. But yet, madam,—
Cleo. I do not like "but yet," it does allay
The good precedence; fie upon "but yet!"
"But yet!" is as a goather to bring forth
Some monstrous malefactor.  Pr'ythee, friend,
Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear,
The good and bad together.  He's friends with Caesar;
In state of health, thou say'st: and, thou say'st, free.

Mec. Free, madam? no; I made no such report:
He's bound unto Octavia.

Cleo. For what good turn?

Mec. For the best turn' the bed.

Cleo. I am pale, Charmian.

Mec. Madam, he's married to Octavia.

Cleo. The most infectious pestilence upon thee!
[Strikes him down

Mec. Good madam, patience.

Cleo. What say you?—Hence

[Strikes him again

Horrible villain! or I'll spur thine eyes
Like balls before me: I'll unsheath thy head.

Cleo. She hates him up and down
Thou shalt be whipp'd with wire, and stow'd in brine

1 a tear: in i. e.  2 Mt. Misenum.  3 Tawney-fish: in folio Theobald made the change.  4 Enter a Messenger: in i. e.
Smarting in lingering pickle.
Mess. Gracious madam,
1. That do bring the news, made not the match.
Cleo. Say, 'tis not so, a province I will give thee;
And make thy fortunes proud: the blow thou hadst
Shall make thy peace for moving me to rage;
And I will boot thee with what gift beside Thy modesty can beg.
Mess. He's married, madam.
Cleo. Rogue! thou hast liv'd too long. [Draws a Knife.
Mess. Nay, then I'll run.—
What mean you, madam? I have made no fault. [Exit.
Char. Good madam, keep yourself within yourself:
The man is innocent.
Cleo. Some innocents 'scape not the thunder-bolt.—
Melt Egypt into Nile! and kindly creatures
Turn all to serpents—Call the slave again:
Though I am mad, I will not bite him.—Call.
Char. He is afraid to come.
Cleo. I will not hurt him.
These hands do lack nobility, that they strike
A manner than myself; since I myself
Have given myself the cause.—Come hither, sir.
Re-enter Eliz., the Messenger.
Though it be honest, it is never good
To bring bad news: give to a gracious message
An host of tongues; but let ill tidings tell
Themselves, when they be felt.
Mess. I have done my duty.
Cleo. Is he married?
I cannot hate thee worser than I do,
If thou again say, Yes.
Mess. He's married, madam.
Cleo. The gods confound thee! dost thou hold there still?
Mess. Should I lie, madam?
Cleo. O! I would, thou didst,
So half my Egypt were submerg'd, and made
A cistern for seal'd snakes. Go, get thee hence:
Hadst thou Narcissus in thy face, to me
Thou would'st appear most ugly. He is married?
Mess. I crave your highness' pardon.
Cleo. He is married?
Mess. Take no offence, that I would not offend you:
To punish me for what you make me do,
 Seems much unequal. He is married to Octavia.
Cleo. O! that his fault should make a knave of thee,
That art not! What thou'rt sure of?—Get thee hence:
The merchandise which thou hast brought from Rome,
Are all too dear for me; lie they upon thy hand,
And be undone by 'em! [Exit Messenger.
Char. Good your highness, patience.
Cleo. In praising Antony, I have displeas'd Caesar.
Char. Many times, madam.
Cleo. I am paid for 't now.
Load me from hence;
I faint.—O Iris! Charmian!—'T is no matter.—
Go to the fellow, good Alexas; bid him
Report the feature of Octavia, her years,
Her inclination, let him not leave out
The colour of her hair: bring me word quickly.—
[Exit Alexas.
Let him for ever go?—let him not—Charmian,
Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,
The other way he's a Mars.—Bid you Alexas
[To Mardian.
Bring me word, how tall she is.—Pity me, Charmian,
But do not speak to me.—Lead me to my chamber.
[Exeunt.
SCENE VII.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

Ant. The beds i' the east are soft; and thanks to you.
That call'd me timelier than my purpose hither,
For I have gain'd by it.

Cas. Since I saw you last,
There is a change upon you.
Pom. Well, I know not
What counts harsh fortune easts upon my face,
But in my bosom shall she never come,
To make my heart her vassal.

Lep. Well met here.
Pom. I hope so, Lepidus.—Thus we are agreed.
I crave, our composition may be written,
And seal'd between us.

Cas. That's the next to do.
Pom. We'll feast each other, ere we part; and let us
Draw lots who shall begin.

Ant. That will I, Pompey.
Pom. No, Antony, take the lot; but, first
Or last, your fine Egyptian cookery
Shall have the fame. I have heard, that Julius Caesar
Grew fat with feasting there.

Ant. You have heard much.
Pom. And I have fair meanings, sir.
Ant. And fair words to them.
Pom. Then, so much have I heard!
And I have heard, Apollodorus carried—

Eno. No more of that:—he did so.
Pom. * What, I pray you?
Eno. A certain queen to Caesar in a mattress,
Pom. I know thee now: how far'st thou, soldier?
Eno. Well;

And well am like to do; I perceive,
Four feasts are toward.
Pom. Let me shake thy hand:
I never hated thee. I have seen thee fight,
When I have envied thy behaviour.

Eno. Sir, I never lov'd you much; but I have prais'd you,
When you have well deserv'd ten times as much
As I have said you.
Pom. Enjoy thy plainness,
it nothing ill becomes thee—
About my galley I invite you all:
Will you lead, lords?

Cas. Ant. Lep. Show us the way, sir.
Pom. [Exeunt Pompey, Caesar, Antony, Lepidus,
Soldiers and Attendants.]

Men. Thy father, Pompey, would ne'er have made this treaty.—[Aside.]—You and I have known, sir.

Eno. At sea, I think.

Men. We have, sir.

Eno. You have done well by water.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me;
though it cannot be denied what I have done by land.

Men. Nor what I have done by water.

Eno. Yes; something you can deny for your own safety: you have been a great thief by sea.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. There I deny my land service. But give me your hand, Menas: if our eyes had authority, here they might take two thieves kissing.

Men. All men's faces are true, whatsoe'er their hands are.

Eno. But there is never a fair woman has a true face.

Men. No slander; they steal hearts.

Townsell blast

* Plenty

Eno. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turned to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune.

Eno. If he do, sure, he cannot weep it back again.

Men. You have said, sir. We looked not for Mark
Antony here: pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Eno. Caesar's sister is call'd Octavia.

Men. True, sir; she was the wife of Caesar Marcellus.

Eno. But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius.

Men. Pray you, sir?

Eno 'Tis true.

Men. Then is Caesar, and he, for ever knit together.

Eno. If I were bound to divine of this unity, I would not prophesy so.

Men. I think, the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage, than the love of the parties.

Eno. I think so too; but you shall find, the band that seems to tie their friendship together will be the very strangler of their amity. Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation.

Men. Who would not have his wife so?

Eno. Not he, that himself is not so: which is Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again: then, shall the sights of Octavia blow the fire up in Caesar;
and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity, shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony will use his affection where it is:
he married but his occasion here.

Men. And thus it may be. Come, sir, will you aboard? I have a health for you.

Eno. I shall take it, sir: we have used our throats in Egypt.

Men. Come; let's away.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—On Board Pompey's Galley, lying near Misenenum.

Music. Enter Two or Three Servants, with a Banquet.

1 Serv. Here they'll be, man. Some o' their plants are ill-rooted already; the least wind if the world will blow them down.

2 Serv. Lepidus is high-coloured.

1 Serv. They have made him drink alms-drink.

2 Serv. As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out, "no more!" reconciles them to his entreaty, and himself to the drink.

1 Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.

2 Serv. Why, this it is to have a name in great men's fellowship: I had as lief have a sword that will do me no service, as a partizan I could not heave.

1 Serv. To be called into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move in't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the checks.

A Servent sound'd. Enter Caesar, Antony, Pompey Lepidus, Agrippa, Mecenas, Enoobarbus, Menas, with other Captains.

Ant. Thus do they, sir. [To Caesar.] They take the flow o' the Nile
By certain scales i' the pyramid: they know,
By the height, the lowness, or the mean, if dearth,
Or fosson follow. The higher Nilus swells,
The more it promises: as it ebbs, the seedman
Upon the slime and oozze scatters his grain,
And shortly comes to harvest.

Lep. You have strange serpents there.

Ant.

Ay; Lepidus

Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is bred, now, of you mud by the operation of your sun: so is your crocodile

Townsell blast

* Plenty
ANTONY. They are so.

Pom. Sit,—and some wine!—A health to Lepidus.

Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I’ll use’t out.

Eno. Not till you have slept: I fear me, you’ll be in, till then.

Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard, the Ptolemies’ pyramids are very godly things; without contradiction, I have heard that.

Men. [Aside.] Pompey, a word.

Pom. [Aside.] Say in mine ear: what is’t?

Men. [Aside.] Forsaken thy seat, I do beseech thee, And have me speak a word. [Captain, Pom. [Aside.] Forbear me till anon.—

This wine for Lepidus.

Lep. What manner o’ thing is your crocodile?

Ant. It is shaped, sir, like itself, and it is as broad as it hath breadth; it is just so high as it is, and moves with its own organs; it lives by that which nouriseth it, and the elements once out of it, it transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of?

Ant. Of its own colour too.

Lep. ’Tis a strange serpent.

Ant. ’Tis so; and the tears of it are wet.

Cas. Will this description satisfy him?

Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very upcree.

Pom. [To Menas, aside.] Go, hang, sir, hang! Tell me of that, away!

Do as I bid you.—Where’s this cup I call’d for?

Men. [Aside.] If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear
Rise from thy stool. [me, Pom. [Aside.] I think, thou’rt mad. The matter?

Men. I have ever held my cup off to thy fortunes.

Pom. Thou hast serv’d me with much faith. What’s else to say?

Be jolly, lords.

Ant. These quick-sands, Lepidus,
Keep off them, for you sink.

Men. Wilt thou be lord of all the world?

Pom. Wilt thou be lord of the world? That’s twice.

Men. How should that be?

Pom. But entertain it,
And though thou think me poor, I am the man
Will give thee all the world.

Pom. Hast thou drunk well?

Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup.

Thou art, if thou dar’st be, the earthy Jove:
Whate’er the ocean pales, or sky inclips,
Is thine, if thou wilt have’t.

Pom. Show me which way.

Men. These three world-sharers, these competitors,
Are in thy vessel: let me cut the cable;
And, when we are put off, fall to their throats;
All then is thine.

Pom. Ah! this thou shouldest have done,
And not have spoke on’t.
In me, ’tis villainy;
In thee, ’t had been good service. Thou must know,
’Tis not my profit that does lead mine honour,
Mine honour, it. Repent, that ever thy tongue
Hath so betray’d thine act: being done unknown,
I should have found it afterwards well done,
But must condemn it now. Desist, and drink.

Men. [Aside.] For this, I’ll never follow thy pall’d fortunes more.
Who seeks, and will not take, when once ’t is offer’d,
Shall never find it more.

Pom. This health to Lepidus.

Ant. Bear him ashore.—I’ll pledge it for him; Pompey

Eno. Here’s to thee, Menas.

Men. Enobarbus, welcome

Pom. Fill, till the cup be hid.

Eno. There’s a strong fellow, Menas.

[Pointing to the Attendart who carries off Lepidus

Men. Why?

Eno. He bears

The third part of the world, man: see’st not?

Men. The third part, then, is drunk: would it were all,
That it might go on wheels?

Pom. Drink thou; increase the reels.

Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian feast,

Ant. It ripens towards it.—Strike* the vessels, ho!

Here is to Caesar.

Cas. I could well forbear it.

It’s monstrous labour, when I wash my brain,
And it grows fouler.

Ant. Be a child o’ the time.

Cas. Profess it, I’ll make answer; but I had rather fast.

From all four days, than drink so much in one.

Eno. Ha, my brave emperor! [To Antony
Shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchanals,
And celebrate our drink?

Pom. Let’s ha’n’t, good soldier.

Ant. Come, let us all shake hands,

Till that the conquering wine hath steep’d our sense
In soft and delicate Lethe.

Eno. All take hands.—

Make battery to our ears with the loud music;
The while I’ll place you: then, the boy shall sing
The holding* every man shall bear, as loud
As his strong sides can volley.

[Music plays. Enobarbus places them hand in hand.

Song, by the Boy.]

Come, thou monarch of the vine,
Plump’ry Bacchus, with pink eye;
In thy vats our cares be drown’d;

With thy grapes our hairs be crown’d;

Cup us, till the world go round;

Cup us, till the world go round! ] The burden.

Cas. What would you more?—Pompey, good night.—

Good brother,

Let me request you off: our graver business
Frowns at this levity.—Gentle lords, let’s part;
You see, we have burnt our cheeks. Strong Enobarbus
Is weaker than the wine, and mine own tongue
Splits what it speaks: the wild disguise hath almost Antick’d us all. What needs more words? Good night.—

Good Antony, your hand.

Pom. I’ll try you on the shore.

Ant. And shall, sir, Give’s your hand.

Pom. O, Antony! You have my father’s house.—But what? we are friends.

Come down into the boat.

Eno. Take heed you fall not.—

[Exeunt Pompey, Caesar, Antony, and Attendarts.

Menas, I’ll not on shore.

Men. No, to my cabin.—

These drums!—these trumpets, flutes! what!—

Let Neptune hear, we bid a loud farewell.

To these great fellows: sound, and be hang’d! sound out! [A Flourish

Eno. Ho, says a!—There’s my cap.

Men. Ho!—noble captain! come [Exeunt

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Plain in Syria.

 antony

ven. Now, daring Parthia, art thou struck; and now enobarbus. Please'd fortune does of Marcus Crassus' death make me revenger.—Bear the king's son's body

Before our army.—Thy Paecorus, Orodus, pays this for Marcus Crassus.

sil. Noble Ventidius,

whilst yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm,

the fugitive Parthians follow: spur through Media,

Mesopotamia, and the shoddy whither

the routed fly: so thy grand captain, antony, shall set thee on triumphant chariots; and

Put garlands on thy head.

enobarbus. O Silius, Silius! I have done enough: a lower place, note well, may make too great an act; for learn this, Silius, better to leave undone, than by our deeds acquire too high a fame, when him we serve's away.

Cesar and antony have ever won

More in their officer, than person: Sossius,

One of my place in Syria, his lieutenant,

For quick accumulation of renown,

Which he achiev'd by the minute, lost his favour.

Who does i'the wars more than his captain can,

becomes his captain's captain; and ambition,

The soldier's virtue, rather makes choice of loss,

Than gain which darkens him.

I could do more to do Antonius good,

But 't would offend him; and in his offence

Should my performance perish.

sil. Thou hast, Ventidius, that Without which a soldier, and his sword,

Gains scarce distinction. Thou wilt write to antony?

ven. I'll humbly signify what in his name,

That, which magical word of war, we have effect'd

How, with his banners and his well-paid ranks,

The newer yet-betaken horse of Parthia

We have jaded out o'the field.

sil. Where is he now?

ven. He purposeth to Athens; whither, with what haste

the weight we must convey with us will permit,

We shall appear before him.—On, there! pass along.

[exit.

a. Enter Agrippa, and enobarbus, meeting.

ag. What! are the brothers parted?

enobarbus. They have despatch'd with Pompey: he is gone.

The other three are sealing. Octavia weeps

To part from Rome; Caesar is sad; and Lepidus,

Since Pompey's feast, as Menas says, is troubled

With the green sickness.

ag. 'Tis a noble Lepidus.

enobarbus. A very fine one. O, how he loves Caesar!

ag. Nay, but how dearly he adores Mark Antony!

enobarbus. Why, he's the Jupiter of men.

enobarbus. Spake you of Caesar? How! the nonpareil!

enobarbus. Make me not offended

In your distrust.

oct. I have said.

enobarbus. You shall not find,

Though you be therein curious, the least cause

For what you seem to fear. So, the gods keep you,

And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends.

We will here part.

enobarbus. Farewell, my dearest sister; fare thee well

The elements be kind to thee, and make

Thy spirits all of comfort! fare thee well.

oct. My noble brother!—

enobarbus. The April's in her eyes; it is love's spring,

And these the showers to bring it on.—Be cheerful.

oct. Sir, look well to my husband's house; and—enobarbus. What, Octavia?

oct. I'll tell you in your ear.

enobarbus. Her tongue will not obey her heart. nor can

Her heart inform her tongue; the swan's down feather

That stands upon the swell at the full of tide,

And neither way inclines.

enobarbus. Will Caesar weep?

ag. He has a cloud in's face.

enobarbus. He was the worse for that, were he a horse;

So is he, being a man.

ag. Why, Enobarbus,

When Antony found Julius Caesar dead,

He cried almost to roaring; and he wept,

When at Philippi he found Brutus slain.

enobarbus. That year, indeed, he was troubled with a

Rheum.

What willingly he did confound, he wall'd:

Believe 't, till I weep too.

enobarbus. No, sweet Octavia,

You shall hear from me still: the time shall not

Out-go my thinking on you.

ag. Come, sir, come;

I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love.
Look, here I have you; thus I let you go.
And give you to the gods.

Cas.
Adieu: be happy.

Lep. Let all the number of the stars give light
To thy fair way.

Cas. Farewell, farewell. [Kisses Octavia.]
Ant. Farewell! [Trumpets sound. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Where is the fellow?

Alex. Half afraid to come.

Cleo. Go to, go to.—Come hither, sir.

Enter ELLIS, the Messenger.

Alex. Good majesty.

Hecat of Jewry dare not look upon you,
But when you are well pleased.

Cleo. That Herod’s head
I’ll have: but how, when Antony is gone,
Through whom I might command it.—Come thou near.

Miss. Most gracious majesty.—

Cleo. Didst thou behold
Octavia?

Miss. Ay, dread queen.

Cleo. Where?

Miss. Madam, in Rome.

I look’d her in the face: and saw her led
Between her brother and Mark Antony.

Cleo. Is she as tall as me?

Miss. She is not, madam.

Cleo. Didst hear her speak? Is she shrill-tongued, or low?

Miss. Madam, I heard her speak: she is low-voic’d.

Cleo. That’s not so good: he cannot like her long.

Char. Like her? O Isis! ’tis impossible.

Cleo. I think so. Charmian: dull of tongue, and dwarfish!—

What majesty is in her gait? Remember,
If ever thou look’st on majesty.

Miss. She creeps:
Her motion and her station are as one:
She shows a body rather than a life:
A stature, than a breather.

Cleo. Is this certain?

Miss. Or I have no observance.

Char. Three in Egypt
Cannot make better note.

Cleo. I do perceive t’.—There’s nothing in her yet.—
The fellow has good judgment.

Char. Excellent.

Cleo. Guess at her years. I pr’ythee.

Miss. Madam,
She was a widow.

Cleo. Widow?—Charmian, hark.

Miss. And I do think, she’s thirty.

Cleo. Bear’st thou her face in mind? is it long, or round?

Miss. Rough, even to faultlessness.

Cleo. For the most part, too, they are foolish that are so.—

Her hair, what colour?

Miss. Brown, madam; and her forehead
As low as you could wish it.

Cleo. There’s gold for thee:
Thou must not take my former sharpness ill.
I will employ thee back again: I find thee
Most fit for business. Go, make thee ready;
Our letters are prepared. [Exit Messenger.]

Enter a Messenger: in i.e. ; Vered ; not look’d: in i.e.
not let him partake in the glory of the action; and not estating here, accuses him of letters he had formerly write to Pompey; upon his own appeal, seizes him:
so the poor third is up till death enrolls his confines.

Eros. Then, world, thou hast a pair of chaps, no
And through between them all the food thou hast,
They'll grant each other Where is Antony?
Eros. He's walking in the garden—thus; and spurs
The rush that lies before him; cries, "Foof, Legibus!"
And threatens the threat of that his officer,
That murder'd Pompey.

Eros. Our great navy's rizz'g'd.
Eros. For Italy, and Caesar. More; Dominus:
My lord desires you presently: my news
I might have told hereafter.

Eros. But let it be.—Bring me to Antony.

[Exit.}

SCENE VI.—Rome. A Room in Caesar's House.

Enter Caesar, Agrrippa, and Mecenas.

Caes. Contending Rome, he has done all this, and
In Alexandria: here is the manner of it. [more.
I'm the market-place, on a tribunal silver'd,
Cleopatra and herself in chairs of gold
Were publicly enthron'd: at their feet sat
Cassarian, whom they call my father's son,
And all the unlawful issue, that then just
Since then hath made between them. unto her
He gave the establishment of Egypt; made her
Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia,
Absolute queen.

Mec. This is the public eye?
Caes. I the common show-place, where they exercise.
His sons he there: proclam'd the kings of kings.
Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia.
He gave to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assign'd
Syria, Cilicia, and Phœnicia. She
In the habitations of the goddess Isis
That day appear'd; and oft before gave
As 'twas reported, so.

Mec. Let Rome be thus Inform'd.

Agr. Who, queasy with his insolence
Already, will their good thoughts call from him.
Caes. The people know it; and have now receiv'd
His accusations.

Agr. Whom does he accuse?
Caes. Caesar; and that, having in Sicily
Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him
His part of the Milo: then does he ray, he lent me
Some shipping unforti'd: lastly, he frets.
That Lepidus of the triumvirate
Should be depos'd; and being, that we detain
All his revenue.

Agr. Sir, this should be answer'd.
Caes. 'Tis done already, and a messenger gone.
I have told him, Lepidus was grown too erud;
That he his high authority abused,
And did deserve his change: for what I have conquer'd,
I grant him part, but then, in his Armenia,
And other of his conquer'd kingdoms, I
Demand the like.

Mec. He'll never yield to that.
Caes. Nor must not, then, be yielded to in this.
Enter Octavia, with her Train.

Oct. Hail, Caesar, and my lord! hail, most dear Caesar!

Caes. That ever I should call thee cast-aside!
Oct. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause.
Caes. Why have you stud'd upon us thus? You come not
Like Caesar's sister: the wife of Antony
Should have an army for an usher and
The neighing of horse to tell of her approach
Long ere she did appear; the trees by the way.
Should have borne men, and expectation frame
Looking for what it had not: nay, the dart
Should have ascended to the roof of heaven.
Rash'd by your populous troops. But you are come
A market-man to Rome, and have prevented
The extortation of our love. which, let us know
In often held? unbro'd: we should have met you
By sea and land; supplying every stage
With an augmented greeting.

To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it
Of my free-will. My lord Mark Antony:
Hearing that you prepar'd for war acquainted
My griefed ear within; whereto, I beseech
His pardon for return.

Caes. Which soon he granted,
Being an obstruct tween his lust and him.
Oct. Do not say so, my lord.
Caes. I have eyes upon him.
And his affairs come to me on the wind.

Where is he now?
Caes. No, my most wronged sister: Cleopatra
Hath nod'd him to her: he hath given his empire
Up to a whore: they are now levy'g
The kings of the earth for war. He hath assemble'd
Bœotias, the king of Lybia; Archelaus,
Of Cappadocia; Philadelphia, king
Of Phœnician; the Thracian king. Adela-
King Malebas of Arabia; king of Pont,
Hercut of Jewry; Mithridates, king
Of Comagene; Ptolemy and Amphilas,
The kings of Medes and Lycaon;
With a more larger list of seetrees.

Oct. Ah me, most wretched
That have my heart parted betwixt two friends,
That do affect each other!

Caes. Welcome hither.
Your letters did withhold our breathing forth,
Till we perceiv'd, both how you were wrong'd,
And in nezligent danger. Cheer your heart:
Be you not troubled with the time, which drives
Over your content these strong necessities;
But let determin'd things to destiny
Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome:
Nothing more dear to me. You are abus'd
Beyond the mark of thought; and the high gods,
To do you justice, make his minister
Of us and those that love you. Best of comfort:
And ever welcome to us.

Agr. Welcome, lady.

Mec. Welcome, dear madam.

Each heart in Rome does love and pity you:
Only the adulterous Antony, most large
In his abominations, turns you off.
And gives his potent regiment to a trull,
That noises it against us.

Oct. Is it so, sir?
Caes. Most certain. Sister, welcome: pray you,
Be ever known to patience. My dearest sister! [Exit.
SCENE VII.—Antony’s Camp, near the Promontory of Actium.

Enter Cleopatra and Enobarbus.

Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.

Eno. But why, why, why?

Cleo. Thou hast forspoke my being in these wars,
And say’st, it is not fit.

Eno. Well, is it, is it?

Cleo. If not denounced against us, why should not we
Be there in person?

Eno. [Aside.] Well, I could reply:—
If we should serve with horse and mares together,
The horse were merely lost; the mares would bear
A soldier, and his horse.
Cleo. What is’t you say?

Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle Antony;
Take from his heart, take from his brain, ’tis true,
What should not then be spar’d. He is already Traduc’d for levity; and ’tis said in Rome,
That Photinus an eunuch, and your maids,
Manage this war.

Cleo. Sink Rome; and their tongues rot,
That speak against us! A charge we bear i’ the war,
And as the president of my kingdom will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it,
I will not stay behind.

Eno. Nay, I have done
Here comes the emperor.

Enter Antony and Canidius.

Ant. Is’t not strange, Canidius,
That from Tarentum, and Brundusium,
He could so quickly ent the Ionian sea,
And take it?—You have heard on’t, sweet?

Cleo. Celerity is never more admir’d,
Than by the negligent.

Ant. A good rebuke,
Which might have well become the best of men,
To taunt at slackness.—Canidius, we
Will fight with him by sea.

Cleo. By sea! what else?

Ant. For that he dares us to it.

Eno. So hath my lord dar’d him to single fight.

Can. Ay, and to wage this battle at Pharsalia,
Where Caesar fought with Pompey; but these offers,
Which serve not for his vantage, he shacks off,
And so should you.

Eno. Your ships are not well mann’d;
Your mariners are mutiners, reapers, people
Ingras’d by swift impress: in Caesar’s fleet
Are those, that often have ‘gainst Pompey fought.
Their ships are yare, yours, heavy: no disgrace
Shall fall you for refusing him at sea,
Being prepar’d for land.

Ant. By sea, by sea.

Eno. Most worthy sir, you therein throw away
The absolute soldiership you have by land;
Distract your army, which doth most consist
Of war-mark’d footmen; leave unexecuted
Your own renowned knowledge; quite forego
The way which promises assurance; and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard,
From firm security.

Ant. I’ll fight at sea.

Cleo. I have sixty sails, Caesar none better.

Ant. Our overplus of shipping will we burn,
And with the rest, full-mann’d, from the head of Actium
Beat th’ approaching Caesar; but if we fail!

Enter a Messenger.

We then can do’t at land.—Thy business?

Mess. The news is true, my lord; he is descried
Cesar has taken Tarsus.

Ant. Can he be there in person? t’s impossible:
Strange, that his power should be.—Canidius,
Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land,
And our twelve thousand horse: we’ll to our ship.

Enter a Soldier.

Away, my Thetis!—How now, worthy soldier!

Sold. O, noble emperor! do not fight by sea;
Trust not to rotten planks; Do you misdoubt
This sword, and these my wounds? Let the Egyptians,
And the Phornicians, go a ducking; we
Have used to conquer standing on the earth,
And fighting foot to foot.

Ant. Well, well.—Away!

[Exeunt Antony, Cleopatra, and Enobarbus.

Sold. By Hercules, I think, I am i’ the right.

Can. Soldier, thou art; but his whole action grows
Not in the power on’t: so our leader’s led,
And we are women’s men.

Sold. You keep by land
The legions and the horse whole, do you not?

Can. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justeius,
Publicola, and Caius, are for sea;
But we keep whole by land. This speed of Caesar’s
Carries beyond belief.

Sold. While he was yet in Rome,
His power went out in such distractions, as Beguil’d all spies.

Can. Who’s his lieutenant, hear you?

Sold. They say, one Taurus.

Can. Well I know the man.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The emperor calls Canidius.

Can. With news the time’s with labour; and throws forth
Each minute some.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—A Plain near Actium.

Enter Caesar, Taurus, Officers, and others.

Caesar. Taurus!

Taur. My lord.

Caesar. Strike not by land; keep whole
Provoke not battle, till we have done at sea.
Do not exceed the prescript of this scroll: [Giving it.
Our fortune lies upon this jump.

[Exeunt.

Enter Antony and Enobarbus.

Ant. Set we our squadrons on yond’ side o’ the hill.
In eye of Caesar’s battle; from which place
We may the number of the ships behold,
And so proceed accordingly.

[Exeunt.

Enter Canidius, marching with his Land Army one Way over the Stage: and Taurus, the Lieutenant of Caesar, the other Way. After their going in is heard the Noise of a Sea-Fight.

Alarum. Re-enter Enobarbus.

Enobarbus. Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold no longer.

The Antoniad, the Egyptian admiral,
With all their sixty, dy, and turn the rudder
To see ’t, mine eyes are blasted.

Enter Scærus.

Scærus. Gods, and goddesses.

Enobarbus. All the whole synod of them!

Enobarbus. What’s thy passion?

Scærus. The greater cantle* of the world is lost

* Spoken against. 2 Conquer. 3 Easily managed. 4 Not in f. 5 Portion.
With very ignorance: we have kiss’d away
Kingsdoms and provinces.

Euno. How appears the fight?

Scarr. On our side like the token’d pestilence,
Where death is sure. Yond’ ribald hag of Egypt,
Whom leprosy o’ertake? i’ the midst o’ the fight—
When vantage, like a pair of twins, appear’d
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder:—
The brize2 upon her like a cow in June,
Hoists sails, and flies.

Euno. That I behel:
Mine eyes did sicken at the sight, and could not Endure a further view.

Scarr. She once being loof’d,
The noble ruin of her magic, Antony,
Claps on his sea-wing, and like a dotted mallard,
Leaving the fight in height, flies after her.
I never saw an action of such shame;
Experience, manhood, honour, ne’er before
Did violate so itself.

Euno. Alack, alack!

Enter Candidus.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath,
And sinks most lamentably. Had our general
Been what he knew himself, it had gone well:
O! he has given example for our flight,
Most grossly, by his own.

Euno. Ay, are you thereabouts? Why then, good night.

Indeed.

Can. Towards Peloponnesus are they fled.

Scarr. ’Tis easy to’t; and there I will attend
What farther comes.

Can. To Caesar will I render
My legions, and my horse: six kings already
Show me the way of yielding.

Euno. I’ll yet follow
The wounded chance of Antony, though my reason
Sits in the wind against me.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antony, and Attendants.

Ant. Hark! the land bids me tread no more upon’t;
It is ashamed to bear me.—Friends, come hither,
I am so lated in the world, that I
Have lost my way for ever.—I have a ship
Laden with gold; take that, divide it; fly,
And make your peace with Caesar.

Att. Fly! not we.

Ant. I have fled myself, and have instructed cowards
To run, and show their shoulders.—Friends, be gone;
I have myself resolv’d upon a course,
Which has no need of you; be gone:
My treasure’s in the harbour, take it.—O!
I follow’d that I blushed to look upon:
My very hairs do mutiny; for the white
Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them
For fear and doting.—Friends, be gone: you shall Have letters from me to some friends, that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you, look not sad,
Nor make replies of loathness; take the hint
Which my despair proclaims; let that be left
Which leaves itself; to the sea-side straightway:
I will possess you of that ship and treasure.
Leave me, I pray, a little; ’pray you now:
Nay, do so; for, indeed, I have lost command,
Therefore, I pray you. I’ll see you by and by.

[Sits down.

Enter Eros, and Cleopatra, led by Charmian, and Iras.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him; comfort him.

Iras. Do, most dear queen,
Char. Do! Why, what else?

Cleo. Let me sit down.—O June!

Ant. No, no, no, no, no.

Eros. See you here, sir?

Ant. O fie, fie, fie!

Char. Madam,—

Iros. Madam: O good empress!—

Eros. Sir, sir,—

Ant. Yes, my lord, yes.—He, at Philippi, kept
His sword e’en like a dancer, while I struck
The lean and wrinkled Cassius; and ’t was I
That the mad Brutus ended: he alone
Dealt on lientenantry, and no practices had
In the brave squares of war; yet now—No matter.

Cleo. Ah! stand by.

Eros. The queen, my lord, the queen.

Iros. Go to him, madam, speak to him:
He is unqualified with very shame.

Cleo. Well then,—sustain me:—O!—

Eros. Most noble sir, arise; the queen approaches
Her head’s declin’d, and death will seize her; but
Your comfort makes the resene.

Ant. I have offended reputation
By most unblushing swearing.

Eros. Sir, the queen.

Ant. O! whither hast thou led me, Egypt? See,
How I convey my shame out of thine eyes,
By looking back what I have left behind
Stray’d in dishonour.

Cleo. O my lord, my lord!
Forgive my fearful sails: I little thought,
You would have follow’d.

Ant. Egypt, thou knew’st too well
My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings,
And thou shouldst tow me after: o’er my spirit.
Thy full supremacy thou knew’st, and that Thy beck might from the bidding of the gods
Command me.

Cleo. O, my pardon!

Ant. Now I must
To the young man send humble treaties, dodge
And palter in the shiftings of lowness, who
With half the bulk of the world play’d as I pleas’d
Making, and marring fortunes. You did know,
How much you were my conqueror; and that
My sword, made weak by my affection, would Obey it on all cause.

Cleo. Pardon, pardon!

Ant. Fall not a tear, I say: one of them rates
All that is won and lost. Give me a kiss;
Even this repays me.—We sent our schoolmaster:
Is he come back?—Love, I am full of lead.—
Some wine, within there, and our viands!—Fortune knows,
We scorn her most when most she offers blows. [Exeed]

SCENE X.—CEA’s Camp in Egypt.

Enter Caesar, Dolabella, Thyrus, and others.

Cas. Let him appear that’s come from Antony—
Know you him?

Dol. Caesar, ’tis his schoolmaster:
An argument that he is pluck’d, when hither
He sends so poor a pinion of his wing,
Which had superfluous rings for messengers.
Not many moons gone by.

Enter Euphronius.

Cas. Approach, and speak.

Euph. Such as I am, I come from Antony.
I was of late as petty to his ends,
As is the morn-dew on the myrtle leaf
To his grand sea.

Cas. Be it so. Declare thine office.

Eup. Lord of his fortunes he salutes thee, and Requires to live in Egypt; which not granted,
He lessens his requests, and to thee snes
To let him breathe between the heavens and earth,
A private man in Athens: this for him.
Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness,
Submit's to thy might, and of thee craves
The circle of the Ptolemies for her heirs,
Now hazarded to thy grace.

Cas. For Antony,
I have no ears to his request. The queen
Of audience, nor desire, shall fail; so she
From Egypt drive her all-disgraced friend,
Or take his life there: this if she perform,
She shall not sue unheard. So to them both.

Eup. Fortune pursue thee!

Cas. Bring him through the bands.

[Exit Euphrinius.]

To try thy eloquence, now 'tis time; despatch.
From Antony win Cleopatra: promise, [To Thyreus.]
And in our name, what she requires; add more,
From thine invention. Women are not
In their best fortunes strong, but want will perjure
The ne'er-touch'd vestal. Try thy cunning, Thyreus;
Make thine own edict for thy pains, which we
Will answer as a law.

Thyr. Caesar, I go.

Cas. Observe how Antony becomes his flaw.
And what thou think'st his very action speaks
In every power that moves.

Thyr. Caesar, I shall. [Exeunt.]

SCENE XI.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?

Eno. Think, and die.

Cleo. Is Antony, or we, in fault for this?

Eno. Antony only: that would make his will Lord of his reason. What though you fled
From that extreme of war, whose several ranges
Frighted each other, why should he follow?
The itch of his affection should not then
Have nick'd his captainship: at such a point,
When half to half the world oppos'd, he being
The most enterprizing? 'T was a shame, no less
Than was his loss, to course your flying flags,
And leave his navy gazing.

Prythee, peace.

Cleo. Enter Antony, with Euphrinius.

Ant. Is that his answer?

Eup. Ay, my lord.

Ant. The queen shall then have courtesy, so she Will yield us up.

Eup. He says so.

Ant. Let her know it.—
To the boy Caesar send this grizzled head,
And he will fii thy wishes to the brim
With principalities.

Cleo. That head, my lord?

Ant. To him again. Tell him, he wears the rose
Of youth upon him, from which the world should note
Something particular: his coin, ships, legions.
May be a coward's; whose ministers would prevail
Under the service of a child, as soon

As i'th the command of Caesar: I dare him, therefore,
To lay his gay comparisons apart,
And answer me declin'd: sword against sword,
Ourselves alone. I'll write it: follow me.

[Exit Antony and Euphrinius.]

Eno. Yes, like enough, high-battled Caesar will Unstate his happiness, and be stag'd t' the show
Against a sworder.—I see, men's judgments are
A parcel of their fortunes: and things outward
Do draw the inward qualities after them,
To suffer all alike. That he should dream,
Knowing all miseries, the full Caesar will Answer his emptiness!—Cesar, thou hast sub'd
His judgment too.

Enter an Attendant.

Ant. A messenger from Caesar.

Cleo. What, no more ceremony?—See, my women!—
Against the blown rose may they stop their nose,
That kneel'd unto the bud.—Admit him, sir.

Eno. Mine honesty and I begin to square. [Aside]
The loyalty well held to fools does make
Our faith more folly: yet he that can endure
To follow with allegiance a fallen lord,
Does conquer him that did his master conquer,
And earns a place i' the story.

Enter Thyreus.

Cleo. Caesar's will?

Thyr. Hear it apart.

Cleo. None but friends: say boldly
Thyr. So, haply, are they friends to Antony.

Eno. He needs as many, sir, as Caesar has,
Or needs not us. If Caesar please, our master
Will leap to be his friend; for you, know,
Whose he is, we are, and that's Caesar's.

Thyr. Thus then, thou most renown'd: Caesar entreats,
Not to consider in what case thou stand'st,
Farther then he is Caesar.

Cleo. Go on: right royal.

Thyr. He knows, that you embrace not Antony
As you did love, but as you heard him.

Cleo. O!

Thyr. The scars upon your honour, therefore, he does pity, as constrained blemishes,
Not asdeserv'd.

Cleo. He is a god, and knows
What is most right. Mine honour was not yielded,
But conquer'd merely.

Eno. [Aside.] To be sure of that,
I will ask Antony.—Sir, sir, thou'rt so leaky,
That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for Thy dearest quit thee. [Exit Enobarbus.

Thyr. Shall I say to Caesar
What you require of him? for he partly begs
To be desir'd to give. It much would please him,
That of his fortunes you should make a staff
To lean upon; but it would warm his spirits,
To hear from me you had left Antony,
And put yourself under his shroud, who is
The universal landlord.

Cleo. What's your name?

Thyr. My name is Thyreus.

Cleo. Most kind messenger!

Say to great Caesar, that* in reputation*
I kiss his conquering hand; tell him, I am prompt
To lay my crown at 's feet, and there to kneel.
Tell him, from his all-obeying breath I hear
The doom of Egypt.

Ant. Cry’d he? and begg’d he pardon?
1 Att. He did ask favour.
Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent
Thou wast not made his daughter; and be thou sorry
To follow Caesar in his triumph, since
Thou hast been whipp’d for following him: henceforth
The white hand of a lady fever thee:
Shake but to look on’t. Get thee back to Caesar,
Tell him thy entertainment: look, thou say,
He makes me angry with him; for he seems
Proud and disdainful, harping on what I am.
Not what he knew I was. He makes me angry,
And at this time most easy ’t is to do:
When my good stars, that were my former guides,
Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fires
Into the abyss of hell. If he mishake,
My speech, and what is done, tell him, he has Hipparchus, my enchant’d bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like, to quit me. Urge it thou:
Hence, with thy stripes! be gone! [Exit Thyræus.
Cleo. Have you done yet?
Ant. Alack! our terrane moon
Is now eclips’d, and it portends alone
The fall of Antony.
Cleo. I must stay his time.
Ant. To flatter Caesar, would you mingle eyes
With one that ties his points?
Cleo. Not know me yet?
Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?
Cleo. Ah, dear! if it be so
From my cold heart let heaven engender hail,
And poison it in the source, and the first stone
Drop in my neck: as it determines, so
Dissolve my life! The next Cæsarion snite,
Till by degrees the memory of his tomb,
Together with my brave Egyptians all,
By the discandying of this pelleted storm,
Lie graceless, till the fies and gnats of Nile
Have buried them for prey! [Exeunt all.
Ant. I am satisfied.
Cesar sits down in Alexandria, where
I will oppose his fate. Our force by land
Hath nobly held; our sev’r’d navy, too.
Have knit again. a fleet threatening most seallike.
Where hast thou been, my heart?—Dost thou hear,
lady?
If from the field I shall return once more
To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood;
And my sword will earn our chronicle:
There’s hope in’t yet.
Cleo. That’s my brave lord!
Ant. I will be treble-sinc’rd, hearted, breath’d,
And fight maliciously: for when mine hours
Were nice and lucky, men did ransom lives
Of me for jests; but now I’ll set my teeth.
And send to darkness all that stop me.—Come,
Let’s have one other gaudy night.—Call to me
All my sad captains: fill our bowls; once more
Let’s mock the midnight bell.
Cleo. It is my birthday.
I had thought to have held it poor; but since my lord
Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.
Ant. We will yet do well.
Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord.
Ant. Do so, we’ll speak to them: and to-night I’ll force [queen.
The wine peep through their sears.—Come on, my

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Caesar's Camp at Alexandria. Enter Caesar, reading a Letter; Agrippa, Mecenas, and others.

Cas. He calls me boy, and chides, as he had power To beat me out of Egypt; my messenger He hath whipp'd with rods, dares me to personal combat, Caesar to Antony: let the old ruffian know I have many other ways to die; mean time, Laugh at his challenge. Mec. Caesar must think, When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now Make boot of his distraction: never anger Made good guard for itself.

Cas. Let our best heads Know, that to-morrow the last of many battles We mean to fight. Within our files there are, Of those that serv'd Mark Antony but late, Enough to fetch him in. See it done; And feast the army: we have store to do't, And they have ear'd the waste—Poor Antony! [Exit.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitius? Eno. No.

Ant. Why should he not?

Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune, He is twenty men to one.

Ant. To-morrow, soldier, By sea and land I'll fight: or I will live, Or bathe my dying honour in the blood Shall make it live again. Woot thou fight well? Eno. I'll strike; and cry, "Take all!"

Ant. Well said; come on.—Call forth my household servants: let's to-night Enter Servants. Be bounteous at our meal.—Give me thy hand, Thou hast been right honour:—so hast thou;— Thou, and thou, and thou:—you have serv'd me And kings have been your fellows. [well.

Cleo. What means this?

Eno. 'Tis one of those odd tricks, which sorrow shoots Out of the mind.

Ant. And thou art honest too. I wish I could be made so many men, And all of you clapp'd up together in An Antony, that I might do you service, So good as you have done.

Serv. The gods forbid!

Ant. Well, my good fellows, wait on me to-night; Scant not our cups, and make as much of me, As when mine empire was your fellow too, And suffer'd my command.

The dove will peck the estridge; and I see still, A diminution in our captain's brain Restores his heart. When valour presys on reason, It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek Some way to leave him.

SCENE III.—The Same. Before the Palace. Enter Two Soldiers, to their Guard.

Sold. Brother, good night: to-morrow is the day. Sold. It will determine one way: fare you well!

Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?

1 Sold. Nothing. What news?

2 Sold. Behold, 'tis but a rumour. Good night to you. 1 Sold. Well, sir, good night. Enter Two other Soldiers.

2 Sold. Soldiers, have careful watch. 3 Sold. And you. Good night, good night.

[The first Two place themselves at their Posts. 4 Sold. Here we: They take their Posts.] and if to-morrow Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope Our landmen will stand up.

3 Sold. 'Tis a brave army, And full of purpose. [Music of Hautboys under the Stage. 4 Sold. Peace! what noise?

1 Sold. List, list! 2 Sold. Hark!

1 Sold. Music in the air. 3 Sold. Under the earth. 4 Sold. It signifies well, does it not?

3 Sold. No. 1 Sold. Peace! I say. What should this mean?

2 Sold. 'Tis the god Hercules, who Antony lov'd, Now leaves him.

1 Sold. Walk; let's see if other watchmen Do hear what we do. [They advance to another Post.
2 Sold. How now, masters!

Ommes. How now!

How now! do you hear this? [Speaking together.

Sold. Ay; 'tis not strange?

3 Sold. Do you hear, masters? do you hear?

1 Sold. Follow the noise so far as we have quarter; Let's see how it will give off.

[Enter Antony, and Cleopatra; Charmian, and others, attending.

Ant. Eros! mine armour, Eros!

Cleo. Sleep a little.

Ant. No, my sweet. Eros, come; mine armour, Eros! Enter Eros, with Armour.

Come, good fellow, put mine iron on:—fortune be not ours to-day, it is Because we brave her. —Come.

Cleo. Nay, I'll help too.

What's this for?

Ant. Ah, let be, let be! thou art

The armourer of my heart:—false, false; this, this.

Cleo. Sooth, la! I'll help.

Ant. Thus it must be. Well, well; We shall thrive now.—Seest thou, my good fellow?

Go, put on thy defences.

Eros. Briefly, sir.

Cleo. Is not this buckled well?

Ant. Rarely, rarely; He that unbuckles this, till we do please To doff 't for our repose, shall hear a storm— Thou fumblest, Eros; and my queen's a squire More bright at this, than thou. Despatch. —O, love! That thou couldst see my wars to-day, and knew'st The royal occupation! thou shouldst see Enter an armed Soldier.

A workman in't. —Good morrow to thee; welcome: Thou look'st like him that knows a warlike charge. To business that we love we rise betimes, And go to't with delight.

Sold. A thousand, sir, Early thought, be, have on their riveted trim, And at the port expect you. [Shout. Trumpets flourish. Enter Captains, and Soldiers.

Capt. The morn is fair.—Good morrow, general.

All. Good morrow, general.

Ant. 'Tis well blown, lads. This morning, like the spirit of a youth That means to be of note, begins betimes.— So; come, give me that: this way; well said, Fare thee well, dame: what'er becomes of me, This is a soldier's kiss. Reubakie, [Kisses her. And worthy shameful check it were, to stand On more mechanic compliment: I'll leave thee Now, like a man of steel.—You, that will fight, Follow me close; I'll bring you to't. —Adieu.

[Exeunt Antony, Eros, Officers, and Soldiers.

Char. Please you, retire to your chamber.

Cleo. Lead me.

He goes forth gallantly. That he and Caesar might Determine this great war in single fight! Then, Antony,—but now.—well, on.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Antony's Camp near Alexandria.

Trumpets sound. Enter Antony and Eros; a Soldier meeting them

Sold. The gods make this a happy day to Antony!
My better service, when my trusti
Thou dost so crown with gold! This blows my heart:
If swift thought break it not, a swifter man
Shall outstrike thought; but thought will do 't, I feel.
I fight against thee.—No: I will go seek
Some ditch, wherein to die; the foul'st best fits
My latter part of life. [Exit.

SCENE VII.—Field of Battle between the Camps.
Alarum. Drums and Trumpets. Enter Agrrippa, and others.

Agr. Retire; we have engag'd ourselves too far.
Caesar himself has work, and our oppression
Exceeds what we expected. [Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter Antony, and Scardus wounded.

Scard. O, my brave emperor, this is fought indeed!
Had we done so at first, we had driven them home
With clouts about their heads. [Shouts after off.

Ant. Thou bleed'st apace.

Scard. I had a wound here that was like a T,
But now it is made an H.

Ant. They do retire.

Scard. We'll beat 'em into bench-holes. I have yet
Room for six scatches more.

Enter Eros.

Eros. They are beaten, sir; and our advantage serves
For a fair victory.

Scard. Let us score their backs,
And snatch 'em up, as we take hales, behind:
'Tis sport to make a runner.

Ant. I will reward thee
Once for thy sprightly comfort, and ten-fold
For thy good valour. Come thee on.

Scard. I'll halt after. [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—Under the Walls of Alexandria.
Alarum. Enter Antony, marching; Scardus, and Forces.

Ant. We have beat him to his camp. Run one before,
And let the queen know of our gists. [Exeunt before.
To-morrow, before the sun shall see us, we'll spill the blood
That has to-day escap'd. I thank you all.
For doughty-handed are you: and have fought
Not as you serv'd the cause, but as it had been
Each man's, like mine: you have shewn all Hectors.
Enter the city, clip your wives, your friends,
Tell them your feats; whilst they with joyful tears
Wash the conglameto from your wounds, and kiss
The honour'd gashes whole.—Give me thy hand:

Enter Cleopatra, attended.

To this great fair I'll commend thy acts.
Make her thanks bless thee.—O, thou day o' the world!
Chain tame arm'd neck: leap thou, attire and all,
Through proof of harness to my heart, and there
Ride on the pants triumphing.

Cleo. Lord of lords!
O infinite virtue! com'st thou smiling from
The world's great snare uncaught?

Ant. My nightingale,
We have beat them to their beds. What, girl! though grey
Dr something mingle with our younger brown; yet have we
A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can Get goal for goal of youth. Behold this man;

[Pointing to Scardus.

Cleo. I'll give thee, friend, an armour all of gold; it was a king's.

Ant. He has deserv'd it, were it carbuncled
Like glowing Phæbus' car.—Give me thy hand.
Through Alexandria make a jolly march;
Bear our hack'd targets like the men that owe them.
Had our great palace the capacity
To camp this host, we all would sup together,
And drink carouses to the next day's fate,
Which promises royal peril.—Trumpeters,
With brazen din blast you the city's ear;
Make mingle with our rattling tabourines,
That heaven and earth may strike their sounds together
Appraising our approach. [Exeunt.

SCENE IX.—Caesar's Camp.

Sentinels on their Post. Enter Enobarbus.

1 Sold. If we be not relierv'd within this hour,
We must return to the court of guard. The night
Is shiny, and, they say, we shall embattle
By the second hour i'the morn.

2 Sold. This last day was
A shrewd one to us.

Eno. O! bear me witness, night,—

3 Sold. What man is this?

2 Sold. Stand close, and list him

Eno. Be witness to me, O thou blessed moon!
When men revolted shall upon record
Bear hateful memory, poor Enobarbus did
Before thy face repent.—

1 Sold. Enobarbus! Peace!

Hark farther.

Eno. O sovereign mistress of true melancholy!
The poisonous damp of night dispone upon me,
That life, a very rebel to my will, [Lying down:
May hang no longer on me: throw my heart
Against the flint and hardness of my fault,
Which, being dried with grief, will break to powder,
And finish all foul thoughts. O Antony!

Nobler than my revolt is infamous,
Forgive me in thine own particular;
But let the world rank me in register
A master-leaver, and a fugitive.

O Antony! O Antony! [Dies

2 Sold. Let's speak to him.

1 Sold. Let's hear him; for the things he speaks
May concern Caesar.

3 Sold. Let's do so. But he sleeps.

1 Sold. Swoons rather; for so bad a prayer as his
Was never yet 'fore sleep.

2 Sold. Go we to him.

3 Sold. Awake, sir; awake! speak to us.

2 Sold. Hear you, sir?—

1 Sold. The hand of death hath caught him! Hark the Drums afar off:

Do early wake the sleepers. Let us bear him
To the court of guard; he is not of. Our hour
Is fully out.

3 Sold. Come on, then;

He may recover yet. [Exeunt, with the Body.

SCENE X.—Between the two Camps.

Enter Antony and Scardus, with Forces, marching

Ant. Their preparation is to-day by sea:

We please them not by land.

Scard. For both, my lord.

Ant. I would, they'd fight i'the fire, or i'the air.

We'd fight there too. But this it is: our foot
SCENE XII.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

Upon the hills adjoining to the city
Shall stay with us (order for sea is given,
They have put forth the haven)
Where their appointment we may best discover,
And look on their endeavours. [Exeunt.

Enter Cæsar, and his Forces, marching.

Cas. But' being charg d, we will be still by land,
Which, as I take t, we shall: for his best force
Is forth to man his galley's. To the vales,
And hold our best advantage! [Exeunt.

Re-enter Antony and Scarus.

Ant. Yet they are not join'd. Where yond' pine does
I shall discover all: I'll bring thee word [stand,
Straight, how 'tis like to go. [Exit.

Scar. Swallows have built
In Cleopatra's sails their nests: the augurers
Say, they know not,—they cannot tell:—look grimly,
And dare not speak their knowledge. Antony
Is valiant, and dejected; and by starts
His fretted fortunes give him hope, and fear,
Of what he has, and has not.

[Alarum off, as at a Sea-Fight.

Re-enter Antony.

Ant. All is lost!
This foul Egyptian hath betray'd me:
My fleet hath yielded to the foe: and yonder
They cast their caps up, and carouse together
Like friends long lost.—Triple-turn'd whore! 't is thou
Hast sold me to this novice, and my heart
Makes only wars on thee.—Bid them all fly;
For when I am reveng'd upon my charm,
I have done all.—Bid them all fly; be gone.

O sun! thy uprise shall I see no more:
Fortune and Antony part here; even here
Do we shake hands.—All come to this?—The hearts
That spaniel'd me at heels, to whom I gave
Their wishes, do discardy, melt their sweets
On blossoming Cæsar; and this pine is bark'd,
That overtopp'd them all. Betray'd I am.
O this false spill of Egypt! this greater charm,—
Whose eye beck'd forth my wars, and call'd them home
Whose bosom was my crownet, my chief end,
Like a right gipsy, hath, at fast and loose,*
Beguil'd me to the very heart of loss.—
What, Eros! Eros!

Enter Cleopatra.

Ah, thou spell! Avault!

Cleo. Why is my lord enrag'd against his love?

Ant. Vanish, or I shall give thee thy deserving,
And blemish Cæsar's triumph. Let him take thee,
And hoist thee up to the shouting plebeians:
Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot
Of all thy sex; most monster-like, be shown
For poor'st diminutives, for do's; and let Patient Octavia plough thy visage up
With her prepared nails. [Exit Cleo.

'Tis well thou 'rt gone,
If it be well to live: but better 't were
Thou fell'st under my fury, for one death
Might have prevented many.—Eros, ho!—
The shirt of Nessus is upon me: teach me,
Alcides, thou mine ancestor, thy rage:
Let me lodge Lichas on the horns of the moon;
And with those hands, that grasp'd the heaviest club,
Subdue my worthiest self. The witch shall die:
To the young Roman boy she hath sold me, and I fall
Under this plot; she dies for 't;—Eros, ho! [Exit.

SCENE XI.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iris, and Mardian

Cleo. Help me, my women! O! he is more mad
Than Telamon for his shield; the boar of Thessaly
Was never so embossed. [Char.

To the monument!
There look yourself, and send him word you are dead
The soul and body rive not more in parting,
Than greatness going off.

Cleo. To the monument!

Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself;
Say, that the last I spoke was, Antony,
And word it, p'rythee, piteously. Hence,
Mardian, and bring me how he takes my death.—

To the Monument!

[Exeunt.

SCENE XII.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter Antony and Eros.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me.

Eros. Ay, noble lord.

Ant. Sometimes, we see a cloud that's dragonish,
A vapour, sometime, like a bear, or lion,
A tower'd citadel, a pendock rock,
A forked mountain, or blue promontory
With trees upon 't, that nod unto the world,
And mock our eyes with air: thou hast seen these signs.
They are black vesper's pageants.

Eros. Ay, my lord.

Ant. That, which is now a horse, even with a thought.
The rack dislimns, and makes it indistinct,
As water is in water.

Eros. It does, my lord.

Ant. My good knave, Eros, now thy captain is Even such a body: here I am Antony,
Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave.
I made these wars for Egypt, and the queen,
Whose heart, I thought, I had, for she had mine,
Which, whilst it was mine, had annex'd unto
A million more, now lost; she, Eros, has Pack'd cards with Cæsar's, and false play'd my glory
Unto an enemy's triumph.—
Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is left us
Ourselves to end ourselves.—O, thy vile lady!

Enter Mardian.

Mardian.

She has robb'd me of my sword.

Mar. No, Antony:

My mistress lov'd thee, and her fortunes mingled
With thine entirely.

Ant. Hence, saucy eunuch: peace!
She hath betray'd me, and shall die the death.

Mar. Death of one person can be paid but once,
And that she has discharg'd. What thou wouldst do
Is done unto thy hand: the last she spoke
Was, Antony! most noble Antony!

Then, in the midst a tearing groan did break
The name of Antony: it was divided Between her heart and lips. She rendr'd life,
Thy name so burn'd in her.

Ant. Dead, then?

Mar. Dead.

Ant. Unarm me, Eros: the long day's task is done,
And we must sleep.—That thou depart'st hence safe.
Does pay thy labour richly; go.—[Exit Mardian

Off, pluck off:—

The seven-fold shield of Ajax cannot keep
The battery from my heart. O, cleave, my sides!

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

ACT IV.

THOU teachest me, O valiant Eros! what
I should, and thou couldst not. My queen and Eros
Have, by their brave instruction, got upon me
A nobleness in record: but I will be
A bridgework in my death, and run into
As to a lover's bed. Come then; and, Eros,
Thy master dies thy scholar: to do thus

[Turning his face from him]

I learn'd of thee.—How! not dead? not dead?—
The guard!—how?—O, despatch me!

Enter DERCIETAS and Guard.

1 Guard. What's the noise?
Ant. I have done my work ill, friends: O! make an end
Of what I have begun.

2 Guard. The star is fallen.

1 Guard. And time is at his period.

All. Alas, and woe!

Ant. Let him that loves me, strike me dead.

1 Guard. Not I.

2 Guard. Nor I.

3 Guard. Nor any one.

[Exit Guard.

Der. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers fly
This sword but shown to Caesar, with this tidings
Shall enter me with him.

Enter DIONIDES.

Dio. Where's Antony?
Der. There, Dioned; there.

Dio. Lives he?

Wilt thou not answer, man?

[Exit DERCIETAS.

Ant. Art thou there, Dioned? Draw thy sword and give me

Sufficing strokes for death.

Dio. Most absolute lord,

My mistress, Cleopatra, sent me to thee.

Ant. When did she send thee?

Dio. Now, my lord.

Ant. Where is she?

Dio. Look'd in her monument. She had a prophesy-

ing fear

Of what hath come to pass; for when she saw
(Which never shall be found) you did suspect
She had compos'd with Caesar, and that your rage
Would not be purged, she sent you word she was dead,
But, fearing since how it might work, hath sent
Mé to proclaim the truth; and I am come,
I dread, too late.

Ant. Too late! good Dioned. Call my guard, I pray thee.

Dio. What, ho! the emperor's guard! The guard, what, ho!

Come; your lord calls.

Enter some of the Guard.

Ant. Bear me, good friends, where Cleopatra bides;
'T is the last service that I shall command you.

1 Guard. Woe, woe are we, sir, you may not live to wear

All your true followers out.

All. Most heavy day!

Ant. Nay, my good fellows, do not please sharp fate
To grace it with your sorrows: bid that welcome
Which comes to punish us, and we punish it,
Seeming to bear it lightly. Take me up:
I have led you oft; carry me now, good friends,
And have my thanks for all. [Exit, bearing ANTONY.

Scene XIII.—The Same. A Monument.

Enter, above, CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo. O Charmian! I will never go from hence.

Char. Be comforted, dear madam.
SCENE I. — CAESAR’S CAMP BEFORE ALEXANDRIA.

Enter Caesar, Agrippa, Dolabella, Mecenas, Gallus, Proculeius, and others.

Caes. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield;
Being so straitened, tell him, that he mocks
The pauses that he makes.

Assist. O! Caesar seek your honour with your safety.—O!

Dol. Caesar, I shall.

Enter Dolabella, with the Sword of Antony.

Caes. Wherefore is that? and what art thou, that dar’st
Appear thus to us?

Dol. Mark Antony I serv’d, who best was worthy
The: in e. 2 conclusion: in f. e. 3 sport: in f. e. 4 when: in folio. Pope made the change. 5 Chores. 6 in f. e.: Tell him

He mocks us by the pauses, &c.

ACT V.
Best to be serv'd: whilst he stood up, and spoke,
He was my master, and I wore my life,
To spend upon his hater. If thou please
To take me to thee, as I was to him
I'll be to Caesar; if thou pleasest not,
I yield thee up my life.

Cas. What is't thou say'st?
Der. I say, O Caesar! Antony is dead.

Cas. The breaking of so great a thing should make
A greater crack: the round world should have shook
Lions into civil streets,
And citizens to their dens. The death of Antony
Is not a single doom: in the name lay
A moiety of the world.

Der. He is dead, Caesar; Not by a public minister of justice,
Nor by a hired knife; but that self hand,
Which writ his honour in the acts it did,
Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it,
Split that self noble heart. This is his sword; I robb'd his wound of it: behold it, stain'd
With his most noble blood.

Cas. Look you sad, friends?
The gods rebuke me, but it is tidings
To wash the eyes of kings.

Agr. And strange it is,
That nature must compel us to lament
Our most persist'd deeds.

Mec. His taints and honours
Weigh'd equal with him.

Agr. A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity, but you gods will give us
Some faults to make us men. Caesar is touch'd.

Mec. When such a spacious mirror's set before him,
He needs must see himself.

Cas. O Antony! Have I follow'd thee to this?—but we do lance
Diseases in our bodies. I must perforse
Have shewn to thee such a declining day,
Or look on thine: we could not still together
In the whole world. But yet let me lament,
With tears as sovereign as the blood of hearts,
That thou, my brother, my competitor
In top of all design, my mate in empire,
Friend and companion in the front of war,
The arm of mine own body, and the heart
Where mine his thoughts did kindle, that our stars,
Unreconcileable should divide
Our equalness to this.—Hear me, good friends,—
But I will tell you at some meete season:

Enter a Messenger.

The business of this man looks out of him;
We'll hear him what he says.—Whence are you?

Mess. A poor Egyptian yet. The queen my mistress,
Coun'd in all she has, her monument,
Of thy intents desires instruction,
That she preparedly may frame herself
To the way she's forc'd to.

Cas. Bid her have good heart:
She soon shall know of us, by some of ours,
How honourable and how kindly we Determine for her; for Caesar cannot live
To be ungentle.

Mess. So the gods preserve thee! [Exit.

Cas. Come hither, Proculeius. Go, and say,
We purpose her no shame: give her what comforts
The quality of her passion shall require,
Lost in her greatness by some mortal stroke
She do defeat us; for her life in Rome

Would be eternal in our triumph. Go,
And with your speediest bring us what she says,
And how you find of her.

Pro. Caesar, I shall. [Exit Proculeius.

Cas. Gallus, go you along.—Where's Dolabella,
To second Proculeius? [Exit Gallus.

All. Dolabella!

Cas. Let him alone, for I remember now
How he's employ'd: he shall in time be ready.
Go with me to my tent, where you shall see
How hardly I was drawn into this war,
How calm and gentle I proceeded still
In all my writings. Go with me, and see
What I can show in this. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Alexandria. A Room in the Monument

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. My desolation does begin to make
A better life, 'tis paltry to be Caesar:—
Not being fortune, he's but fortune's knife,
A minister of her will; and it is great
To do that thing that ends all other deeds,
Which shackles accidents, and bolts up change;
Which sleeps, and never palates more the dug,
The beggar's nurse and Caesar's.

Enter, to the Gates of the Monument, Proculeius,
Gallus, and Soldiers.

Pro. Caesar sends greeting to the queen of Egypt;
And bids thee study on what fair demands
Thou mean'st to have him grant thee.

Cleo. What's thy name?

Pro. My name is Proculeius.

Cleo. Antony

Did tell me of you, bade me trust you, but
I do not greatly care to be deceiv'd:
That have no use for trusting. If your master
Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell him,
That majesty to keep decorum, must
No less beg of a kingdom: if he please
To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son,
He gives me so much of mine own, as I
Will kneel to him with thanks.

Pro. Be of good cheer;
You are fallen into a princely hand, fear nothing.
Make your full reference freely to my lord,
Who is so full of grace, that it flows over
On all that need. Let me report to him
Your sweet dependancy, and you shall find
A conqueror, that will pray in aid for kindness,
Where he for grace is kneel'd to.

Cleo. Pray you, tell him
I am his fortune's vassal, and I send him
The greatness he has got. I hourly learn
A doctrine of obedience, and would gladly
Look him in the face.

Pro. This I'll report, dear lady.
Have comfort; for, I know, your plight is pitied
Of him that caus'd it.

Grl. You see how easily she may be surpris'd.

[Proculeius, and two of the Guard, ascend the Monument by a Ladder, and come behind Cleopatra. Some of the Guard unbar and open the Gates.

Guard her till Caesar come.

[To Proculeius and the Guard. Exit Gallus.

Iras. Royal queen!

Char. O Cleopatra! thou art taken, queen!—

Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands. [Drawing a Dagger

Pro. Hold, worthy lady, hold! [Disarms her.
Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this Reliev’d, but not betray’d.

Cleo. What, of death, too,
That rids our dogs of languish?

Pro. Cleopatra,
Do not abuse my master’s bounty, by
Th’ undoining of yourself: let the world see
His nobleness well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where art thou, death?
Come hither, come! come, come, and take a queen
Worth many babes and beggars!

Pro. O! temperance, lady.
I’ll not sleep neither. This mortal house I’ll rain,
Do Caesar what he can. Know, sir, that I
Will not wait pinion’d at your master’s court,
Nor once be chast’d with the sober eye
Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up,
And show me all the shining varlety
Of censoring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt
Be gentle grave to me! rather on Nilton’s mud
Lay me stark nak’d, and let the water flies.
Blow me into abhorr’d! rather make
My country’s high pyramids my gibbet,
And hang me up in chains!

Pro. You do extend
These thoughts of horror farther, than you shall Find cause in Caesar.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. Proculiuns,
What thou hast done thy master Caesar knows,
And he hath sent for thee: for the queen,
I’ll take her to my guard.

Pro. So, Dolabella,
It shall content me best: be gentle to her.—
To Caesar I will speak what you shall please,
If you’ll employ me to him.

Cleo. Say, I would die.

[Cleopatra kneels]

Enter Dolabella, Proculus, and Soldiers

Dol. Most noble empress, you have heard of me?
Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Assuredly, you know me.
Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard or known.
You laugh, when boys, or women, tell their dreams;
Is’t not your trick?

Dol. I understand not, madam.

Cleo. I dream’d, there was an emperor Antony:
O, such another sleep, that I might see
But such another man!

Dol. If it might please you,—
Cleo. His face was as the heavens: and therein stuck
A sun, and moon, which kept their course, and lighted
The little O, the earth.

Dol. Most sovereign creature.

Cleo. His legs bestrid the ocean: his rear’d arm,
Crested the world; his voice was propitious
As all the tuned spheres; and that to friends;
But when he meant to quail and shake the orb,
He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty,
There was no winter in’t: an autumn 1 it was,
That grew the more by reaping: his delights
Were dolphin-like; they show’d his back above
The element they liv’d in: in his livery
Walk’d crowns, and crownets: realms and islands were
As plates 2 dropp’d from his pocket.

1 necessary: in f e. 2 Antony: in fo io. Theobald made the change. 3 Silver coins. 4 A term at cards, to stake. 5 suites: in f e. Not in f e.
I tell you this: Caesar through Syria
Intends his journey, and within three days
You with your children will be send before.
Make your best use of this: I have perform'd
Your pleasure, and my promise.

Dolabella.

I shall remain your debtor.

Dol. I your servant.

Adieu, good queen; I must attend on Caesar.

Cleo. Farewell, and thanks. [Exit Dol.] Now, Iris
what think'st thou?

Thou, an Egyptian puppet, shalt be shown
In Rome, as well as I: mechanism slaves
With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers, shall Uplift us to the view: in their thick breaths,
Rank of gross diet, shall we be enclosed,
And forced to drink their vapour.

Iras.
The gods forbid!

Cleo. Nay, 'tis most certain, Iris. Saucy liators
Will catch at us, like strumpets; and saud rymer's
Ballad us out o' tune: the quick comedians
Extemporally will stage us, and present
Our Alexandrian revels: Antony
Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see
Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness
'l the posture of a whore.

Iras. O, the good gods!

Iras. Nay, that is certain.

Iras. I'll never see it; for, I am sure, my nails
Are stronger than mine eyes.

Cleo. Why, that's the way
To foil their preparation, and to conquer
Their most assured intents.—Now, Charmian?

Re-enter Charmian.

Show me, my women, like a queen:—go fetch
My best attire:—I am again for Cydnus,
To meet Mark Antony. [Exit.]

Now, noble Charmian, we'll despatch indeed;
And, when thou hast done this chere, I will give thee leave
To play till doomes-day. —Bring our crown and all.
Wherefore's this noise? [Exit Iris. A noise within.

Enter one of the Guard.

Guard. Here is a rural fellow,
That will not be denied your higheless presence:
He brings you figs.

Cleo. Let him come in. —How poor an instrument

[Exit Guard.

May do a noble deed! he brings me liberty.
My resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing
Of woman in me: now from head to foot
I am marble-constant; now the fleeting moon
No planet is of mine.

Re-enter Guard, with a Clown bringing in a Basket
Guard. This is the man.

Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilius there,
That kills and pains not?

Clown. Truly I have him; but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal: those that do die of it do seldom or never recover.

Cleo. Rememberst thou any that have died on't?

Clown. Very many men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday: a very honest woman, but something given to lie, as a woman should not do but in the way of honesty how she died of the biting of it, what pain she left. —Truly, she makes a very good report of the worm; but he that

Cleo. What have I kept back?
Sel. Enough to purchase what you have made known.
Ces. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra; I approve
Your wisdom in the deed.

Cleo. See, Caesar! O, behold,
How pomp is follow'd! mine will now be yours,
And should we shift estates, yours would be mine.
The ingratitude of this Seleucus does
Even make me wild.—O slave, of no more trust
Than love that's hid!—What! goest thou back? thou shalt
Go back, I warrant thee; but I'll catch thine eyes,
Though they had wings. Slave, soul-less villain, dog.
O rarely base!

Ces. Good queen, let us entreat you.

Cleo. O Caesar! what a wounding shame is this;
That thou, vouchsafing here to visit me,
Doing the honour of thy lordliness
To one so meek, that mine own servant should Parcel the sum of my disgraces by Addition of his envy! Say, good Caesar,
That I some lady trifles have reserv'd,
Immortal toys, things of such dignity
As we bestow modern friends withal; and say,
Some noble token I have kept apart
For Livia, and Octavia, to induce
Their mediation, must I be unfolded
With one that have bred? Ye gods! it smites me
Beneath the fall I have. Pr'ythee, go hence;

[To Seleucus.

Or I shall show the cinders of my spirit
Through th' ashes of mischance. —Wert thou a man,
Thou wouldst have mercy on me.

Ces. Forbear, Seleucus. [Exit Seleucus.

Cleo. Be it known, that we, the greatest, are mis-thought
For things that others do; and when we fall,
We answer others' merits in our name,
And therefore to be pitied.

Ces. Cleopatra,
Not what you have reserv'd, nor what acknowledg'd,
Put we? the roll of conquest: still be it yours,
Bestow it at your pleasure; and believe,
Caesar's no merchant, to make price with you
Of things that merchants sold. Therefore be cheer'd;
Make not your thoughts your prisons: no, dear queen;
For we intend so to dispose you, as Yourself shall give us counsel. Feed, and sleep:
Our care and pity is so much upon you,
That we remain your friend; and so, adieu.

Cleo. My master, and my lord!

[Flourish. Exeunt Caesar, and his Train.

Cleo. He words me, girls, he words me, that I should not
Be noble to myself: but hark thee, Charmian.

[Whispers Charmian.

Iras. Finish, good lady; the bright day is done,
And we are for the dark.

Cleo. Hie thee again:
I have spoken already, and it is provided;
Go, put it to the haste.

Char. Madam, I will.

Cleo. Re-enter Dolabella.

Dol. Where is the queen?

Char. Behold, sir. [Exit Charmian.

Cleo. Dolabella?

Dol. Madam, as thereto sworn by your command,
Which my love makes religion to obey, will believe all that they say, shall never be saved by half that they do. But this is most fallible, the worm's an adder-worm.

Cleo. Get thee hence; farewell.

Clown. I wish you all joy of the worm.

Cleo. Farewell. [Clown sets down the Basket.

Cleo. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind.

Cleo. Ay, ay; farewell.

Clown. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted but in the keeping of wise people; for, indeed, there is no goodness in the worm.

Cleo. Take thou no care; it shall be heeded.

Cleo. Very good. Give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo. Will it eat me?

Clown. You must not think I am so simple, but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman; I know, that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not; but, truly, these same whoreson devils do the gods great harm in their women, for in every ten that they make, the devils mar nine.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone; farewell.

Cleo. Yes, forsooth; I wish you joy of the worm. [Exit.

Re-enter Iras, with a robe, Crown, &c.

Cleo. Give me my robe, put on my crown; I have Immortal longings in me. Now, no more The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip.— Vare, yare, good Iras; quick,—Methinks, I hear Antony call: I see him rouse himself To praise my noble act; I hear him mock The luck of Caesar, which the gods give men To excuse their after wrath. Husband, I come: Now to that name my courage prove my title. I am fire, and air; my other elements I give to baser life.—So,—have you done? Come then, and take the last warmth of my lips. Farewell, kind Charmer;—Iras, long farewell. [Kisses them. Iras falls, and dies.

Have I the asp'sk in my lips? Dost fall? If thou and nature can so gently part, The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch, Which hurts, and is desir'd. Dost thou lie still? If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world It is not worth leave-taking.

Char. Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain, that I may say, The gods themselves do weep.

Cleo. This proves me base:

If she first meet the curled Antony, He'll make no demand of her, and spend that kiss, Which is my heaven to have. Come, thou mortal wretch, [She applies the Asp to her Breast.

With thy sharp teeth this knot intrinsicate Of life at once untie: poor venomous fool, Be angry, and despatch. O! couldst thou speak, That I might hear thee call great Caesar ass Unpoliced!

Char. O eastern star!

Cleo. Peace, peace!

Dost thou not see my baby at my breast, That sucks the nurse asleep?

Char. O, break! O, break!

Cleo. As sweet as balm, as soft as air, as gentle.

O Antony!—Nay, I will take thee too.

[Applying another Asp to her Arm.

Why should I stay—

Char. In this wild world?—So, fare thee well.

Now boast thee, death, in thy possession lies A lass unparallel'd.—Downy windows, close; And golden Phoebus never be behold Of eyes again so royal! Your crown's awry*

I'll mend it, and then play—

Enter the Guard, rushing in.

1 Guard. Where is the queen?

Char. Speak softly; wake her not.

1 Guard. Caesar hath sent—

Char. Too slow a messenger. [Applies the Asp.

O! come; space; despatch: I partly feel thee.

1 Guard. Approach, ho! All's not well: Caesar's beguil'd.

2 Guard. There's Dolabella sent from Caesar: call him.

1 Guard. What work is here?—Charmer, is this well done?

Char. It is well done, and fitting for a princess Descended of so many royal kings.

Ah, soldier!

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. How goes it here?

2 Guard. All dead.

Dol. Caesar, thy thoughts Touch their effects in this: thyself art coming To see perform'd the dreadful act, which thou So sought'st to hinder.

Within. A way there! a way for Caesar!

Enter Caesar, and all his Train.

Dol. O, sir! you are too sure an augurer: That you did fear, is done.

Cas. Bravest at the last: She level'd at our purposes, and, being royal, Took her own way.—The manner of their deaths? I do not see them bleed.

Dol. Who was last with them?

1 Guard. A simple countryman that brought her figs This was his basket.

Cas. Poison'd, then.

1 Guard. O Caesar This Charmer lived but now; she stood, and spake I found her trimming up the diadem On her dead mistress: tremblingly she stood, And on the sudden dropp'd.

Cas. O noble weakness!— If they had swallow'd poison, 't would appear By external swelling; but she looks like sleep, As she would catch another Antony In her strong toil of grace.

Dol. Here, on her breast, There is a vent of blood, and something blown The like is on her arm.

1 Guard. This is an asp'sk trail; and these fig-leaves Have slime upon them, such as the asp leaves Upon the caves of Nile.

Cas. Most probable, That so she died; for her physician tells me, She hath pursu'd conclusions infinite Of easy ways to die.—Take up her bed, And bear her women from the monument; She shall be buried by her Antony; No grave upon the earth shall clip in it A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them: and their story is No less in pity, than his glory, which Brought them to be lamented. Our army shall, In solemn show, attend this funeral, And then to Rome.—Come, Dolabella, see High order in this great solemnity.

[Exeunt

Cymbeline, King of Britain.
Cloen, Son to the Queen by a former Husband.
Leonatus Posthumus, Husband to Imogen.
Belarius, a banished Lord, disguised under the name of Morgan.

Guiderius, Arviragus, Sons to Cymbeline, disguised under the names of Polydore and Cadwal, supposed Sons to Belarius.

Philario, Friend to Posthumus, Italians.
Iachimo, Friend to Philario.
A French Gentleman, Friend to Philario.

Lords, Ladies, Roman Senators, Tribunes, Apparitions, a Soothsayer, a Dutch Gentleman, a Spanish Gentleman, Musicians, Officers, Captains, Soldiers, Messengers, and other Attendants.

SCENE, sometimes in Britain, sometimes in Italy.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Britain. The Garden of Cymbeline's Palace. Enter Two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. You do not meet a man, but frowns: our bloods
No more obey the heavens, than our courtiers
Still seem as does the king.

2 Gent. But what's the matter?

1 Gent. His daughter, and the heir of his kingdom,
Whom he purpos'd to his wife's sole son, (a widow)
That late he married had refer'd herself
Unto a poor but worthy gentleman. She's wedded;
Her husband banish'd; she imprison'd: all
Is outward sorrow, though, I think, the king
Be touch'd at very heart.

2 Gent. None but the king?

1 Gent. He that hath lost her, too: so is the queen,
That most desir'd the match; but not a courtier,
Although they wear their faces to the bent
Of the king's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

2 Gent. And why so?

1 Gent. He that hath miss'd the princess is a thing
Too bad for bad report; and he that hath her,
(If mean, that married her,—alack, good man!—
And therefore banish'd) is a creature such
As, to seek through the regions of the earth
For one his like, there would be something failing
In him that should compare. I do not think,
So fair an outward, and such stuff within,
Endows a man but he.

2 Gent. You speak him fair.

1 Gent. I do extend him, sir, within himself;
Crush him together, rather than unfold
His measure duly.

2 Gent. What's his name, and birth?

1 Gent. I cannot delve him to the root. His father
Was called Sicilius, who did join his honour
Against the Romans with Cassiobian,
But had his titles by Tenantius, whom
He serv'd with glory and admir'd success;
So gain'd the sur-addition, Leonatus:
And had, besides this gentleman in question,
Two other sons, who, in the wars o' the time,
Died with their swords in hand; for which their father
Then old and fond of 'st issue, took such sorrow,
That he quit being; and his gentle lady,
Big of this gentleman, our theme, deceas'd
As he was born. The king he takes the babe
To his protection; calls him Posthumus Leonatus;
Breeds him, and makes him of his bed-chamber:
Puts him to all the learnings that his time
Could make him the receiver of; which he took,
As we do air, fast as 't was minister'd; and
In his spring became a harvest; liv'd in court,
(Which rare it is to do) most prais'd, most lov'd,
A sample to the youngest, to the more mature,
A glass that festr'd them; and to the graver,
A child that guided dotards: for his mistress,
For whom he now is banish'd, her own price
Proclaims how she esteem'd him and his virtue;
By her election may be truly read
What kind of man he is.

2 Gent. I honour him,
Even out of your report. But, pray you, tell me,
Is she sole child to the king?

1 Gent. His only child.
He had two sons, (if this be worth your hearing,
Mark it) the eldest of them at three years old,
I' th' swathing clothes the other, from their nursery
Were stol'n; and to this hour no guess in knowledge
Which way they went.
SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter the Queen, Posthumus, and Imogen.

Queen. No, be assur'd, you shall not find me, daughter.

After the slander of most step-mothers, Evil-eye'd unto you; you are my prisoner, but Your jailor shall deliver you the keys That lock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus, So soon as I can win th'offended king, I will be known your advocate: marry, yet The fire of rage is in him; and 't were good, You lean'd unto his sentence, with what patience Your wisdom may inform you.

Post. I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril.

I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitting The pangs of bard affections, though the king Hath charg'd you should not speak together.

Exit Queen.

Imo. O dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant Can tickle where she wounds.—My dearest husband, I something fear my father's wrath; but nothing (Always reserv'd my holy duty) what His rage can do on me. You must be gone;
And I shall here abide the hourly shot Of angry eyes; not comforted to live, But that there is this jewel in the world, That I may see again.

Post. My queen! my mistress! O, lady! weep no more, lest I give cause To be suspected of more tenderness Than doth become a man. I will remain The loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth: My residence in Rome at one Philario's; Who to my father was a friend, to me Known but by letter. Thither write, my queen, And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send, Though ink be made of gall.

Re-enter Queen.

Queen. Be brief, I pray you: If the king come, I shall incur I know not How much of his displeasure. [Aside.] Yet I'll move him To walk this way. I never do him wrong, But he does buy my injuries to be friends, Pays dear for my offences.

[Exit Post.

Should we be taking leave As long a term as yet we have to live, The loathness to depart would grow. Adieu!

Imo. Nay, stay a little; Were you but riding forth to air yourself, Such parting were too petty. Look here, love; This diamond was my mother's; take it, heart; But keep it till you woo another wife, When Imogen is dead.

Post. How! how! another?—You gentle gods, give me but this I have, And sear up my embraces from a next With bonds of death!—Remain, remain thou here [Putting on the Ring.

While sense can keep it on. And sweetest, fairest, As I my poor self did exchange for you, To your so infinite loss, so in our trifles I still win of you: for my sake, wear this: It is a manacle of love; I'll place it Upon this fairest prisoner.

[Putting a Bracelet on her Arm.

O, the gods!

When shall we see again?

Post. I'll seek the king.

Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid! hence, from my sight! If after this command thou fraught the court With thy unworthiness, thou diest. Away! Thou 'rt poison to my blood.

Post. The gods protect you, And bless the good remainders of the court! I am gone.

[Exit

Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death More sharp than this is.

Cym. O disloyal thing! That shouldst repair my youth, thou heapest A year's age on me.

Imo. I beseech you, sir, Harm not yourself with your vexation; I am senseless of your wrath: a touch more rare Subdues all pangs, all fears.

Cym. Past grace? obedience? Past hope, and in despair; that way, past grace?

Cym. That mightest have had the sole son of my queen.

Imo. O bless'd, that I might not! I chose an eagle, And did avoid a jackdaw! Thou tookst a beggar would have made thy throne A seat for baseness.

Imo. No; I rather added A lustre to it.

Cym. O thou vile one!

Imo. Sir, It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus. You bred him as my play-fellow; and he is A man worth any woman; overbuys me Almost the sum he pays.

Cym. What! art thou mad? Imo. Almost, sir: heaven restore me!—Would I were A neatherd's daughter, and my Leonatus Our neighbour shepherd's son!

Re-enter Queen.

Cym. Thou foolish thing!—They were again together; you have done! To the Queen Not after our command. Away with her, And pen her up.

Queen. Beweep your patience.—Peace! Dear lady daughter, peace!—Sweet sovereign, Leave us to ourselves; and make yourself some comfort Out of your best advice.

Cym. Nay, let her languish A drop of blood a day; and, being aged, Die of this folly.

Queen. Enter Pisianio.

Queen. Dost!—You must give way:

Here is your servant.—How now, sir! What news?

Pis. My lord your son drew on my master.
QUEEN.
No harm, I trust, is done?

PIS. There might have been,
But that my master rather play'd than fought;
And had no help of anger: they were parted
By gentlemen at hand.

QUEEN. I am very glad on't.

PIS. Your son's my father's friend; he takes his part.

To draw upon an exile!—O brave sir!—
I would they were in Afric both together,
Myself by with a needle, that I might prick
The goer back.—Why came you from your master?

PIS. On his command. He would not suffer me
To bring him to the haven: left these notes
Of what commands I should be subject to,
When 't pleas'd you to employ me.

QUEEN. This hath been
Your faithful servant: I dare lay mine honour,
He will remain so.

PIS. I humbly thank your highness.

QUEEN. Pray, walk a while.

IMO. About some half-hour hence, pray you, speak with me. You shall, at least,
Go see my lord aboard: for this time, leave me. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Public Place.

Enter CLOETEN, and Two Lords.

1 LORD. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt: the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice.
Where air comes out, air comes in; there's none abroad
so wholesome as that you vent.

CLOETEN. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it—Have
I hurt them?

2 LORD. [Aside.] No, faith; not so much as his patience.

1 LORD. Hurt him? his body's a passable careess, if he be not hurt: it is a thoroughfare for steel, if it be not hurt.

2 LORD. [Aside.] His steel was in debt; it went o' the backside the town.

CLOETEN. The villain would not stand me.

2 LORD. [Aside.] No; but he fled forward still, to ward your face.

1 LORD. Stand you! You have land enough of your own; but he added to your having, gave you some ground.

2 LORD. [Aside.] As many inches as you have oceans.

—Puppies!

CLOETEN. I would they had come between us.

2 LORD. [Aside.] So would I, till you had measured how long a foot you were upon the ground.

CLOETEN. And that she should love this fellow, and refuse me!

2 LORD. [Aside.] If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damned.

1 LORD. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together: she's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

2 LORD. [Aside.] She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her.

CLOETEN. Come, I'll to my chamber. Would there had been some hurt done!

2 LORD. [Aside.] I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt.

CLOETEN. You'll go with us?

1 LORD. I'll attend your lordship.

CLOETEN. Nay, come, let's go together.

2 LORD. Well, my lord. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter IMOGEN and PISANIO.

IMOGEN. I would thou gav'st unto the shores o' the haven.
And question'd every sail: if he should write,
And I not have it, 'twere a paper lost
As offer'd mercy is. What was the last
That he spake to thee?

PISANIO. It was, his queen, his queen

IMOGEN. Then waw'd his handkerchief?

PISANIO. And kiss'd it, madam, IMOGEN. Senseless linen, happier therein than I!—
And that was all?

PISANIO. No, madam; for so long
As he could make with this eye or ear
Distinguish him from others, he did keep
The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief,
Still waving, as the fits and stirs of his mind
Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on,
How swift his ship.

IMOGEN. Thou shouldst have made him
As little as a crow, or less, ere left
To after-eye him.

PISANIO. Madam, so I did.

IMOGEN. I would have broke mine eye-strings, crack'd them, but
To look upon him, till the diminution
Of space had point'd him sharp as my needle;
Nay, follow'd him, till he had melted from
The smallness of a gnat to air; and then
Have turn'd mine eye, and wept.—But, good Pisano,
When shall we hear from him?

PISANIO. Be assured, madam,
With his next vantage.

IMOGEN. I did not take my leave of him, but had
Most pretty things to say: ere I could tell him,
How I would think on him, at certain hours,
Such thoughts, and such; or I could make him swear
The shes of Italy should not betray
Mine interest, and his honour; or have charg'd him,
At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at midnight,
'Purser' me with orisons, for then
I am in heaven for him; or ere I could Give him that parting kiss, which I had set
Betwixt two charming words, comes in my father,
And, like the tyrannous breathing of the north,
Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter A Lady.

The queen, madam,
Desires your highness' company.

IMOGEN. Those things I bid you do, get them despatch'd,—
I will attend the queen.

PISANIO. Madam, I shall. [Exeunt.

Enter PHILARIO, JACHIMO, a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

JACHIMO. Believe it, sir, I have seen him in Britain:
he was then of a crescent note; expected to prove so worthy, as since he hath been allowed the name of;
but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration, though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabulated by his side, and I to peruse him by items.

PHILARIO. You speak of him when he was less furnished, than now he is, with that which makes him both without and within.

FRENCH. I have seen him in France: we had very many there could behold the sun with as firm eyes as

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter, (wherein he must be weighed rather by her value, than his own) words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.

French. And, then, his banishment.

Iach. Ay, and the approbations1 of those who weep this lamentable divorce and her doleurs,2 are worth wonderfully to extend him; be it but to fortify her judgment, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without more3 quality. But how comes it, he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance?

Phil. His father and I were soldiers, together; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life. — Enter Posthumus.

Here comes the Briton. Let him be so entertained amongst you, as suits with gentlemen of your knowing to a stranger of his quality. — I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman, whom I commend to you, as a noble friend of mine: how worthy he is, I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing.

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay, and yet pay still.

French. Sir, you over-rate my poor kindness. I was glad I did atone4 my countryman and you: it had been pity you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose, as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller; rather slumber to go even with what I heard, than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences; but, upon my mended judgment, (if I must offend to say it is mended) my quarrel was not altogether slight.

French. Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitration of swords: and by such two, that would, by all likelihood, have contounded one the other, or have fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think. 'T was a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses; this gentleman at that time vouching, (and upon warrant of bloody affirmation) his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant, qualified, and less attemptable, than any the rarest of our ladies in France.

Iach. That lady is not now living: or this gentleman's opinion, by this, worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still, and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so far prefer her before ours of Italy.

Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate her nothing; though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair, and as good, (a kind of hand-in-hand comparison) had been something too fair, and too good, for any lady in Britain. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours outlusters many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many; but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the other.

Post. I praised her as I rated her; so do I my stone,

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unaparazoned mistress is dead or she's outprized by a trifle.

Post. You are mistaken: the one may be sold, or given; or if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift: the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours: but, you know, strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds. Your ring may be stolen, too: so, of your brace of unprizable estimations, the one is but frail, and the other casual; a cunning thief, or a that way accomplished courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last.

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier to convince5 the honour of my mistress, if in the holding or loss of that you term her frail. I do nothing doubt, you have store of thieves; notwithstanding, I fear not my ring.

Phil. Let us leave here, gentlemen.

Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me; we are familiar at first.

Iach. With five times so much conversation, I should get ground of your fair mistress; make her go back, even to the yielding, had I admittance, and opportunity to friend.

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare thereupon pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring, which, in my opinion, o'values it something, but I make my wager rather against your confidence, than her reputation: and, to bar your offence therein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world.

Post. You are a great deal abused in too bold a persuasion: and I doubt not you'll sustain what you're worthy of by your attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Post. A repulse; though your attempt, as you call it, deserve more.—a punishment too.

Phil. Gentlemen, enough of this; it came in too suddenly: let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.

Iach. Would I had put my estate, and my neighbour's, on the approbation6 of what I have spoke.

Post. What lady would you choose to assail?

Iach. Yours; whom in constancy, you think, stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring, that commend me to the court, where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of hers, which you imagine so reserved.

Post. I will wage against your gold, god to it: my ring I hold dear as my finger; 'tis a part of it.

Iach. You are afraid,7 and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting. But I see, you have some religion in you, that you fear.

Post. This is but a custom in your tongue; you bear a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach. I am the master of my speeches; and would undergo what is spoken, I swear.

Post. Will you?—I shall but lend my diamond till your return. Let there be covenants drawn between us. My mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of 1 approbations. 2 under her colours: 3 This word is not in f. e. 4 lem. in f. e. 5 Reconcile. 6 Not in folio. 7 Not be have in folio. 8 Malone made the change. 9克服. 10 a friend: in f. e.

your unworthy thinking: I dare you to this match.
Here's my ring.

Phil. I will have it no lay.

Iach. By the gods, it is one.—If I bring you no sufficient testimony, that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too: if I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours;—provided, I have your commendation, for my more free entertainment.

Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles between us.—Only, thus far you shall answer: if you make good1 your vauntage2 upon her, and give me directly to understand you have prevail'd, I am no farther your enemy; she is not worth our debate: if she remain unseduced, (you not making it appear otherwise) for your ill opinion, and the assault you have made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your sword.

Iach. Your hand: a covenant. We will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain, lest the bargain should catch cold, and starve. I will fetch my gold, and have our two wagers recorded.

Post. Agreed. [Exit Posthumus and Iachimo.

French. Will this hold, think you?

Phi. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow 'em. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Britain. A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Queen, Ladies, and Cornelius.

Queen. Whiles yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers: Make haste. Who has the note of them?

1 Lady. I, madam.

Queen. Despatch. — [Exit Ladies.

Now, master doctor, have you brought those drugs?

Cor. Pleadeth your highness, ay: here they are, madam: —[Presenting a small Box.

But I beseech your grace, without offence, (My conscience bids me ask) wherefore you have Commanded of me those most poisonous compounds, Which are the movers of a languishing death;
But though slow, deadly?

Queen. I wonder, doctor,
Thou ask'st me such a question: have I not been Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learn'd me how To make perfumes? distil? preserve? yea, so,
That our great king himself doth woo me oft
For my confections? Having thus far proceeded, (Unless thou think'st me devilish) it's not meet
That I did amplify my judgment in
Other conclusions? I will try the forces
Of these thy compounds on such creatures as
We count not worth the hanging, (but none human)
To try the vigour of them, and apply
Ayments to their act; and by them gather
Their several virtues, and effects.

Cor. Your highness
Shall from this practice but make hard your heart: Besides, the seeing these effects will be Both noisome and infectious.

Queen. O! content thee.—

[Aside.] Here comes a flattering rascal: upon him Will I first work: he's for his master,
And enemy to my son.—How now, Pisiano!—

1 Not in f. e. 2 voyage: in f. e. 3 To Pisiano: in f. e.

Doctor, your service for this time is ended:
Take your own way.

Cor. [Aside.] I do suspect you, madam:
But you shall do no harm.

Queen. Hark thee, a word.—

[She talks apart to Pisiano.

Cor. I do not like her. She doth think, she has Strange lingering poisons: I do know her spirit,
And will not trust one of her malices with
A drug of such damned nature. Those she has
Will stupify and dull the sense awhile;
Which first, perchance, she'll prove on cats, and dogs,
Then afterward up higher; but there is
No danger in what show of death it makes
More than the locking up the spirits a time,
To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd
With a most false effect; and I the truer,
So to be false with her.

Queen. No farther service, doctor,
Until I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave. [Exit.

Queen. Weeps she still, say'st thou? Dost thou think, in time
She will not queach, and let instruction enter
Where folly now possess? Do thou work:
When thou shalt bring me word she loves my son,
'll tell thee on the instant thou art, then,
As great as is thy master: greater; for
His fortunes all lie speechless, and his name
Is at last gasp: return he cannot, nor Continue where he is: to shift his being,
Is to exchange one misery with another,
And every day that comes to decay,
A day's work in him. What shall thou expect,
To be dependar on a thing that leans?
Who cannot be new-built; nor has no friends,
[The Queen drops the Box: Pisiano takes it up and presents it.

So much as but to prop him.—Thou tak'rt up
Thou know'st not what; but take it for thy labour.
It is a thing I made, which hath the king
Five times redeem'd from death: I do not know
What is more cordial:—say, I pr'ythee, take it;
It is an earnest of a farther good
That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how
The case stands with her: do'st as from thyself.
Think what a chance thouchaneste o2; but think
Thou hast thy mistress still; to boot, my son,
Who shall take notice of thee. I'll move the king
To any shape of thy preferment, such
As thou'lt desire; and then myself, I chiefly,
That set thee on to this desert, am bound
To load thy merit richly. Call my women:
Think on my words. [Exit Pis.]—A sly and constant
knave,
Not to be shak'd; the agent for his master,
And the rememberer of her, to hold
The hand fast to her lord.—I have given him that,
Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her
Of liggers for her suite; and which she after,
Except she bend her humour, shall he assured
Re-enter Pisiano, and Ladies.

To taste of too.—So, so;—well done, well done.
The violets, cowslips, and the primroses,
Bear to my closet.—Fare thee well, Pisiano;
Think on my words. [Exit. Queen and Ladies
Pis. And shall do;
But when to my good lord I prove untrue,
I'll choke myself: there's all I'll do for you. [Exit.
SCENE VII.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter Imogen.

Imo. A father cruel, and a step-dame false;
A foolish suitor to a wedded lady,
That hath her husband banish'd:—O, that husband!
My supreme crown of grief, and those repeated
Vexations of it! Had I been thief-stolen,
As my two brothers, happy! but most miserable
Is the desire that's glorious: blessed be those,
How mean soe're, that have their honest wills,
Which seasons comfort.—Who may this be? Fie!

Enter Pisanio and Iachimo.

Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome
Comes from my lord with letters.

Iach. Change you, madam?
The worthy Leonatus is in safety,
And greets your highness dearly. [Gives a Letter.

Imo. You are kindly welcome.

Iach. All of her, that is out of door, most rich!

[Aside.

If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare,
She is alone the Arabian bird, and I
Have lost the wager. Boldness, be my friend;
Arm me, audacity, from head to foot,
Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight;
Rather, directly fly.

Imo. [Reads] "He is one of the noblest note, to whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your truest—"

"Leonatus."

So far I read aloud;
But even the very middle of my heart
Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully.
You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I
Have words to bid you; and shall find it so
In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks, fairest lady.—
What! are men mad? Hath nature given them eyes?
To see this vaulted arch, and the rich cope?
O'er sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt
The fiery orbs above, and the twin'd stones
Upon th' unnumber'd beach; and can we not Partition make with spectacles so precious?
'Twixt fair and foul?

Imo. What makes your admiration?

Iach. It cannot be i' the eye; for apes and monkeys,
'Twixt two such shes, would chatter this way, and Contemn with mows the other: nor i' the judgment;
For idiots, in this case of favour, would
Be wisely define: nor i' the appetite;
Sluttery, to such neat excellence oppos'd,
Should make desire vomit to emptiness,
Not so allur'd to feed.

Imo. What is the matter, trow?

Iach. The cloyed will,
(That satiate yet unsatisfied desire,
That tub both fill'd and running) ravening first
The lamb, longs after for the garbage.

Imo. What, dear sir,

Iach. Thanks, madam, well.—Beseech you, sir, desire
To Pisanio.

My man's abode where I did leave him; he
Is strange and peevish.

To give him welcome. [Exit Pisanio.

Imo. Continues well my lord? His health, 'beseech you?

Iach. Well, madam.

Imo. Is he dispos'd to mirth? I hope, he is.

Iach. Exceeding pleasant; none, a stranger there.

So merry and so gossome: he is call'd
The Briton reveller.

Imo. When he was here,
He did incline to sadness; and oft-times
Not knowing why.

Iach. I never saw him sad.
There is a Frenchman his companion, one,
An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much loves
A Gallian girl at home; he furnaces
The thick sighs from him, whiles the jolly Briton
(Your lord, I mean) laughs from 's free lungs, cries;
Can my sides hold, to think, that man,—who knows
By history, report, or his own proof,
What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose
But must be,—will his free hours languish
For assur'd bondage?

Imo. Will my lord say so?

Iach. Ay, madam, with his eyes in flood with laughter
It is a recreation to be by,
And hear him mock the Frenchman; but, heavens know,
Some men are much to blame.

Imo. N't he, I hope.

Iach. Not he; but yet heaven's bounty towards him
Might be us'd more thankfully. In himself, 't is much:
In you,—which I account beyond all talents,—
Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pity too.

Imo. What do you pity, sir?

Iach. Two creatures, heartily.

Imo. Am I one, sir? You look on me: what wreck discern you in me,
Deserves your pity?

Iach. Lamentable! What!
To hide me from the radiant sun, and solace
The dungeon by a snuff?

Imo. I pray you, sir,
Deliver with more openness your answers
To my demands. Why do you pity me?

Iach. That others do,
I was about to say, enjoy your,—But
It is an office of the gods to venge it,
Not mine to speak on't.

Imo. You do seem to know
Something of me, or what concerns me: pray you.
(Since doubting things go ill, often hurts more
Than to be sure they do; for certainties
Either are past remedies, or, timely knowing,
The remedy then born) discover to me
What both you spur and stop.

Iach. Had I this cheek
To bathe my lips upon; this hand, whose touch
Whose every touch, would force the feeter's soul
To the oath of loyalty; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fixing it only here; should I (damm'd then)
Slaver with lips as common as the stairs
That mount the Capitol: joi'n griipes with hands
Made hard with hourly falschool (falschool as
With labour), then bo-peeping in an eye,
Base and illustrious as the smoky light
That's fed with stinking tallow, it were fit,
That all the plagues of hell should at one time
Encounter such revolt.
My lord, I fear, has forgot Britain
And himself. Not I, inclind' to this intelligence, pronounce
The beggary of his change; but 't is your graces
That, from my mutest conscience, to my tongue
Charms this report out.

Let me hear no more.

O dearest soul! your cause doth strike my

With pity, that doth make me sick. A lady
So fair, and fasten'd to an empiry
Would make the greatest king double, to be partner'd
With tomboys, hir'd with that self exhibition
Which your own coffers yield! with diseases, ventures,
That pay' with all infinites for gold
Which rottenness can lend nature! such boil'd stuff,
As well might poison poison! Be reveng'd, or she that bore you was no queen, and you
Recover from your great stock.

How should I be reveng'd? If this be true,
(As I have such a heart, that both mine ears Must not in haste abuse) if it be true,
How should I be reveng'd?

Should he make me
Live, like Diana's priest, betwixt cold sheets,
Whiles he is vaulting variable ramps.
In your despite, upon your purse? Revenge it.
I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure,
More noble than that runagate to your bed,
And will continue fast to your affection,
Still close, as sure.

What ho, Pisania!

Away!—I do condemn mine ears, that have
So long attended thee.—If thou wert honourable,
Thou wouldst have told this tale for virtue, not
For such an end thou seck'st, as base, as strange.
Thou wrong'st a gentleman, who is as far
From thy report, as thou from honour; and Solicist'st here a lady, that disdains
Thee and the devil alike.—What ho, Pisania!—
The king my father shall be made acquainted
Of thy assault: if he shall think it fit,
A saucy stranger, in his court, to mart
As in a Romish stew, and to expound
His beastly mind to us, he hath a court
He little cares for, and a daughter whom
He not respects at all.—What ho, Pisania!—

O happy Leonatus! I may say;
The credit, that thy lady hath of thee,
Deserves thy trust; and thy most perfect goodness
Her assured credit. Blessed live you long!
A lady to the worthiest sir, that ever
Country call'd his: and you his mistress, only
For the most worthiest fit. Give me your pardon.
I have spoke this, to know if your affiance

Were deeply rooted; and shall make your lord,
That which he is, new o'er: and he is one
The truest manner'd; such a holy witch,
That he enchants societies unto him:
Half all men's hearts are his.

You make amends.

He sits 'mongst men, like a descended god
He hath a kind of honour sets him off.
More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry,
Most mighty princess, that I have adventur'd
To try your taking of a false report; which hath Honour'd with confirmation your great judgment
In the election of a sir so rare,
Which, you know, cannot err. The love I bear him
Made me to fan you thus; but the gods made you,
Unlike all others, chafless. Pray, your pardon.

All's well, sir. Take my power i' the court, for yours.

My humble thanks. I had almost forgot
'Tentreat your grace but in a small request,
And yet of moment too, for it concerns
Your lord; myself, and other noble friends,
Are partners in the business.

Pray, what is 't?

Some dozen Romans, and your lord,
[The best feather of our wing] have mingled sums,
To buy a present for the emperor:
Which I, the factor for the rest, have done
In France: 'tis plate of rare device, and jewels
Of rich and exquisite form. Their value's great,
And I am something curious, being strange,
To have them in safe stowage: may it please you
To take them in protection?

Willingly.

And pawn mine honour for their safety: since
My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my bed-chamber.

They are in a trunk,
Attended by my men; I will make bold
To send them to you, only for this night,
I must aboard to-morrow.

O! no, no.

Yes, I beseech; or I shall short my word,
By lengthening my return. From Gallia
I cross'd the seas on purpose, and on promise
To see your grace.

I thank you for your pains,
But not away to-morrow.

O! I must, madam.

Therefore, I shall beseech you, if you please
To greet your lord with writing, do't to-night:
I have outstay'd my time, which is material
To the tender of our present.

I will write.

Send your trunk to me. It shall safe be kept,
And truly yielded you. You're very welcome.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Court before Cymbeline's Palace.
Enter Cloten, and Two Lords, as from the Bowling-

Clo. Was there ever man had such luck! when I missed the jack upon an up-stair, to be hit away!

Play: in f. e. 2 condemn: in f. e. 3 outstood: in f. e. 4 The rest of this direction is not in f. e had a hundred pound on't: and then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing; as if I borrowed mine oaths of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure.

1 Lord. What got he by that? You have broke his

\[Exeunt\]
2 Lord. [Aside.] If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have run all out.
Clo. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths, ha?
2 Lord. No, my lord; [Aside.] nor crop the ears of them.
Clo. Whoreson dog! — I give him satisfaction? Would he had been one of my rank!
2 Lord. [Aside.] To have smelt like a fool.
Clo. I am not vexed more at any thing in the earth.
—A pox on’t! I had rather not be so noble as I am; they dare not fight with me, because of the queen my mother. Every jack-slave hath his belly full of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that no body can match.
2 Lord. [Aside.] You are cock and capon too; and you crow, cock, with your comb on.
Clo. Sayest thou?
2 Lord. It is not fit your lordship should undertake every companion that you give offence to.
Clo. No, I know that: but it is I should commit offence to my inferiors.
2 Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.
Clo. Why, so I say.
1 Lord. Did you hear of a stranger, that’s come to court to-night?
Clo. A stranger! and I not know on’t?
2 Lord. [Aside.] He’s a strange fellow himself, and knows it not.
1 Lord. There’s an Italian come; and ’tis thought, one of Leonatus’s friends.
Clo. Leonatus! a banished rascal; and he’s another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger?
1 Lord. One of your lordship’s pages.
Clo. Is it fit I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in it?
1 Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord.
Clo. Not easily, I think.
2 Lord. [Aside.] You are a fool granted; therefore, your issues being foolish do not derogate.
Clo. Come, I’ll go see this Italian. What have I lost to-day at bowls, I’ll win to-night of him. Come, go.
2 Lord. I’ll attend your lordship.
[Exeunt Cloten and First Lord.

That such a crafty devil as is his mother Should yield the world this ass! a woman, that Bears all down with her brain; and this her son Cannot take two from twenty for his heart, And leave eighteen. Alas, poor princess! Thou d’ine Imogen, what thou endurest, Betwixt a father by thy step-dame govern’d; A mother hourly coining plots; a wooer, More hateful than the foul expulsion is Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act Of the divorce he’d make! The heavens fold him The walls of thy dear honour; keep unshak’d That temple, thy fair mind; that thou may’st stand I’ en joy thy banish’d lord, and this great land! [Exit.

SCENE II. — A Bed-Chamber: in one part of it, a great Trunk.

Imogen reading in her Bed; Helen attending.

Ino. Who’s there? my woman, Helen?
Lady. Please you, madam.
Ino. What hour is it?
Lady. Almost midnight, madam.
Ino. I have read three hours, then. Mine eyes are weak;
Fold down the leaf where I have left: to bed.

1 The covering of floors. 2 Not in f. e. 4 base: in f. e

Take not away the taper, leave it burning; And if thou canst awake by four o’ the clock, I pr’ythee, call me. Sleep hath seiz’d me wholly [Exit Helen.

To your protection I commend me, gods! From fairies, and the tempters of the night, Guard me, beseech ye!

Enter Iachimo from the Trunk.

Iach. The crickets sing, and man’s o’er-labour’d sense Repairs itself by rest: our Tarquin thus Did softly press the rushes, ’ere he waken’d The chaste Titania. Cytherea, How bravely thou becom’st thy bed! fresh lily, And whiter than the sheets! That’s a might touch! But kiss; one kiss! — Rubies unparagon’d, [Kissing Her How dearly they do’t. — ’Tis her breathing that Perfumes the chamber thus: the flame o’ the taper Bows toward her, and would under-peep her lids, To see the enclosed lights, now canopied Under the windows; white and azure, lac’d With blue of heaven’s own tint.—But my design, To note the chamber: I will write all down:

[ Takes out his tables.

Such, and such. pictures:—there the window:—such Th’ adoration of her bed:—the arras, figures, Why, such, and such:—and the contents o’ the story.— Ah! but some natural notes about her body, Above ten thousand manner moveables Would testify, t’ enrich mine inventory: O sleep, thou ape of death, lic dull upon her, And be her sense but as a monument, Thus in a chapel lying!—Come off, come off:—

[ Taking off her Bracelet.

As slippery, as the Gordian knot was hard,— ’T is mine; and this will witness outwardly, As strongly as the conscience doth within, To the madding of her lord.—On her left breast A mole cinque-spot’d, like the crimson drops I’ the bottom of a cowslip: here’s a voucher. Stronger than ever law could make: this secret Will force him think I have pick’d the lock, and ta’en The treasure of her honour. No more.—To what end? Why should I write this down, that’s riveted, Srew’d to my memory? She hath been reading late The tale of Tereus; here the leaf’s turn’d down, Where Philiomel gave up.—I have enough: To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it. Swift, swift, you dragons of the night, that dawning May dare the raven’s eye: I lodge in fear; Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here.

[Clock strikes.

One, two, three,—time, time! [Exit into the Trunk.

SCENE III. — An Ante-Chamber adjoining Imogen’s Apartment.

Enter Cloten and Lords.

1 Lord. Your lordship is the most patient man a loss, the most coldest that ever turned up ace.
Clo. It would make any man cold to lose.
1 Lord. But not every man patient, after the noble temper of your lordship. You are most hot, and furious, when you win.

Clo. Winning will put any man into courage. If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough. It’s almost morning, is’t not?

1 Lord. Day, my lord.

Clo. I would this music would come. I am advised to give her music o’ mornings; they say, it will pene-
Enter Musicians.

Come on; tune: if you can penetrate her with your fingering, so; we'll try with tongue too: if none will do, let her remain; but I'll never give o'er. First, a very excellent good conceited thing; after, a wonderfull sweet air, with admirable rich words to it,—and then let her consider.

Song.

Hark! hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings,
And Phoebus' gins arise,
His steeds to water at those springs
On chalied flowers that lies;
And winking Mary-buds begin
To ope their golden eyes;
With every thing that pretty is,
My lady sweet, arise;
Arise, arise!

So, get you gone. If this penetrate, I will consider your music the better: if it do not, it is a fault in her ears, which horse-hairs, and eavels' guts, nor the voice of an unpaved cunning to boot, can never amend.

[Exeunt Musicians.

Enter Cymbeline and Queen.

2 Lord. Here comes the king.

Clo. I am glad I was up so late, for that's the reason I was up so early: he cannot choose but take this service I have done, fatherly.—Good morrow to your majesty, and to my gracious mother.

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern daughter? Will she not forth?

Clo. I have assailed her with music, but she vouchsafes no notice.

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new;
She hath not yet forgot him: some more time
Must wear the print of his remembrance out,
And then she's yours.

Queen. You are most bound to the king;
Who lets go by no advantages, that may Prefer you to his daughter. Frame yourself
To orderly solicits, and be friended
With aptness of the season: make denials
Increase your services: so seem, as if You were inspir'd to do those duties which
You tender to her; that you in all obey her,
Save when command to your dismission tends,
And therein you are senseless.

Clo. Senseless? not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome:
The one is Caius Lucius.

Cym. A worthy fellow, albeit he comes on angry purpose now;
But that's no fault of his: we must receive him
According to the honour of his sender;
And towards himself, his goodness foreshow on us,
We must extend our notice.—Our dear son,
When you have given good morning to your mistress,
Attend the queen, and us: we shall have need
To employ you towards this Roman. —Come, our queen.

[Exeunt Cym., Queen, Lords, and Mess.

Clo. If she be up, I'll speak with her; if not,
Let her lie still, and dream.—By your leave, ho!—
I know her women are about her: what [Calls.

If I do line one of their hands? 'Tis gold
Which buys admittance; oft it doth; and makes Diana's rangers, false themselves, yield up
Their deer to the stand o' the stealer; and 't is gold
Which makes the true man kill'd, and saves the thief;
Nay; sometime hangs both thief and true man: what

Can it not do, and undo? I will make
One of her women lawyer to me; for
I yet not understand the case myself.

By your leave.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. Who's there, that knocks?

Clo. A gentleman.

Lady. No more:

Clo. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.

Lady. That's more
Than some, whose tailors are as dear as yours,
Can justly boast of. What's your lordship's pleasure?

Clo. Your lady's person: is she ready?

Lady. Ay,
To keep her chamber.

Clo. There's gold for you: sell me your good report.

Lady. How! my good name? or to report of you
What I shall think is good?—the princess—

Enter Imogen.

Clo. Good morrow, fairest: sister, your sweet hand.

Imo. Good morrow, sir. You lay out too much pains
For purchasing but trouble: the thanks I give,
Is telling you that I am poor of thanks,
And scarce can spare them.

Clo. Still, I swear, I love you.

Imo. If you but said so, 'twere as deep with me:
If you swear still, your recompense is still
That I regard it not.

Clo. This is no answer.

Imo. But that you shall not say I yield, being silent,
I would not speak. I pray you, spare me: faith,
I shall unfold equal discourse
To your best kindness. One of your great knowing
Should learn, being taught, forbearance.

Clo. To leave you in your madness? 'twere my sin:
I will not.

Imo. Fools are not mad folks.

Clo. Do you call me fool?

Imo. As I am mad, I do:
If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad;
That eases us both. I am much sorry, sir,
You put me to forget a lady's manners,
By being so verbal: and learn now, for all,
That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce,
By the very truth of it, I care not for you;
And am so near the lack of charity,
(To accuse myself) I hate you; which I had rather
You felt than make 't my boast.

Clo. .

Imo. You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For
The contract you pretend with that base wretch,
(One, bred of alms, and foster'd with cold dishes,
With scraps o' the court) it is no contract, none:
And though it be allow'd in manner parties,
(Yet who than he more mean?) to knit their souls
(On whom there is no more dependency,
But brats and beggary) in self-figur'd knot,
Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by
The consequence o' the crown, and must not foil
The precious note of it with a base slave,
A hilding for a livery, a squire's cloth,
A panther, not so eminent.

Imo. Profane fellow!

Virtue, which I should have given as my dowry,
Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more
But what thou art besides, thou wert too base
To be his groom: thou wert dignified enough,
Even to the point of envy, if 'twere made
Comparative for your virtues, to be stily'd
The under hangman of his kingdom, and hated

SCENE IV.

CYMBELINE.

For being preferr'd so well.
Clo.  The south-fog rot him!
Imo. He never can meet more mischance, than come
To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest garment,
That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer
In my respect than all the hairs above thee,
Were they all made such men.—How now, Pisani?
Enter Pisani.
Clo. His garment?  Now, the devil—
Imo. To Dorothy my woman lie thee presently.
Clo. His garment?
Imo. I am spirited with a fool;
Frighted, and anger'd worse.—Go, bid my woman
Search for a jewel, that too casually
Hath left mine arm: it was thy master's; 'shew me,
If I would lose it for a revenue
Of any king's in Europe. I do think,
I saw't this morning: confident I am,
Last night 't was on mine arm; I kiss'd it.
I hope, it be not gone to tell my lord
That I kiss ought but he.
Pis. 'T will not be lost.
Imo. I hope so: go, and search.
[Exit Pis.
Clo. You have abus'd me.—
His meanest garment?
Imo. Ay; I said so, sir,
If you will make 't an action, call witness to 't.
Clo. I will inform your father.
Imo. Your mother too:
She's my good lady; and will conceive, I hope,
But the worst of me. So I leave you, sir,
To the worst of discontent.
[Exit.
Clo. I'll be reveng'd.—
His meanest garment?—Well.
[Exit.

Enter Posthumus and Philario.
Post. Fear it not, sir: I would, I were so sure
To win the king, as I am bold, her honour
Will remain hers.
Phi. What means do you make to him?
Post. Not any; but abide the change of time;
Quake in the present winter's state, and wish
That warmer days would come. In these fear'd hopes,
I barely gratify your love: they failing,
I must die much your debtor.
Phi. Your very goodness, and your company,
O'erpa's all I can do. By this, your king
Hath heard of great Augustus: Caius Lucins
Will do 's commission throughly; and, I think,
He'll grant the tribute, send the arrayeres,
Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their grief.
Post. I do believe,
(Statist though I am none, nor like to be)
That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
The legion, now in Gallia, sooner land'd
In our not-fearing Britain, than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen
Are men more order'd, than when Julius Caesar
Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage
Worthy his frowning at: their discipline
[New mingled with their courage] will make known
To their approvers, they are people, such
That mend upon the world.
Enter Iachimo.
Phi. See! Iachimo?
Post. The swiftest harts have posted you by land,
And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,
To make your vessel nimble.
Phi. Welcome, sir.
Post. I hope, the briefness of your answer made
The speediness of your return.
Iach. Your lady
Is one of the fairest that I have look'd upon.
Post. And, therewithal, the best; or let her beauty
Look through a casement to allure false hearts,
And be false with them.
Iach. Here are letters for you
Post. Their tenor good, I trust.
Iach. 'T is very like
Phi. Was Caius Lucins in the Britain court,
When you were there?
Iach. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.
Post. All is well yet,—
Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is 't not Too dull for your good wearing?
Iach. If I had lost,
I should have lost the worth of it in gold.
I'll make a journey twice as far, to enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness, which
Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.
Post. The stone's too hard to come by.
Iach. Not a whit.
Your lady being so easy.
Post. Make not, sir,
Your loss your sport: I hope, you know that we Must not continue friends.
Iach. Good sir, we must,
If you keep covenant. Had I not brought
The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant
We were to question farther; but I now
Profess myself the winner of her honour,
Together with your ring; and not the wronger
Of her, or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills.
Post. If you can make 't apparent
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand
And ring are yours: if not, the foul opinion
You had of her pure honour, gains, or losses,
Your sword, or mine; or masterless leaves both
To whom shall find them.
Iach. Sir, my circumstances,
Being so near the truth, as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe: whose strength
I will confirm with oath; which, I doubt not,
You 'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find
You need it not.
Post. Proceed.
Iach. First, her bedchamber,
(Where, I confess, I slept not, but, profess
Had that was well worth watching) it was hang'd
With tapestry of silk and silver; the story,
Froud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for
The press of boats, or pride: a piece of work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship, and value; which, I wonder'd,
Could be so rarely and exactly wrought,
Since the true life on 't was.
Post. This is most true
And this you might have heard of here, by me,
Or by some other.
Iach. More particulars
Must justify my knowledge.
Post. So they must,
Or do your honour injury.

Iach. The chimney
Is south the chamber; and the chimney-piece, Chaste Dian, bathing; never saw I figures So likely to report themselves: the cutter Was as another nature, dumb; outwent her, Motion and breath left out.

Post. This is a thing, Which you might from relation likewise reap, Being, as it is, much spoke of.

Iach. The roof o' the chamber With golden cherubins is fretted: her andirons (I had forgot them) were two winged\(^i\) Cupids Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely Depending on their brands.

Post. This is her honour.— Let it be granted, you have seen all this, (and praise Be given to your remembrance) the description Of what is in her chamber nothing saves The wager you have laid.

Iach. Then, if you can, Be pale: I beg but leave to air this jewel; see!—

[Producing the Bracelet. And now 'tis up again: it must be married To that your diamond; I'll keep them.

Post. Once more let me behold it. Is it that Which I left with her?

Iach. Sir, (I thank her) that:
She stripp'd it from her arm; I see her yet;
Her pretty action did outsell her quit, And yet enrich'd it too. She gave it me, And said, she priz'd it once.

Post. May be, she pluck'd it off,
To send it me.

Iach. She writes so to you, doth she?

Post. O! no, no, no; 'tis true. Here, take this too;

[Giving the Ring.

It is a basilisk unto mine eye, Kills me to look on't.—Let there be no honour, Where there is beauty, truth, where semblance; love, Where there's another man: the vows of women Of no more bondage be, to where they are made. Than they are to their virtues, which is nothing. — 0, above measure false!

Phi. Have patience, sir, And take your ring again; it is not yet won: It may be probable she lost it; or, Who knows, if one of her women, being corrupt, Hath stolen it from her?

Post. Very true:

And so, I hope, he came by't.—Back my ring— tender to me some corporal sign about her, More evident than this, for this was stolen.

Iach. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.

Post. Hawk you, he swears; by Jupiter he swears. 'T is true:—may, keep the ring—'t is true. I am sure, She would not lose it: her attendants are All sworn, and honourable:—they indued to steal it! And by a stranger!—No, he hath enjoy'd her: The cognition of her incontinency Is this:—she hath bought the name of whose thus dearly.—

There, take thy hire; and all the fiends of hell Divide themselves between you!

Phi. Sir, be patient.

This is not strong enough to be believ'd Of one persuad'd well of.

Post. Never talk on't; She hath been colty by him.

Iach. If you seek For farther satisfying, under her breast (Worthy the\(^i\) pressing). has a mole, right proud Of that most delicate lodging: by my life, I kiss'd it, and it gave me present hunger To feed again, though full. You do remember This stain upon her?

Post. Ay, and it doth confirm Another stain, as big as hell can hold, Were there no more but it.

Iach. Will you hear more?

Post. Spare your arithmetic: never count the turns Once, and a million!

Iach. I'll be sworn, — No swearing If you will swear you have not done 't, you lie; And I will kill thee, if thou dost deny Thou 'st made me cuckold.

Iach. I will deny nothing.

Post. O, that I had her here, to hear her limb-meal! I will go there, and do't; 'tis the court; before Her father.—I'll do something.

[Exit Phi. Quite besides The government of patience!—You have won: Let's follow him, and pervert the present wrath He hath against himself.

Iach. With all my heart. [Exeunt

SCENE V.—The Same. Another Room in the Same.

Enter Posthumus.

Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women Must be half-workers? We are all bards; And that most venerable man, which I Did call my father, was I know not where When I was stamped; some coiner with his tools Made me a counterfeit: yet my mother seemed The Dian of that time; so doth my wife The nonpareil of this.—O vengeance, vengeance! Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd, And pray'd me oft forbearance; did it with A pittance so rosy, the sweet view on't 1 Might well have warm'd old Saturn; that I thought her As chaste as unsum'd snow:—O, all the devils!— This yellow lacchino, in an hour,—was't not?— Or less.—at first; perchance he spoke not, but, Like a full-acorn'd boar, a foaming\(^i\) one, Cry'd "oh!" and mounted: found no opposition But what he look'd for should oppose, and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out The woman's part in me! For there's no motion That tends to vice in man: but I affirm It is the woman's part: be it lying, note it, The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving, hers; Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers; revenges, hers; Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain, Nice longings, slander, mutability, All faults that may be nam'd; nay, that hell knows, Why, hers, in part, or all: but, rather, all; For even to vice They are not constant, but are changing still One vice, but of a minute old, for one Not half so old as that. I'll write against them, Detect them, curse them.—Yet 't is greater skill, In a true hate, to pray they have their will: The very devils cannot plague them better. [Exit

ACT III.

Our ancestor was that Mulmutius, which
Ordain'd our laws; whose use the sword of Caesar
Hath too much mangled: whose repair, and franchise
Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed, Though Rome be therefore angry. Mulmutius made our laws,
Who was the first of Britain, which did put
His brows within a golden crown, and call'd
Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline,
That I am to pronounce Augustus Caesar (Cesar, that hath more kings his servants, than Thyself domestic officers) thine enemy.
Receive it from me, then.—War, and confusion,
In Caesar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee: look
For fury not to be resisted.—Thus defied,
I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius.

Luc. Thy Caesar knighted me; my youth I spent Much under him; of him I gather'd honour;
Which he, to seek of me again, perforce,
Behoves me keep at utterance.6 I am perfect,
That the Pannonians and Dalmatians, for
Their liberties, are now in arms; a precedent
Which not to read would show the Britons cold.

So Caesar shall not find them.

Let proof speak.

Clo. His majesty bids you welcome. Make pastime with us a day or two, or longer: if you seek us after; wards in other terms, you shall find us in our saltwater girdle: if you beat us out of it, it is yours: If you fall in the adventure, our crows shall fare better for you; and there's an end.

Luc. So, sir.

Cym. I know your master's pleasure, and he mine:
All the remain is, welcome

SCENE II.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter Pisario.

Pis. How! of adultery? Wherefore write you not
What monsters here accuse?—Leonatus!
O, master! what a strange infection
Is fallen into thy ear!—What false Italian
(As poisonous tongue'd, as handed) hath prevail'd
On thy too ready hearing?—Disloyal? No:
She's punish'd for her truth; and undergoes,
More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults
As would take in some virtue.—O, my master!
Thy mind to her is now as low, as were
Thy fortunes.—How! that I should murder her?
Upon the love, and truth, and vows, which I
Have made to thy command?—1, her?—her blood?
If it be so to do good service, never Let me be counted serviceable. How lock I,
That I should seem to lack humanity,
So much as this fact comes to? "Do." The letter
[Reading
That I have sent her, by her own command
Shall give thee opportunity."—O, damn'd paper!
Black as the ink that's on thee. Senseless bawble,
Art thou a fooleary for this act, and lookst
So virgin-like without? Lo! here she comes.

Enter Imogen.

I am ignorant in what I am commanded.
Imo. How now, Pisario!
Pis. Madam, here is a letter from my lord.
Imo. Who? thy lord? that is my lord: Leonatus.
O! learn'd indeed were that astronomer,
That knew the stars, as I his characters;
He'd lay the future open.—You good gods,
Let what is here contain'd relish of love,
Of my lord's health, of his content,—yet not,
That we two are asunder,—let that grieve him:
Some griefs are medicinable; that is one of them.
For it doth physic love;—of his content,
All but in that!—Good wax, thy leave.—Bless'd be,
You bees, that make these locks of counsel! Lovers,
And men in dangerous bonds, pray not alight:
Though forfeiters you cast in prison, yet
You clap young Cupid's tables.—Good news, gods!
[Reads.

"Justice, and your father's wrath, should he take me in his dominion, could not be so cruel to me, as you, O the dearest of creatures, would even renew me with your eyes. Take notice, that I am in Cambria, at Milford-Haven: what your own sake will out of this advise you follow. So, he wishes you all happiness, that remains loyal to his vow, and your, out living in love,"

"Leonatus Posthumus."

O, for a horse with wings!—Hear'st thou, Pisario?
He is at Milford-Haven: read, and tell me
How far't it isither. If one of mean affairs
May plot it in a week, why may not I
Glide thisher in a day?—Then, true Pisario,
(Who long'st, like me, to see thy lord; who long'st,—
O, let me hate!—but not like me;—yet long'st,—
But in a fainter kind!—! not like me.
For mine's beyond beyond) say, and speak thick, (Love's counsellor should fill the holes of hearing,
To the soothing of the sense) how far it is
To this same blessed Milford: and, by the way,
Tell me how Wales was made so happy, as
T' infer such a haven: but, first of all,
How we may steal from hence; and, for the gap
That we shall make in time, from our hence-going,
And our return, to excuse:—but first, how get hence.
Why should excuse be born, or e'er begot?
We'll talk of that hereafter. Pr'ythee, speak,
How many score of miles may we well ride
'Twixt hour and hour?

Pis. One score 'twixt sun and sun,
Madam, 's enough for you, and too much, too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to 's execution, man,
Could never go so slow: I have heard of riding wagers.
Where horses have been nimbler than the sands
That run i' the clock by half.—But this is foolery.
Go, bid my woman feign a sickness; say
She'll home to her father; and provide me, presently,
A riding suit, no costlier than would fit
A franklin's housewife.

Pis. Madam, you're best consider.

Imo. I see before me, man: nor here, nor here,
Nor what ensues, but have a fog in them,
That I cannot look through. Away, I pr'ythee:
Do as I bid thee. There's no more to say;
Accessible is none but Milford way. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Wales. A mountainous Country,
With a Cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. A goodly day not to keep house, with such Whose roof's as low as ours. Stoop, boys: this gate
Instructs you how I adore the heavens, and bows you
To a morning's holy office: the gates of monarchs
Are arch'd so high, that giants may jet through
And keep their impious turbands on, without
Good-morrow to the sun.—Hail, thou fair heaven!
We house the rock, yet use thee not so hardly
As prouder livers do.

Gui. Hail, heaven!

Arv. Hail, heaven!

Bel. Now, for our mountain sport. Up to yond' hill:
Your legs are young; I'll tread these flats. Consider,
When you above perceive me like a crow,
That it is place which lessons and sets off;
And you may then revolve what tales I have told you,
Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war:
That service is not service, so being done,
But being so allow'd: to apprehend thus,
Draws us a profit from all things we see;
And often, to our comfort, shall we find
The sharded beetle in a safer hold
Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O! this life
Is nobler, than attending for a cheek;
Richer, than doing nothing for a bob,
Pronder, than rustling in unpaid for silk:
Such gain the cap of him, that makes him fine,
Yet keeps his book uncurst: no life to ours.
Gui. Out of your proof you speak: we, poor un-

Pis. Have never wing'd from view o' the nest; nor know
What air's from home. Haply this life is best,
If quiet life be best; sweeter to you,
That have a sharper known, well corresponding
With your stiff age; but unto us it is
A cell of ignorance, travelling abed,
A prison for? a debtor, that not dares
To stride a limit.

Arv. What should we speak of,
When we are old as you? when we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December, how
In this our pinching cave shall we discourse
The freezing hours away?—We have seen nothing.
We are beastly: subtle as the fox for prey;
Like warlike the wolf for what we eat:
Our valour is to chase what flies; our cage
We make a quire, as doth the prison'd bird,
And sing our bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak!
Did you but know the city's usuries,
And felt them knowingly: the art of the court,
As hard to leave, as keep; whose top to climb
Is certain falling, or so slippery, that
The fear's as bad as falling: the toil of the war,
A pain that only seems to seek out danger
I' the name of fame, and honour; which dies i th'search,
And hath as oft a slanderous epithaph,
As record of fair act; nay, many times,
Doth ill deserve by doing well: what's worse,
Must court'sy at the censure.—O, boys! this story
The world may read in me: my body's mark'd
With Roman swords, and my report was once
First with the best of note. Cymbeline lov'd me:
And when a soldier was the theme, my name
Was not far off: then, was I as a tree
Whose boughs did bend with fruit; but, in one night.
A storm, or robbery, call it what you will,
Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my leaves,
And left me bare to weather.

Gui. Uncertain favour!
Bel. My fault being nothing (as I have told you off)
But that two villains, whose false cathes prevaid
Before my perfect honour, swore to Cymbeline,
I was confederate with the Romans: so,
Follow'd my banishment; and this twenty years
This rock, and these desomes, have been my world;
Where I have liv'd at honest freedom, paid
More pious debts to heaven, than in all
The fore-end of my time.—But, up to the mountains!
This is not hunter's language. He that strikes
The venison first shall be the lord o' the feast;
To him the other two shall minister,
And we will fear no poison, which attends
In place of greater state. I'll meet you in the valleys.

[Exeunt Gui. and Akrv.

How hard it is, to hide the sparks of fortune!
These boys know little, they are sons to the king;
Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.
They think, they are mine; and, though train'd up
Thus meanly
I' the cave wherein they bow,1 their thoughts do hit
The roofs of palaces; and nature prompts them,
In simple and low things, to prince it, much
Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore,
The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, whom
The king his father call'd Guiderius,—Jove!
When on my three-foot stool I sit, and tell
The warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly out
Into my story: say,—'Thus mine enemy fell;
And thus I set my foot on his neck;2 even then
The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats,
Strains his young nerves, and puts himself in posture
That acts my words. The younger brother, Cadwal,3
Once Arviragus: in as like a vigour,4
Strikes life into my speech, and shows much more
His own conceiving. Hark! the game is rous'd.

O Cymbeline! heaven, and my conscience, knows,
Thou didst unjustly banish me; whereon
At three, and two years-old, I stole these babes,
Thinking to bar thee of succession, as
Thou retrievest of my lands. Euriphile,
Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their mother,
And every day do honour to her grave:
Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan call'd,
They take for natural father. [Horn.]

—The game is up.

SCENE IV.—Near Milford-Haven.

Enter Pisiano and Imogen.

Imo. Thou told'st me, when we came from horse,
Thou place
Was near at hand.—Ne'er long'd my mother so
To see the finest, as I have now. Pisiano! Man!
Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind
That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh
From th' inward of thee? One, but painted thus,
Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond self-explication: put thyself
Into a haviour of less fear, ere wildness
Vanquish thy staider senses. What's the matter?
Why tender'st thou that paper to me, with

A look untertend? If it be summer news,
Smile to 't before; if winterly, thou need'st
But keep that countenance still.—My husband's hand!
That drug-darn'd I' the world hath out-craftied him,
And he's at some hard point.—Speak, man: thy tongue

May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.

Pis. Please you, read; [Giving it]
And you shall find me, wrecked man, a thing
The most disdain'd of fortune.

Imo. [Reads.] "Thy mistress, Pisiano, hast played
The strumpet in my bed: the testimonies whereof I' bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surprises, but from proof as strong as my grief, and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part, thou, Pisiano, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life;
I shall give thee opportunity at Milford-Haven; she hath my letter for the purpose: where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pander to her dishonour, and equally to me disloyal."

Pis. What shall I need to draw my sword? the paper
Hath cut her throat already. —No; 'tis slander,
Whose edge is sharper than the sword: whose tongue
Outvomens all the worms of Nile: whose breath
Rides on the posting winds, and doth belie
All corners of the world: kings, queens, and states,4
Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave
This viperous slander enters.—What cheer, madam?

Imo. False to his bed! What is it to be false?
To lie in watch there, and to think on him?
To weep 'twixt clock and clock? if sleep charge nature.
To break it with a fearful dream of him.
And cry myself awake? that's false to his bed,
Is it?

Pis. Alas, good lady!

Imo. I false? Thy conscience witness.—Iachino,
Thou dost accuse him of incontinency;
Thou then look'dst like a villain; now, methinks,
Thy favour's good enough. Some say of Italy,
Who smother's her with painting,5 hath betray'd him
Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion;
And, for I am richer than to hang by the walls,
I must be ripp'd:—to pieces with me!—O!
Men's vows are women's traitors. All good seeming,
By thy revolts, O husband! shall be thought
Put on for villainy; not born where 't grows,
But worn a bait for ladies.

Pis. Good madam, hear me.

Imo. True honest men being heard, like false Æneas
Were in his time thought false; and Æneas's weeping
Did scandal many a holy tear; took pity
From most true wretchedness: so thou, Posthumus,
Wilt lay the heaven on all proper men:
Goody, and gallant, shall be false, and perjur'd;
From thy great fail.—Come, fellow, be thou honest:
Do thou thy master's bidding. When thou seest him,
A little witness my obedience: look! I
Draw the sword myself: take it; and hit
The innocent mansion of my love, my heart.
Fear not: 'tis empty of all things, but grief:
Thy master is not there, who was, indeed,
The riches of it. Do his bidding: strike.
Thou may'st be valiant in a better cause,
But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument!

Thou shalt not damn my hand.
Imo. Why, I must die;
And if I do not by thy hand, then art
No servant of thy master's. Against self-slaughter
There is a prohibition so divine.
That craves my weak hand. Come, here's my heart:
Something 's afoot!—Soft, soft! we 'll no defence;
Obedient as the seaboard.—What is here?
The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus,
All turn'd to heresy? Away, away,
Corrupters of my faith! you shall no more
Be stomachers to my heart. Thus may poor fools
Believe false teachers: though those that are betray'd
Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
Stands in worse ease of woe.
And thou, Posthumus, that didst set up
My disobedience 'gainst the king my father,
And make me put into contempt the suits
Of princely followers, shalt hereafter find
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of rareness: and I grieve myself,
To think, when thou shalt be disdign'd by her
That now thou art on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me.—P'r'lythee, despatch:
The lamb entreats the butcher: where's thy knife?
Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding,
When I desire it too.
Pis. O gracious lady!
Since I receiv'd command to do this business,
I have not slept one wink.
Imo. Do 't, and to bed, then.
Pis. I 'll crack mine eye-balls first.
Imo. And wherefore, then,
Didst undertake it? Why hast thou absconded
So many miles with a pretence? this place?
Mine action, and thine own? our horses' labour?
The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court,
For my being absent; whereto I never Purpose return? Why hast thou gone so far,
To be unbent, when thou hast ta'en thy stand,
Th' elected doer before thee?
Pis. But to win time,
To lose so bad employment; in which I have consider'd of a course. Good lady,
Hear me with patience.
Imo. Talk thy tongue weary; speak:
I have heard I am a strumpet, and mine car,
Therein false struck, can take no greater wound,
Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.
Pis. Then, madam,
I thought you would not back again.
Imo. Most like,
Bringing me here to kill me.
Pis. Not so, neither:
But if I were as wise as honest, then
My purpose would prove well. It cannot be,
But that my master is absconded:
Some villain, ay, and singular in his art,
Hath done you both this cursed injury.
Imo. Some Roman courtezan.
Pis. No, on my life.
I 'll give but notice you are dead, and send him
Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis commanded
I should do so: you shall be mis'd at court,
And that will well confirm it.
Imo. Why, good fellow,
What shall I do the while? where bide? how live?
Or in my life what comfort, when I am
Dead to my husband?
Pis. If you 'll back to the court—
Imo. No court, no father; nor no more ado
With that harsh, noble, simple, empty nothing,
That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.
Pis. If not at court,
Then not in Britain must you bide.
Imo. Where then?
Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day, night,
Are they not but in Britain? If the world's volume
Our Britain seems as of it, but not in it;
In a great pool, a swan's nest: p'r'lythee, think
There's livers out of Britain.
Pis. I am most glad
You think of other place. Th' ambassador,
Lecius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To-morrow: now, if you could wear a mind
Dark as your fortune is, and but disguise
That, which, t appear itself, must not yet be,
But by self-danger, you should tread a course
Privy, yet full of view: yea, haply, near
The residence of Posthumus; so nigh, at least,
That though his actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourly to your ear,
As truly as he moves.
Imo. O, for such means!
Though peril to my modesty, not death on 't,
I would adventure.
Pis. Well then, here 's the point
You must forget to be a woman; change
Command into obedience; fear, and niceness,
(The handmaid of all women, or more truly,
Woman it pretty self) into a waggish carriage:
Ready in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and
As quarrelous as the weasel: nay, you must
Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek,
Exposing it (but, O, the harder heart!)
Alack, no remedy! to the greedy tooth
Of common-kissing Titian; and forget
Your laboursome and dainty trims, wherein
You made great Juno angry.
Imo. Nay, be brief:
I see into thy end, and am almost
A man already.
Pis. First, make yourself but like one.
Forethinking this, I have already fit
('Tis in my cloak-bag) doublet, hat, hose, all
That answer to them: would you, in their serving,
And with what imitation you can borrow
From youth of such a season, fore noble Lucius
Present yourself, desire his service, tell him
Wherein you are happy, which you will make him know
If that his head have ear in music) doubtless,
With joy he will embrace you; for he's honourable,
And, doubling that, most holy. You means abroad,
You have me, rich; and I will never fail
Beginning nor supplication.
Imo. Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. P'r'lythee, away:
There's more to be consider'd, but we'll even
All that good time will give us. This attempt
I'm soldier to, and will abide it with
A prince's courage. Away, I pr'ythee.
Pis. Well, madam, we must take a short farewell,
Lest, being miss'd, I be suspected of
Your carriage from the court. My noble mistress,
Here is a box; I had it from the queen:
What's in't is precious; if you are sick at sea,
SCENE V. A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Closthenes, Lucius, and Lords.

Cym. Thus far; and so farewell.

Luc. Thanks, royal sir. My emperor hath wrote, I must from hence; And am right sorry that I must report ye My master's enemy.

Cym. Our subjects, sir, Will not endure his yoke: and for ourself, To show less sovereignty than they, must needs Appear unkinglike.

Luc. So, sir, I desire of you A conduct over land to Milford-Haven.— Madam, all joy befall your grace, and you! Cym. My lords, you are appointed for that office The due of honour in no point omit. So, farewell, noble Lucius.

Luc. Your hand, my lord. Clo. Receive it friendly; but from this time forth I wear it as your enemy.

Luc. Sir, the event Is yet to name the winner. Fare you well. Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my lords, Till he have cross'd the Severn.—Happiness! [Exeunt Lucius and Lords.

Queen. He goes hence frowning; but it honours us, That we have given him cause.

Clo. 'Tis all the better: Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it.

Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor How it goes here. It fits us, therefore, ripely, Our chariots and our horsemen be in readiness: The powers that he already hath in Gallia Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves His war for Britain.

Queen. 'Tis not sleepy business, But must be look'd to speedily, and strongly.

Cym. Our expectation that it would be thus Hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen, Where is our daughter? She hath not appear'd Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd The duty of the day. She looks us like A thing more made of malice, than of duty: We have noted it. — Call her before us, for We have been too slight in suffered. [Exit an Attendant.

Queen. Royal sir, Since the exile of Posthumus, most rotird Hath her life been; the cure whereof, my lord, 'Tis time must do. Beseech your majesty, Forbear sharp speeches to her: she's a lady So tender of rebuke, that words are strokes, And strokes death to her.

Re-enter an Attendant.

Cym. Where is she, sir? How Can her contempt be answer'd?

Que. Please you, sir, Her chambers are all look'd; and there's no answer That will be given to the loudest noise make. Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit her, She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close; Whereof constrain'd by her infirmity, She should that duty leave unpaid to you, Which daily she was bound to proffer: this

She wish'd me to make known, but our great court Made me to blame in memory.

Cym. Her doors lock'd?

Queen. Not seen of late? Graut, heavens, that which I Fear prove false! [Exit.

Cym. Son, I say, follow the king. Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio her old servant, I have not seen these two days.

Queen. Go, look after.— [Exit Closthenes

Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus. He hath a drag of mine: I pray, his absence Proceed by swallowing that, for he believes It is a thing most precious. But for her, Where is she gone? Haply, desiring hath seiz'd her; Or, wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown To her desir'd Posthumus. Gone she is To death, or to dishonour; and my end Can make good use of either: she being down, I have the placing of the British crown. [Re-enter Closthenes.

How now, my son! Clo. 'Tis certain, she is fled. Go in, and cheer the king: he rages; none Dare come about him.

Queen. All the better: may This night forestal him of the coming day! [Exit Queen

Clo. I love, and hate her, for she's fair and royal: And that she hath all courtly parts, more exquisite Than lady, ladies, woman: from every one The best she hath, and she, of all compounded, Outshines them all. I love her therefore; but, Disdaining me, and throwing favours on The low Posthumus, slander's her judgment, That what else is is chok'd; and in that point I will conclude to hate her: nay, indeed, To be reveng'd upon her: for, when fools shall—

Enter Pisanio.

Who is here? — What! are you packing, sirrah? Come hither. Ah, you precious pandar! Villain, Where is thy lady? In a word, or else Thou art straightway with the fiends.

Pis. O, good my lord Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter— I will not ask again. Close villain, I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus? From whose so many weights of baseness cannot A dram of worth be drawn.

Pis. Alas, my lord! How can she be with him? When was she miss'd? He is in Rome.

Clo. Where is she, sir? Come nearer; No farther halting: satisfy me home What is become of her?

Pis. O, my all-worthy lord!

Clo. All-worthy villain! Discover where thy mistress is, at once, At the next word. — No more of worthy lord,— Speak, or thy silence on the instant is Thy condemnation and thy death.

Pis. Then sir, This paper is the history of my knowledge Touching her flight; [Presenting a Letter. Clo. Let's see 't. — I will pursue her Even to Augustus' throne.

Pis. [Aside.] Or this, or perish. She's far enough; and what he learns by this May prove his travel, not her danger.

Clo. Humph!
Pis. [Aside.] I’ll write to my lord she’s dead. O Imogen,
Safe may’st thou wander, safe return again!
Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?
Pis. Sir, as I think.
Clo. It is Posthumus’ hand; I know ’t. Sirrah, if thou wouldest not be a villain, but do me true service, undergo those employments, wherein I should have cause to follow thee, with a serious industry, — that is, what villany so’er I bid thee do, to perform it directly and truly, I would think thee an honest man: thou shouldst neither want my means for thy relief, nor my voice for thy preferment.

Pis. Well, my good lord.
Clo. Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not, in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me?

Pis. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand: here’s my purse. Hast any of thy late master’s garments in thy possession?

Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.

Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither: let it be thy first service.

Pis. I shall, my lord. [Exit.

Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven. — I forgot to ask him one thing: I’ll remember’st anon. — Even there thou villain, Posthumus, will I kill thee. — I would, these garments were come. She said upon a time (the bitterness of it I now feel from my heart) that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back, will I ravish her: first kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body, — and when my lust hath dined, (which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised) to the court I’ll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I’ll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter Pisiano, with the Clothes.

Pis. Ay, my noble lord.
Clo. How long is’t since she went to Milford-Haven?
Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber: that is the second thing that I have commanded thee; the third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but duteous, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee. — My revenge is now at Milford: would I had writ to do it. — Come, and be true. [Exit. Pis. Thou biddest me to the loss: for true to thee Wore to prove false, which I will never be To him that is most true. — To Milford go, And find not her whom thou pursuest. Flow, flow, You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool’s speed Be cross’d with slowness: labour be his meed! [Exit.

SCENE VI. — Before the Cave of Belarius.

Enter Imogen, attired like a Boy.

Imo. I see a man’s life is a tedious one: I have ’tired myself, and for two nights together Have made the ground my bed: I should be sick, But that my resolution helps me. — Milford, When from the mountain-top Pisiano show’d thee,
Bel. Pr'ythee, fair youth,
Think us no churls, nor measure our good minds
By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd.
'T is almost night: you shall have better cheer
Ere you depart; and thanks, to stay and eat it. —
Boys, bid him welcome.

Gui. Were you a woman, youth,
I should woo hard, but be your groom.—In honesty,
I bid for you, as I do buy.

Arv. I'll make 't my comfort,
He is a man: I'll love him as my brother;
And such a welcome as I'd give to him
After long absence, is such as yours.—Most welcome.
Be sprightlyly, for you fall 'mongst friends.

Imo. 'Mongst friends!
If brothers?—[Aside.] Would it had been so, that they Had been my father's sons: then, had my prize
Been less: and so more equal ballasting
To thee, Posthumus.

Bel. He wrings at some distress.
Gui. Would I could free 't!

Arv. Or 't; what'er it be,
What pain it cost, what danger. Gods!

Bel. Hark, boys. [Whispering.

Imo. Great men,
That had a court no bigger than this cave,
That did attend themselves, and had the virtue
Which their own conscience seal'd them, (laying by
That nothing gift of differing multitudes)
Could not out-peir these twain. Pardon me, gods!
I'd change my sex to be companion with them,
Since Leonatus false.

Be. It shall be so.
Boys, we'll go dress our hunt.—Fair youth, come in Discourse is heavy, fasting; when we have supp'd,
We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story,
So far as thou wilt speak it.

Gui. Pray, draw near.
Arv. The night to the owl, and morn to the lark less welcome.

Imo. Thanks, sir.
Arv. I pray, draw near. [Exeunt; into the Cave

SCENE VII.—Rome.

Enter Two Senators and Tribunes.

1 Sen. This is the tenour of the emperor's writ
That since the common men are now in action
'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians;
And that the legions now in Gallia are Full weak to undertake our wars against
The fallen-off Britons, that we do in mate
The gentry to this business. He creates
Lucius pro-consul; and to you, the tribunes,
For this immediate levy he commands
His absolute commission. Long live Cæsar!

Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces?

2 Sen. Ay.

Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?

1 Sen. With these legions

Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy.

Must be suppliant: the words of your commission

Will tie you to the numbers, and the time

Of their despatch.

Tri. We will discharge our duty. [Exeunt

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Forest, near the Cave.

Enter Clooten.

Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet,
If Pisanio have mapped it truly. How fit his garments serve me! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor, not be fit too? the rather (saving reverence of the word) for 't is said, a woman's fitness comes by fits. Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself, (for it is not vainglory for a man and his glass to confer in his own chamber) I mean, the lines of my body are as well-drawn as his; no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions;
yet this perverse errant thing loves him in my despite.

What mortality is! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour so off, thy mistress enforced, thy garments cut to pieces before thy face; and all this done, spurn her home to her father, who may, haply, be a little angry for my so rough usage, but my mother, having power of his testiness, shall turn all into my commendations.
My horse is tied up safe: out, sword, and to a sole purpose. Fortune, put them into my hand! This is the very description of their meeting-place, and the tellow dares not deceive me. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Before the Cave.

Enter, from the Cave, Belarius, Guiderius,
Arviragus, and Imogen.

Bel. You are not well: [To Imogen.] remain here in the cave:

We'll come to you after hunting.

Arv. Brother, stay here: [To Imogen]

Are we not brothers?

Imo. So man and man should be

But clay and clay differs in dignity,

Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick.

Gui. Go you to hunting; I'll abide with him.

Imo. So sick I am not,—yet I am not well;

But not so citizen a wanton. as To seem to die, ere sick. So please you, leave me.

Stick to your journal course: the breach of custom is breach of all. I am ill; but your being by me

Cannot amend me: society is no comfort
To one not sociable. I am not very sick,

Since I can reason of it: pray you, trust me here:

I'll rob none but myself, and let me die,

Stealing so poorly.

Gui. I love thee; I have spoke it

How much the quantity, the weight as much,

As I do love my father.

Bel. What! how? how?

Arv. If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me

In my good brother's fault: I know not why

1 Discords. 2 The rest of this direction is not in s. e. 3 this impenitent thing: in s. e.
I love this youth; and I have heard you say, Love’s reason’s without reason: the bier at door, And a demand who is’t shall die, I’d say; My father, not this youth.

Bel. [Aside.] O noble strain! O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness! Cowards father cowards, and base things sire base: Nature hath meal and bran: contempt and grace. I am not their father; yet who this should be Doth miracle itself, lovd before me.—
'T is the ninth hour o’ the morn.

Arv. Brother, farewell.

Imo. I wish ye sport.

Arv. You health.—So please you, sir, The tailor made them not.

Imo. [Aside.] These are kind creatures. Gods, what lies I have heard!

Our courtiers say, all’s savage but at court:
Experience, O! thou disprov’st report. Th’ imperious seas breed monsters; for the dish,
Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.
I am sick still: heart-sick.—Pisano,
I’ll now taste of thy drug.

Gui. I could not stir him.

He said, he was gentle, but unfortunate;
Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest. Arv. Thus did he answer me; yet said, hereafter I might know more.

Bel. To the field, to the field!—
We’ll leave you for this time; go in, and rest.
Arv. We’ll not be long away.

Bel. Pray, be not sick,
For you must be our house-wife.

Imo. Well, or ill,
I am bound to you.

Bel. And shalt be ever. [Exit IMOGEN.]

This youth, how’er distress’d, appears he hath had Good ancestors.

Arv. How angel-like he sings. [characters; Gui. But his next cookery: he cut our roots in And saved our broth’s, as Juno had been sick, And he her dieter.

Arv. Nobly he yokes
A smiling with a sigh, as if the sigh
Was that it was, for not being such a smile;
The smile mocking the sigh, that it would fly
From so divine a temple, to commix
With winds that sailors rail at.

Gui. I do note,
That grief and patience, rooted in him’ both,
Mingle their spurs together.

Arv. Grow, patience! And let the stinking elder, grief, unwine
His persicking root with the increasing vine!

Bel. It is great morning. Come; away!—Who’s there?

[Aent CLOTEN.

Clo. I cannot find those runagates: that villain
Hath mock’d me. I am faint.

Bel. Those runagates! Means he not us? I partly know him; ‘t is Cloten, the son o’ the queen. I fear some ambush.
I saw him not these many years, and yet
I know ‘t is he. —We are held as outlaws: hence!

Gui. He is but one. You and your brother search
What companies are near: pray you, away;
Let me alone with him.

[Exeunt Belarius and Arviragus.

Clo. Soft! what are you
That fly me thus? some villain mountaineers?

I have heard of such.—What slave art thou?

Gui. A thing
More slavish did I ne’er, than answering
A slave without a knock.

Clo. Thou art a robber,
A law-breaker, a villain. Yield thee, thief.

Gui. To whom? to thee? What art thou? Have An arm as big as thine? a heart as big?

[not 1]

Thy words, I grant, are bigger; for I wear not My dagger in my mouth. Say, what thou art,
Why I should yield to thee.

Clo. Thou villain base,
Know’st me not by my clothes?

Gui. No, nor thy tailor, rascal
Who is thy grandfather: he made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, make thee.

Clo. Thou precious varlet,
My tailor made them not.

Gui. Hence then, and thank
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool; I am loath to beat thee.

Clo. Thou injurious thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.

Gui. What’s thy name?

Clo. Cloten, thou villain.

Gui. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy name,
I cannot tremble at it: were it toad, or adder, spider,
’T would move me sooner.

Clo. To thy farther fear,
Nay, to thy more confusion, thou shalt know
I’m son to the queen.

Gui. I am sorry for’t, not seeming
So worthy as thy birth.

Clo. Art not afeard?

Gui. Those that I reverence, those I fear, the wise.
At fools I laugh, not fear them.

Clo. Die the death.

When I have slain thee with my proper hand,
I’ll follow those that even now fled hence,
And on the gates of Lod’s town set your heads.

Yield, rustic, mountaineer. [Exeunt, fighting

Enter Belarius and Arviragus.

Bel. No company’s abroad.

Arv. None in the world. You did mistake him, sure
Bel. I cannot tell: long is since I saw him,
But time hath nothing blur’d those lines of favour
Which then he wore: the snatches in his voice,
And burst of speaking, were as his. I am absolute
’T was very Cloten.

Arv. In this place we left them.

I wish my brother make good time with him,
You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scarce made up,
I mean, to man, he had not apprehension
Of roaring terrors; for the effect of judgment
Is oft the cause of fear. But see, thy brother.

Re-enter GUIDERIUS, with CLOTEN’S HEAD.

Gui. This Cloten was a fool, an empty purse.
There was no money in’t. Not Hercules
Could have knock’d out his brains, for he had none:
Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne
My head, as I do his.

Bel. What hast thou done?

Gui. I am perfect what: cut off one Cloten’s head
Son to the queen after his own report;
Who call’d me traitor, mountaineer; and swore,
With his own single hand he’d take us in,
Displace our heads, where (thank the gods!) they grow
And set them on Lod’s town.
We are all undone.

But that he swore to take, our lives? The law
Protests not us; then, why should we be tender,
To let an arrogant piece of flesh thrust us;
Play judge, and executioner, all himself;
For we do fear the law? What company
Discover you abroad?

No single soul
Capone set eye on, but in all safe reason
He must have some attendants. Though his humour,
Was nothing but mutation; ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse; not frenzy, not Absolute madness, could so far have rav'd,
To bring him here alone. Although, perhaps,
It may be heard at court, that such as we
Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time
May make some stronger head; the which he hearing,
(As it is like him) might break out, and swear
He'd fetch us in, yet is 't not probable
To come alone, either he so undertaking,
Or they so suffering: then, on good ground we fear,
If we do fear this body hath a tail
More perilous than the head.

Come as the gods foresay it: howsoe'er,
My brother hath done well.

I had no mind
To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness
Don't make my way long forth.

With his own sword,
Which he did wave against my throat, I have ta'en
His head from him: I'll throw 't into the creek
Behind our rock; and let it to the sea,
And tell the fishes he's the queen's son, Cloten:
That's all I reck. [Exit.

I fear, 't will be reveng'd.

Would, Polydore, thou hadst not done 't, though valour
Becomes thee well enough.

'Would I had done 't,
So the revenge alone pursued me.—Polydore,
I love thee brotherly, but envy much,
Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would revenger,
That possible strength might meet, would seek us through,
And put us to our answer.

We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger
Where there's no profit. I pr'ythee, to our rock:
You and Fidele play the cooks; I'll stay
Till hastily Polydore return, and bring him
To dine presently.

Poor sick Fidele!
I'll willingly to him: to gain his colour,
I'd let a parish of such Cloten blood,
And praise myself for charity. [Exit.

O thou goddess,
Thou divine Nature, how's thyself thou blazon'est
In these two princely boys! They are as gentle
As zephyrs blowing below the violet,
Not wagging his sweet head; and yet as rough,
Their royal blood encha'd, as the rust' st wind,
That by the top doth take the mountain pine,
And make him stoop to the vale. 'T is wonder,
That an invisible instinct should frame them
To royalty unlearn'd, honour untaught,
Civility not seen from other, valour
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop
As if it had been sow'd! Yet still it's strange,
What Cloten's being here to us portends,
Or what his death will bring us.

Where's my brother?
I have sent Cloten's clotdoll down the stream
In embassy to his mother: his body's hostage
For his return. [Solemn Music]

My ingenious instrument!
Hark, Polydore, it sounds; but what occasion
Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hark!

Is he at home?
He went hence even now.
What does he mean? since death of my dear'st mother
It did not speak before. All solemn things
Should answer solemn accidents. 'The matter?
Triumphs for nothing, and lamenting toys,
Is jollity for apes, and grief for boys.
Is Cadwal mad?

Look! here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his arms
Of what we blame him for.

The bird is dead,
That we have made so much on. I had rather
Have skip'd from sixteen years of age to sixty,
To have turn'd my leaping time into a crutch,
Than have seen this.

O sweetest, fairest lily!
My brother wears thee not the one half so well,
As when thou grew'st thyself.

O, melancholy!
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find
The oozo, to show what coast thy sluggish crare
Might easiest harbor in?—Thou blessed thing:
Jove knows what man thou might'st have made; but I,
Thou diest a most rare boy, of melancholy—
How found you him?

Stark, as you see:
Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber,
Not as death's dart, being la'th'd at; his right check
Reposing on a cushion.

Where?
O' the floor;
His arms thus leag'd: I thought he slept, and put
My cloutied brogues* from off my feet, whose rudeness
Answer'd my steps too loud.

Why, he but sleep;
If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed:
With female fairies will his tomb be haunted,
And worms will not come to thee.

With fairest flowers
Whilst summer lasts, and I live here, Fidele,
I'll sweeten thy sad grave: thou shalt not lack
The flower, that 's like thy face, pale primrose; nor
The azur'd hare-bell, like thy veins; no, nor
The leafy eglantine, whom not to slander,
Out-sweeten'd not thy breath: the rudeock* would,
With charitable bill (O bill, sore-shaming
Those rich-left heirs, that let their fathers lie
Without a monument !) bring thee all this;
Yea, and furr'd moss besides, when flowers are none
To winter-guard thy corsé.

Pr'ythee, have done.
And do not play in wench-like words with that
Which is so serious. Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration what
Is now due debt.—To the grave!

Av. Say, where shall 's lay him?

Gui. By good Euriphile, our mother.

Av. Be't so:
And let us, Polydore, though now our voices
Have got the mannish crack, sing him to the ground,
As once* our mother: use like note, and words,
Save that Euriphile must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwal,
I cannot sing: I 'll weep, and word it with thee;
For notes of sorrow, out of tune, are worse
Than priests and fanes that lie.

Av. We 'll speak it, then.

Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicine the less; for Cloten
Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys;
And, though he came our enemy, remember,
He was paid for that: though mean and mighty, roting
Together, have one dust, yet reverence,
(That angel of the world) doth make distinction
Of place 't wix't high and low. Our foe was princely,
And though you took his life, as being our foe,
Yet bury him as a prince.

Gui. Pray you, fetch him hither.

Thersites' body is as good as Ajax.
When neither is alive.

Av. If you 'll go fetch him,
We 'll say our song the whilst.—Brother, begin.

[Exit BELARIUS.]

Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the east;
My father hath a reason for 't.

Av. 'T is true.

Gui. Come on, then, and remove him.

Av. So.—Begin.

SONG.

Gui. Fear no more the heat o' the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rage;
Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and taken thy wages:
Golden lads and lasses must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

Av. Fear no more the frown o' the great,
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke;
Care no more to clothe, and eat;
To thee the reed is as the oak:
The sceptre, learning, physic, must
All follow this, and come to dust.

Gui. Fear no more the lightning-flash,
Nor th' all-dreaded thunder-stone;
Fear not slander, censure rash;
Thou hast lost that's joy and own:
Both. All lovers young, all lovers must
Consign to thee, and come to dust.

Gui. No exorciser harm thee!

Av. Nor no witchcraft charm thee!

Gui. Ghost unlaid forbear thee!

Av. Nothing ill come near thee!

Both. Quiet consummation have;
And renowned be thy grave!

Re-enter BELARIUS, with the Body of Cloten.

Gui. We have done our obsequies. Come, lay him down.

[They place him beside IMOGEN.]

Bel. Here's a few flowers, but about midnight more:
The herbs that have on them cold dew o' the night,
Are strewings fitt's for graves.—Upon their faces.
You were as flowers, now with'er'd; even so
These herb'lets shall, which we upon you strew—

Come on, away; apart upon our knees.
The ground that gave them first has them again:
Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain.

[Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.]

*Imo. [Awaking.] Yes, sir, to Milford-Haven; which is the way?—

I thank you.—By yond' bush?—Pray, how far thither?
'Ods pitikins!—can it be six miles yet?—

I have gone all night:—feath', I 'll lie down and sleep.
But, soft! no bedfellow.—O, gods and goddesses!

[Seeing the Body.]

These flowers are like the pleasures of the world;
This bloody man, the care on't.—I hope I dream,
For lo! I thought I was a cave-keeper,
And cook to honest creatures; but 't is not so:
'T was but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing,
Which the brain makes of fumes. Our very eyes
Are sometimes like our judgments, blind. Good faith,
I tremble still with fear; but if there be
Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity
As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it!
The dream 's here still: even when I wake, it is Without me, as within me; not imagin'd, felt.
A headless man!—The garment of Posthumus!
I know the shape of his leg: this is his hand;
His foot Mercurial; his Martial thigh;
The brawns of Hercules: but his Jovial face—
Murther in heaven!—How?—'T is gone. Pisano,
All curses madded Hecuba gave the Greeks,
And mine to boot, be darted on thee! Thou,
Conspir'd with that irreligious devil, Cloten,
Hast here cut off my lord.—To write, and read,
Be henceforth trencherous!—Damn'd Pisano
Hath with his forged letters.—damn'd Pisano—
From this most bravest vessel of the world
Struck the main-top!—O, Posthumus! alas!
Where is thy head? where's that? Ah me! where's that?
Pisano might have kill'd thee at the heart,
And left thy head on.—How should this be? Pisano!
'T is he, and Cloten: malice and hate in them
Have laid this woe here. O! 't is pregnant, pregnant.
The drug he gave me. which, he said, was precious
And cordial to me, have I not found it?
Murderous to the senses? That confirms it home:
This is Pisano's deed, and Cloten's: O——
Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood,
That we the horror may seem to those
Which chance to find us. O, my lord, my lord!

Enter Lucius, a Captain, and other Officers, and a Soothsayer.

Cap. To them the legions garrison'd in Gallia,
After your will, have cross'd the seas; attending
You, here at Milford-Haven, with your ships:
They are in readiness.

Luc. But what from Rome?

Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confiders,
And gentlemen of Italy; most willing spirits,
That promise noble service, and they come
Under the conduct of bold Iachimo,
Sienna's brother.

Luc. When expect you them?

Cap. With the next benefit o' the wind.

Luc. This forwardness
Makes our hopes fair. Command, our present numbers
Be must'd: bid the captains look to 't.—Now, sir,
What have you dream'd of late of this war's purpose?

Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me a vision
(I fast, and pray'd, for their intelligence) thus:—
I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd

"to our: in folio. * and girls all must: in f. e. * Not in f. e. 1° so: in f. e. 2° Like Jove"
Scene IV.

Cymbeline.

881

From the spungy south to this part of the west,
There vanish'd in the sunbeam: which portends,
(Unless my sins abuse my divination)
Success to the Roman host.

Luc. Dream often so,
And never false.—Soft, ho? what trunk is here,
Without his top? The ruin speaks, that sometime
It was a worthy building.—How? a page!— dead, or sleeping on him? But dead rather; nature doth abhor to make his bed
ith the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.—
Let's see the boy's face.

Cap. He is alive, my lord.

Luc. He'll then instruct us of this body.—Young one,
Inform us of thy fortunes; for, it seems,
They crave to be demanded. Who is this,
Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow? Or who was he,
That, otherwise than noble nature did,
Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy interest
In this sad wreck? How came it? Who is it?
What art thou?

Imo. I am nothing: or if not,
Nothing to be were better. This was my master,
A very valiant Briton, and a good one,
That here by moonlight lies slain.—Alas!
There are no more such masters: I may wander
From east to occident, er'ry out for service,
Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master.

Luc. 'Tis lack, good youth! Thy name?
Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining, than Thy master in bleeding. Say his name, good friend.

Imo. Richard du Champ [Aside]. If I do lie, and do
No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope
They'll pardon.—Say, you, sir?

Luc. Thy name?

Imo. Fidele, sir.

Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very same:
Thy name well fits thy faith: thy faith, thy name.
Wilt take thy chances with me? I will not say,
Thou shalt be so well master'd, but, be sure,
No less belov'd. The Roman emperor's letters,
Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner.

Imo. I'll follow, sir. But first, sir; I am not the gods,
I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep
As these poor pikebacks can dig: and when
With wild wood-leaves and weeds I have strew'd his grave,
And on it said a century of prayers,
Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep, and sigh;
And, leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertain me.

Luc. Ay, good youth;
And rather father thee, than master thee.—My friends.
The boy hath taught us many duties: let us
Find out the prettiest daised plot we can,
And make him with our pikes and partisans
A grave: come, arm him.—Boy, he is prefer'd
By thee to us, and he shall be inter'd,
As soldiers can. Be cheerful; wipe thine eyes:
Some falls are means the happier to arise. [Exeunt.

Scene III.—A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Lords, and Pisania.

Cym. Again: and bring me word how 'tis with her.
A fever with the absence of her son;
A madness, of which her life's in danger.—Heavens,
How deeply you at once do touch me! Imogen,
The great part of my comfort, gone; my queen
Upon a desperate bed, and in a time
When fearful wars point at me: her son gone,
So needful for this present; it strikes me past
The hope of comfort.—But for thee, fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure, and Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it from thee
By a sharp torture.

Pis. Sir, my life is yours,
I humbly set it at your will: but, for my mistress.
I nothing know where she remains, why gone,
Nor when she purposes to return. Beech your highnesses
Hold me your loyal servant.

1 Lord. Good my liege,
The day that she was missing he was here:
I dare be bound he's true, and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyally. For Cloten,
There wants no diligence in seeking him,
And will, no doubt, be found.

Cym. The time is troublesome
We'll slip you for a season; but with jealousy
You yet depend.

1 Lord. So please your majesty.
The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your coast, with a supply
Of Roman gentlemen by the senate sent.

Cym. Now for the counsel of my son and queen!—
I am amaz'd with matter.

1 Lord. Good my liege,
Your preparation can affront no less
Than what you hear of: come more, for more you're ready.
The want is, but to put these powers in motion.
That long to move.

Cym. I thank you. Let's withdraw.
And meet the time, as it seeks us: we fear not What can from Italy annoy us, but
We grieve at chances here.—Away! [Exeunt.

Pis. I had no letter from my master, since
I wrote him Imogen was slain. 'Tis strange:
Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise
To yield me often tidings; neither know I
What is betid to Cloten, but remain
Perplex'd in all: the heavens still must work.
Wherein I am false, I am honest; nor true, to be true
These present wars shall find I love my country,
Even to the note o' the king, or I'll fall in them.
All other doubts by time let them be clear'd;
Fortune brings in some boats that are not steer'd. [Exeunt.

Scene IV.—Before the Cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Guil. The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it

Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it
From action and adventure?

Guil. Nay, what hope
Have we in hiding us? this way the Romans
Must or for Britons slay us, or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural revolts
During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. We'll higher to the mountains; there secure us.
To the king's party there's no going: newness
Of Cloten's death (we being not known, not master'd Among the bands) may drive us to a render
Where we have liv'd; and so extort from's that
Which we have done, whose answer would be death
Drawn on with torture.
SCENE I.—A Field between the British and Roman Camps.

Enter Posthumus, with a bloody Handkerchief.

Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee; for I wish'd thou shouldst be colour'd thus. You married ones, if each of you should take this course, how many must murder wives much better than themselves, for wrying but a little?—O, Pisanio! Every good servant does not all commands; no bond, but to do just ones.—Gods! if you have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never had liv'd to put on this: so had you saved the noble Imogen to repent, and struck me, wretched, more worth your vengeance. But, alack! you snatch some hence for little faults; that's love.

To have them fall no more: you some permit to second ills with ills, each later worse, and make men dread it, to the doer's thrift. But Imogen is your own: do your best wills, and make me bless'd to obey!—I am brought hither among the Italian gentry, and to fight against my lady's kingdom: 'tis enough that, Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress! peace! I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good heavens, hear patiently my purpose. I'll disrobe me of these Italian weeds, and suit myself as does a Briton peasant: so I'll fight against the part I come with; so I'll die for thee, O Imogen! even for whom thy life is, every breath, a death: and thus unknown, Pined nor hated, to the face of peril, myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men know more valour in me, than my habits show. Gods, put the strength o' the Leonati in me! To shame the guise o' the world, I will begin the fashion, less without, and more within. [Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Trumpets and Drums. Enter at one side Lucius, LACHINO, and the Roman Army; at the other side, the British Army; LEONATUS POSTHUMUS following like a poor Soldier. They march over and go out. Alarums. Then enter again to skirmish, LACHINO and POSTHUMUS: he vanquisheth and disarms LACHINO, and then leaves him. Alarums on both sides.

Iach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom takes off my manhood: I have belied a lady, the princess of this country, and the air on't revengingly enfolds me; or could this ear, a very drudge of nature's, have subdu'd me in my profession? Knighthoods and honours, borne as I wear mine, are titles but of scorn. If thy that gentry, Britain, go before this lout, as he exceeds our lords, the odds is, that we scarce are men, and you are gods. [Exit. Alarums. The Battle continues: the Britons fly; Cymbeline is taken: then enter, to his rescue, Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus. Bel. Stand, stand! we have the advantage of the ground. The lane is guarded: nothing routs us, but the villainy of our fears.

Gui. Avor. Stand, stand, and fight! Alarums. Enter Posthumus, and second the Britons, they rescue Cymbeline, and exclaim: then, enter Lucius, Lachino, and Imogen.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save thyself for friends kill friends, and the disorder's such as were hood-wink'd. Iach. 'Tis their fresh supplies Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely: or betimes Let's re-enforce, or fly. [Exit.]
SCENE IV.

CYMBELINE.

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter Posthumus and a Briton Lord.

Lord. Can't thou from where they made the stand?

Post. Though you it seems, come from the fiers.

Lord. No blame be to you, sir; for all was lost,

Post. I d'd.

Lord. If who this Ay, d-d I stand, know, for the Post. The lack my think, you have that you have

Lord. Noble I give who after the Cap.

Post. Some, that's! T' Lord.

SCENE.

Lolling So Which More An With Or Like But With Accommodated The A Some Of The The BCEITE Rather "Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane, 'reserv'd the Britons, was the Romans' bane." Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir.

Post. 'Lack! to what end?

Who dares not stand his foe, I'll be his friend;

If you'll do, as he is made to do,

I know, he'll quickly fly my friendship too.

You have put me into rhyme.

Lord. Farewell; you are angry. [Exit

Post. Still going?—This is a lord. O noble misery! To be i' the field, and ask, what news of me.

To-day, how many would have given their honours
to have sav'd their carcasses? took heel to do't,

And yet died too? lo, in mine own woe char'md,

Could not find death where I did hear him groan,

Nor feel him where he struck; being an ugly monster,

'T is strange he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds,

Sweet words; or hath more ministers than we

That draw his knives i' the war.—Well, I will find him

For being now a favourer to the Briton,

No more a Briton, I have resumed' again

The part I came in. Fight I will no more,

But yield me to the veriest hind, that shall

Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Here made by the Roman; great the answer be

Britons must take; for me, my ransom 's death

On either side I come to spend my breath,

Which neither here I'll keep, nor bear again,

But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two Briton Captains, and Soldiers.

1 Cap. Great Jupiter be praised! Lucius is taken
'T is thought, the old man and his sons were angels.

2 Cap. There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,

That gave th' affront with them.

1 Cap. So 't is reported;

But none of them can be found.—Stand! who is there?

Post. A Roman,

Who had not now been drooping here, if seconds

Had answer'd him.

2 Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog!

A leg of Rome shall not return to tell

What crows have peck'd them here. He brag's his

As if he were of note. Bring him to the king.

Enter Cymbeline, attended; Belarius, Guederus,

Arviragus, Pisanio, and Roman Captives. The Captains present Posthumus to Cymbeline, who delivers him over to a Jailor; after which, all go out.

SCENE IV.—A Prison.

Enter Posthumus, and Two Jailors.

1 Jail. You shall not now be stolen; you have locks upon you:

So, graze as you find pasture.

2 Jail. Ay, or a stomach. [Exeunt Jailors.

Post. Most welcome, boudage, for thou art a way.

I think, to liberty. Yet am I better

Than one that 's sick o' the gout; since he had ratha

Groun so in perpetuity, than be cur'd.

By the sub, physician, death, who'd unbar these locks. My conscience, thou art where more

More than my shanks, and wrists; you good gods, give me

The penitent instrument to pick that bolt.

Then, free for ever! Is 't enough. I am sorry?

So children temporal fathers do appease;

Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent?

I cannot do it better than in gyves,

Desir'd, more than constrain'd; to satisfy;

If of my freedom 't is the main part, take

No stricter render of me than my all.

I know, you are more element than vile men,

Who of their broken debtors take a third,
A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again
On their abatement: that's not my desire.
For Imogen's dear life, take mine: and though
'T is not so dear yet, 'tis a life; you could it;
'Tween man and man they weigh not every stamp.
Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake:
You rather mine, being yours; and so, great powers,
If you will take this audit, take this life,
And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen!
I'll speak to thee in silence. [He sleeps.

Solemn Music. Enter, as an Apparition, SICILIANUS.
LEONATUS. Father to Posthumus, an old Man attired like a Warrior; leading in his Hand an ancient Matron, his Wife and Mother to Posthumus, with Music before them: then, after other Music, follow the Two young Leonati. Brothers to Posthumus, with Wounds as they died in the Wars. They circle Posthumus round as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder-master, show Thy spite on mortal flies:
With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,
That thy adulteries
Rates and revenges.
Hath my poor boy done aught but well?
Whose face I never saw;
I died, whilst in the womb he stay'd
Attending nature's law.
Whose father, then, (as men report,
Thou orphans' father art)
Thou shouldst have been, and shielded him
From this earth-vexing smart.

Moth. Lucina lent not me her aid,
But took me in my throes;
That from me was Posthumus ript,
Came crying 'mongst his foes,
A thing of pity,

Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry,
Moulded the stuff so fair,
That he deserv'd the praise o' the world,
As great Sicilius' heir.

1 Bro. When once he was mature for man,
In Britain where was he,
That could stand up his parallel,
Or fruitful object be
In eye of Imogen, that best
Could deem his dignity?

Moth. With marriage wherefore was he mock'd,
To be exil'd, and thrown
From Leonati' seat, and cast
From her his dearest one,
Sweet Imogen?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo,
Slight thing of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain
With needless jealousy;
And to become the geck1 and scorn
O' the other's villainy?

2 Bro. For this from stiffer seats we came,
Our parents, and we twain,
That striking in our country's cause
Fell bravely, and were slain;
Our fealty, and Tenants' right,
With honour to maintain.

1 Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath
To Cymbeline perform'd:
Then Jupiter, thou king of gods,
Why hast thou thus adjourn'd

The graces for his merits due,
Being all to colours turn'd?

Sici. Thy crystal window open; look out.
No longer exercise,
Upon a valiant race, thy harsh
And potent injuries.

Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good,
Take off his miseries.

Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion; help!
Or we poor ghosts will cry,
To the shining synod of the rest,
Against thy deity.

2 Bro. Help, Jupiter! or we appeal,
And from thy justice fly.

JUPITER descends in Thunder and Lightning, sitting upon an Eagle: he throws a Thunderbolt; the Ghosts fall on their knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of regions low,
Offend our hearing: hush!—How dare you ghosts
Aceuse the thunderer, whose bolt you know,
Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts?

Poor shadows of Elysium, hence; and rest
Upon your never-withering banks of flowers:
Be met with mortal accidents oppress;
No care of yours it is; you know, 'tis ours.
Whom best I love, I cross; to make my gift,
The more delay'd, delight'd. Be content;
Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift:
His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.
Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in
Our temple was he married.—Rise, and fade!—
He shall be lord of lady Imogen.
And happier much by his affliction made.
This tablet lay upon his breast, wherein
Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine;
And so, away: no farther with your din
Express impatience, lest you stir up mine.—
Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline. [Ascends.

Sici. He came in thunder: his celestial breath
Was sulphurous to smell: the holy eagle
Swoop'd, as to foot us: his ascension is
More sweet than urchild'sd fields.
His royal bird
Prunes the immortal wing, and cloys his beak,
As when his god is pleas'd.

All. Thanks, Jupiter.

Sici. The marble pavement closes; he is enter'd
His radiant roof.—Away! and, to be blast,
Let us with care perform his great behest. [Ghosts vanish.

Post. [Waking.] Sleep, thou hast been a grandsire
And begot
A father to me; and thou hast created
A mother, and two brothers. But (O scorn!)
Gone! they went hence so soon as they were born,
And so I am awake.—Poor wretches, that depend
On greatness' favour, dream as I have done:
Wake, and find nothing.—But, alas, I swerve:
Many dream not to find, neither deserve,
And yet are steep'd in favours; so am I,
That have this golden chance, and know not why.

[Finding the Tablet.
What fairies haunt this ground? A book? O, rare one! Be not, as in our fangled world, a garment Nobler than that it covers; let thy effects So follow, to be most unlike our curators, As good as promise.

[Reads.] * As when a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar SCENE V.—CYMBELINE'S Tent.

Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Pisanius, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.

Cym. Stand by my side you, whom the gods have made Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart, That the poor soldier, that so richly fought, Whose rags sham'd gilded arms, whose naked breast Stepp'd before targe of proof, cannot be found: He shall be happy that can find him, if Our grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw
Such noble fury in so poor a thing;
Such precious deeds in one, that promis'd nought
But beggary and poor looks.

Cym. No tidings of him?

Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead and living; But no trace of him.

Cym. To my grief, I am
The heir of his reward; which I will add To you, the liver, heart, and brain of Britain, By whom, I grant, she lives: 'Tis now the time To ask of whom ye are: report it.

Bel. Sir, In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen. Farther to boast, were neither true nor modest, Unless I add, we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees.—
Aris, my knights of the battle: I create you Companions to our person, and will fit you With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter Cornelius and Ladies.

There's business in these faces.—Why so sadly Greet you our victory? you look like Romans, And not of the court of Britain.

Cor. Hail, great king! To sour your happiness, I must report
The queen is dead.

Cym. Whom worse than a physician Would this report become? But I consider, By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death Will seize the doctor too.—How end she?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life; Which, being cruel to the world, concluded Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd, I will report, so please you: these her women Can trip me, if I err, who, with wet cheeks, Were present when she finish'd.

Cym. Pr'ythee, say.

Cor. First, she confess'd she never loved you: only Affected greatness got by you, not you: Married your royalty, was wife to your place. Abhorr'd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this; And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to live With such integrity, she did confess Was as a scorpion to her sight: whose life, But that her flight prevented it, she had To' e'n by poison.

Cym. O most delicate fiend! Who is't can read a woman?—Is there more?

Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess, she had For you a mortal mineral: which, being took, Should by the minute feed on life, and lingering By inches waste you: in which time she purpos'd By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to Overcome you with her show; and in time

1 Risk. 2 Pretended.
Am something nearer.

Cym. Wherefore ey'st him so? Imo. I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you please To give me hearing.

Cym. Ay, with all my heart, And lend my best attention. What's thy name? Imo. Fidele, sir.

Cym. Thou art my good youth, my page I'll be thy master: walk with me; speak freely

[Cymbeline and Imogen converse apart

Bel. Is not this boy reviv'd from death? Arv. One sand another

Not more resembles: that sweet rosy lad, Who died, and was Fidele.—What think you? Gui. The same dead thing alive.

Bel. Peace, peace! see further; he eyes us not forbear.

Creatures may be alike: were 't he, I am sure He would have spoke to us.

Gui. But we saw him dead

Bel. Be silent: let's see farther.

Pis. [Aside.] It is my mistress!

Since she is living, let the time run on, To good, or bad.

[Cymbeline and Imogen come forward.

Cym. Come, stand thou by our side: Make thy demand aloud.—Sir, [To Iachimo.] step you forth:

Give answer to this boy, and do it freely,

Or, by our greatness, and the grace of it,

Which is our honour, bitter torture shall

Winnow the truth from falsehood.—On, speak to him.

Imo. My boon is, that this gentleman may render

Of whom he had this ring.

Post. [Aside.] What's that to him?

Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say,

How came it yours?

Iach. Thou 'lt torture me to learn unspoken that,

Which, to be spoke, would torture thee.

Cym. How! me?

Iach. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter that, which Torments me to conceal. By villainy:

I got this ring: it was Leonatus'—

Whom thou didst banish; and (which rare natures grieve thee,

As it doth me) a nobler sir ne'er liv'd—

'Twixt sky and ground, wilt thou hear mine? my lord?

Cym. All that belongs to this.

Iach. That paragon, thy star of

For whom my heart drops blood, and my life spoils a

Quail to remember.—Give me leave: I know

Cym. My daughter! what of her? renew strength:

I had rather then should live while nature will,

Than die ere I hear more. Strive, man, and speak

Iach. Upon a time, (unhappy was the clock

That struck the hour) it was in Rome, (accursed

The mansion where) 't was at a feast, (O! would

Our viands had been poison'd, or at least

Those which I heav'd to head) the good Posthumus

(What should I say? he was too good to be)

Where ill men were, and was the best of all

Amongst the rar't of good ones sitting sadly,

Hearing us praise our loves of Italy

For beauty, that made barren the swell'd boast

Of him that best could speak: for feature, laming

The shrine of Venus, or straight-pitch'd* Minerva,

Postures beyond brief nature; for condition,

A shop of all the qualities that man
Loves woman for; besides, that hook of wiving,
Fairness, which strikes the eye.—

Cym. I stand on fire.

Come to the matter.

Iack. All too soon I shall,
Unless thou wouldst grieve quickly.—This Posthumus,
(Most like a noble lord in love, and one
That had a royal lover) took his hint;
And, not dispraising whom we prais'd, (therein
He was as calm as virtue) he began
His mistress' picture: which by his tongue being made,
And then a mind put in't, either our bags
Were crack'd of kitchen trullis, or his description
Prov'd us unsparking sots.

Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose.

Iack. Your daughter's chastity—there it begins.
He spake of her as Dian had hot dreams,
And she alone were cold: whereat, I, wretch,
Made'teruple of his praise; and wagger'd with him
Peeces of gold 'gainst this, which then he wore
Upon his honour'd finger, to attain
In summe the amistie of his bed, and win this ring
By hores and mine adultery. He, true knight,
No lesser of her honour confident
Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring;
And would so, had it been a carbuncle
Of Phoebus' wheel; and might so safely, had it
Been all the worth of his car. Away to Britaip
Post I in this design: well may you, sir,
Remember me at court, where I was taught
Of your chaste daughter the wide difference
'Twixt amorous and villainous. Being thus quench'd
Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain
'Gain in your droller Britain operate
Most vilely; for my vantage, excellent;
And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd,
That I return'd with simular proof, enough
To make the noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belief in her renown
With tokens thus, and thus; averring notes
Of chamber-kissing, pictures, this her bracelet,
(O cunning, how I got it!) nay, some marks
Of secret on her person, that he could not
But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd,
I having ta'en the forfeit. Whereupon,—
Methinks, I see him now, —

Post. Ay, so thou dost,
[Coming forward.

Italian fiend!—Ah me! most credulous fool,
Egregious murderer, thief, any thing
That's due to all the villains past, in being,
To come!—O, give me cord, or knife, or poison,
Some upright justicer! Thou, king, send out
For torturers ingenious: it is I
That all the abhorred things o' the earth amend,
By being worse than they. I am Posthumus,
That kill'd thy daughter: villain-like, I lie;
That caus'd a lesser villain than myself,
A sacrilegious thief, to do't. —The temple
Of virtue was she: —yea, and she herself
Spit, and throw stones, cast mire upon me; set
The dogs o' the street to bay me: every villain
Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus, and
Be villainy less than 'twas! —O Imogen!
My queen, my life, my wife! —O Imogen,
Imogen, Imogen!

Imo. Peace, my lord! hear, hear! —

Post Shall 's have a play of this? Thou scornful page,

There lie thy part. [Striking her: she fall.
Pis. O, gentlemen! help
Milk. and your mistress.—O, my lord Posthumus!
You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now.—Help, help! —
Mine honour'd lady! —

Cym. Does the world go round?

Post. How come these staggers on me?

Pis. Wake, my mistress.

Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me
To death with mortal joy.

Pis. Wake, my mistress.

Imo. O! get thee from my sight:

 Thou gav'st me poison: dangerous fellow, hence!

Breathe not where princes are.

Cym. The tune of Imogen,

Pis. Lady,

The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if
That box I gave you was not thought by me
A precious thing: I had it from the queen.

Cym. New matter still?

Imo. It poison'd me.

Cor. I left out one thing which the queen confess'd,
Which must approve thee honest: if Pisanio
Have, said she, given his mistress that confection
Which I gave him for a cordial, she is serv'd
As I would serve a rat.

Cym. What's this, Cornelius?

Cor. The queen, sir, very oft importun'd me
To temper poisons for her; still pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge, only
In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs
Of no esteem: I, dreading that her purpose
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certain stuff, which, being taken, would cease
The present power of life: but, in short time,
All offices of nature should again
Do their due functions.—Have you ta'en of it?

Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.

Bel. There was our error.

Cor. This is, sure, Fidele.

Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady from you?

Think, that you are upon a rock: and now
Throw me again. [Embracing Posthumus.

Post. Hang there like fruit, my soul,

Till the tree die!

Cym. How now! my flesh, my child!

What! mak'st thou me a drollard in this act?

Wilt thou not speak to me?

Imo. Your blessing, sir. [Kneeling.

Bel. Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not

You had a motive for't. [To Guiderus and Arviragus.

Cym. My tears that fall,

Prove holy water on thee! Imogen,

Thy mother's dead.

Imo. I am sorry for it, my lord.

Cym. O! she was naught: and long of her it was
That we meet here so strangely: but her son
Is gone, we know not how, nor where.

Pis. My lord,

Now fear is from me, I'll speak truth. Lord Cloten,

Upon my lady's missing, came to me
With his sword drawn: wasm'd at the mouth, and swore
If I discover'd not which way she was gone,
It was my instant death. By accident,

I had a feigned letter of my master's
Then in my pocket, which directed him
To seek her on the mountains near to Milford.

Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments
ACT V.

Which he infore'd from me. away he posts
With muchaste purpose, and with oath to violate
My lady's honour: what became of him,
I farther know not.

Gu. Let me end the story.
I slew him there.

Cym. Marry, the gods foresend!
I would not thy good deeds should from my lips
Pluck a hard sentence: pr'ythee, valiant youth,
Deny't again.

Gui. I have spoke it, and I did it.
Cym. He was a prince.
Gui. A most uncivil one. The wrongs he did me
Were nothing prince-like; for he did provoke me
With language that would make me spurn the sea,
If it could so roar to me. I cut off's head:
And am right glad, he is not standing here
To tell this tale of mine.

Cym. I am sorry for thee:
By thine own tongue thou art condemnd, and must Endure our law. Thou art dead.

Imo. That headless man
I thought had been my lord.

Cym. Bind the offender,
And take him from our presence.

Bel. Stay, sir king.
This man is better than the man he slew,
As well descended as thyself; and hath
More of thee merited, than a band of Clotens
Had ever scar for. — Let his arms alone:

[To the Guard.

They were not born for bondage.

Cym. Why, old soldier,
Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for,
By tasting of our wrath? How of descent
As good as we?

Arv. In that he spake too far.

Cym. And thou shalt die for't.

Bel. We will die all three;
But I will prove that two on's are as good
As I have given out him. — My sons, I must
For mine own part unfold a dangerous speech,
Though, haply, well for you.

Arv. Your danger's ours.

Bel. Have at it, then, by leave.
Thou hadst, great king, a subject, who was call'd Belarius.

Cym. What of him? he is
A banish'd traitor.

Bel. He it is that hath
Assum'd this age: indeed, a banish'd man;
I know not how; a traitor.

Cym. Take him hence,
The whole world shall not save him.

Bel. Not too hot:
First pay me for the nursing of thy sons;
And let it be confiscate all, so soon
As I have receiv'd it.

Cym. Nursing of my sons?

Bel. I am too blunt, and saucy; here's my knee:
Ere I arise, I will prefer my sons;
Then, spare not the old father. Mighty sir,
These two young gentlemen, that call me father,
And think they are my sons, are none of mine:
They are the issue of your loins, my liege,
And blood of your begetting.

Cym. How! my issue?

Bel. So sure as you your father's.

Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish'd:
Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment
Itself, and all my treason; that I suffer'd
Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes
(For such, and so they are) these twenty years
Have I train'd up; those arts they have, as I Could put into them: my breeding was, sir, as
Your highness knows. Their nurse. Euriphile,
Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children
Upon my banishment: I mov'd her to't;
Having receiv'd the punishment before
For that which I did then: beaten for loyalty
Excited me to treason. Their dear loss,
The more of you 't was felt, the more it shap'd
Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious sir,
Here are your sons again; and I must own
Two of the sweet'st companions in the world.—
The benediction of these covering vens
Fall on their heads like dew! for the are worthy
To inlay heaven with stars.

Cym. Thou weep'st, and speak'st
The service, that you three have done, is more
Unlike than this thou tell'st. I lost my children
If these be they, I know not how to wish
A pair of worthier sons.

Bel. Be pleas'd a while —
This gentleman, whom I call Polydore,
Most worthy prince, as yours is true Guiderius:
This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus,
Your younger princely son: he, sir, was lapp'd
In a most curious mantle, wrought by the hand
Of his queen mother, which, for more probation,
I can with ease produce.

Cym. Guiderius had
Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star:
It was a mark of wonder.

Bel. This is he,
Who hath upon him still that natural stamp.
It was wise nature's end in the donation,
To be his evidence now.

Cym. O! what am I
A mother to the birth of three? Ne'er mother
Rejoice'd deliverance more. — Bless'd pray you be,
That after this strange starting from your orbs,
You may reign in them now. — O Imogen!
Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.

Imo. No, my lord,
I have got two worlds by 't. — O, my gentle brothers!
Have we thus met? O! never say hereafter,
But I am truest speaker: you call'd me brother,
When I was but your sister; I you brothers,
When you were so indeed.

Arv. Ay, my good lord.

Did you e'er meet?

Cym. And at first meeting love
Continued so, until we thought he died.
Cor. By the queen's dram she swallow'd.

Cym. O rare instinct;
When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridgment
Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in. — Where? how liv'd you
And when came you to serve our Roman captive?
How parted with your brothers? how first met them?
Why fled you from the court, and whither? Those,
And your three motives to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demanded.
And all the other by-dependencies,
From chance to chance; but nor the time, nor place
Will serve our long interrogatories. So,
Posthumus anchors upon Imogen;
And she, like harmless lightning, throws her eye
On him, her brothers, me, her master, hitting
Each object with a joy: the counterchange
Is severally in all. Let's quit this ground,
And smoke the temple with our sacrifices
Thou art my brother: so we'll hold thee ever

Imo. You are my father, too; and did relieve me,
To see this gracious season.

Cym. All o'erjoy'd,
Save these in bonds: let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.

Imo. My good master,
I will yet do you service.

Luc. Happy be you!

Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought,
He would have well become this place, and grace'd
The thankings of a king.

Post. I am, sir,
The soldier that did company these three
In poor beseeching: 'tis a fitment for
The purpose I then follow'd.—That I was he,
Speak, Iachimo: I had you down, and might
Have made you finish.

Jach. I am down again; [Kneeling]
But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee.
As then your force did. Take that life, beseech you,
Which I so often o'er; but your ring first,
And here the bracelet of the truest princess
That ever swore her faith.

Post. Kneel not to me:
The power that I have on you is to spare you;
The malice towards you to forgive you. Live,
And deal with others better.

Cym. Nobly doom'd.
We'll learn our freeness of a son-in-law:
Pardon's the word to all.

Arv. You help us, sir,
As you did mean indeed to be our brother;
Joy'd are we, that you are.

Post. Your servant, princes.—Good my lord of Rome.
Call forth your soothsayer. As I slept, methought,
Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back'd,
Appeard to me, with other spritely shows
Of mine own kindred: when I wak'd, I found
This label on my bosom; whose containing
Is so from sense in hardness, that I can Make no collection of it; let him show
His skill in the construction.

Luc. Philharmonus!

Sooth. Here, my good lord. [Coming forward.

Luc. Read, and declare the meaning.

Sooth. [Reads.] "When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which being dead many years shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty."

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp;
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-natus, doth import so much.
The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter,

Which we call mollis aer; and mollis aer
We term it mulier: which mulier, I divine,
Is this most constant wife; who, even now,
Answering the letter of the oracle,
Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd about
With this most tender air.

Cym. This hath some seeming.

Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee; and thy lopp'd branches point
Thy two sons forth; who, by Belarius stolen,
For many years thought dead, arc now reviv'd,
To the majestic cedar join'd, whose issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym. Well,
My peace we will begin.—And, Caius Lucius,
Although the victor, we submit to Caesar,
And to the Roman empire: promising
To pay our wanted tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen;
Whom heavens, in justice, both on her and hers
Have laid most heavy hand.

Sooth. The fingers of the powers above do tune
The harmony of this peace. The vision,
Which I made known to Lucius ere the stroke
Of this yet scarce-old battle, at this instant
Is full accomplish'd; for the Roman eagle,
From south to west on wing soaring aloft,
Lessen'd herself, and in the beams of the sun
So vanish'd: which foreshow'd our princely eagle,
Th' imperial Caesar, should again unite
His favour with the radiant Cymbeline,
Which shines here in the west.

Cym. Laud we the gods.
And let our crooked smoke's climb to their nostrils
From our bless'd altars. Publish we this peace
To all our subjects. Set we forward. Let
A Roman and a British ensign wave
Friendly together; so through Laud's town march,
And in the temple of great Jupiter
Our peace we'll ratify; seal it with feasts—
Set on there!—Never was a war did cease,
Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace.

SCENE, dispersedly in various Countries.

ACT I.

Enter Gower.

Before the Palace of Antioch.
To sing a song that old was sung,
From ashes ancient Gower is come;
Assuming man's infirmities,
To glad your ear, and please your eyes.
It hath been sung at festivals,
On ember-eyes, and holy ales,
And lords and ladies in their lives
Have read it for restorative:
The purpose is to make men glorious;
Et bonum quo antiquus, co melius.
If you, born in these latter times,
When wit's more ripe, accept my rhymes,
And that to hear an old man sing,
May to your wishes pleasure bring,
I life would wish, and that I might Waste it for you, like taper-light.—
This Antioch, then: Antiochus the great
Built up this city for his chiefest seat,
The fairest in all Syria;
I tell you what my authors say:
This king unto him took a feere,3
Who died and left a female heir,
So buxom, bilithe, and full of face,
As heaven had lent her all his grace;
With whom the father liking look'd,
And her to incest did provoke.
Bad child, worse father, to entice his own
To evil, should be done by none.
By custom what they did begin
Was with long use account no sin.
The beauty of this sinful dame
Made many princes thither frame,
To seek her as a bed-fellow,
In marriage pleasures play-fellow:
Which to prevent he made a law,

To keep her still and men in awe,
That whose ask'd her for his wife,
His riddle told not, lost his life:
So, for her many a wight did die,
As yond' grim looks do testify.
What now ensues, to the judgment of your eye
I give, my cause who best can justify. [Exit

SCENE I.—Antioch. A Room in the Palace.
Enter Antiochus, Pericles, and Attendants.

Ant. Young prince of Tyre, you have at large receiv'd
The danger of the task you undertake.
Per. I have, Antiochus, and with a soul
Embolden'd with the glory of her praise,
Think death no hazard in this enterprise. [Music.
Ant. Bring in our daughter, clothed like a bride,
For the embraces even of Jove himself;
At whose conception, (till Lucina reign'd)
Nature this dowry gave, to glad her presence,
The senate-house of Planes all did sit,
To knit in her their best perfections.

Enter the Daughter of Antiochus.

Per. See, where she comes, apparel'd like the spring
Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the king
Of every virtue gives renown to men!
Her face, the book of praises, where is read
Nothing but curious pleasures, as from thence Sorrow were ever ras'd, and tasty wrath
Could never be her mild companion.
Ye gods, that made me man, and sway in love,
That have inflam'd desire in my breast,
To taste the fruit of ye celestial tree,
Or die in the adventure, be my helps,
As I am son and servant to your will,
To compass such a boundless' happiness!

Ant. Prince Pericles,—
Per. That would be son to great Antiochus.
Ant. Before thee stands this fair Hesperides.

1 Festive's days in old copies, Farmer made the change.
2 purchase in old copies.
3 Mate But in old copies.
4 Of the dorsep rated heads over the city gate.
5 rack'd: in old copies.
6 boundless: in old copies. Rowe made the change.
With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touch'd;
For death-like dragons here affright he hard:
Her face, like heaven, anticeth thee to view,
Her countess glory, which desert must gain;
And which, without desert, because thine eye
Presumes to reach. all thy whole head must die.
Yond' sometime famous princes, like thyself,
Drawn by report, adventurous by desire,
Tell thee with speechless tongues, and semblance pale,
That, without covering, save yond' field of stars,
They here stand martyrs, slain in Cupid's wars;
And with dead cheeks advise thee to desist,
For going on death's net, whom none resist.
Per. Antiochus, I thank thee, who hast taught
My trait mortality to know itself,
And by those fearful objects to prepare
This body, like to them, to what I must;
For death remember'd should be like a mirror,
Who tells us, life's but breath; to trust it, error.
I'll make my will, then; and as sick men do,
Who know the world, see heaven, but feeling wee,
Grape monkeys at earthly joys, as erst they did:
So, I beseech a happy peace to you,
And all good men, as every prince should do:
My riches to the earth from whence they came,
But my unspected fire of love to you.

To the Daughter of Antiochus.

Thus, ready for the way of life or death,
I wait the sharpest blow.

...[Aside.] Heaven, that I had thy head! he has found the meaning:
But I will glowe with him. [To him.] Young prince of Tyre,
Though through the tenour of our strict edict,
Your exposition misinterpreting,
We might proceed to cancel of your days,
Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree
As your fair self. doth tune us otherwise.
Forty days longer we do respite you;
If by which time our secret be undone,
This mercy shows, we'll joy in such a son:
And until then your entertain shall be,
As doth befit our honour, and your worth.

[Execut Antiochus, his Daughter, and Attendants.
Per. Like a bold champion, I assume the lists,
Nor ask advice of any other thought
But faithfulness, and courage.

The Riddle.

I am no viper, yet I feed
On mother's flesh, which did me breed;
I sought a husband, at their labour,
I found that kindness in a father:
He's father, son, and husband mild,
I mother, wife, and yet child.
How they may be, and yet in two,
As you will live, resolve it you.

Sharp physic is the last: but, O you powers,
That give heaven countless eyes to view men's acts,
Why cloud they not their sights perpetually,
If this be true, which makes me pale to read it?
Fair glass of light, I lov'd you, and could still,
Were not this glorious casket stor'd with ill;
But I must tell you,—now, my thoughts revol
For he's no man on whom perfections wait,
That, knowing sin within, will touch the gate.
You're a fair viol, and your sense the strings,
Who, finger'd to make man his lawful music,
Would draw heaven down and all the gods to hearken;
But being play'd upon before your time,
Held only danseeth to harsh a chime.
Good sooth, I care not for you.

...[Aside.] Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy life,
For that's an article within our law,
As dangerous as the rest. Your time's expir'd:
Either expound now, or receive your sentence.

...[Aside.] Great king,
Few love to hear the sins they love to act;
'T would braid yourself too near for me to tell it.
We hate the prince of Tyre, and thou must kill him:
It fits thee not to ask the reason why,
Because we bid it. Say, is it done?

Thal. My lord,
'Tis done.

Enter a Messenger.

Ant. Enough.—
Let your breath cool yourself, telling your haste.

Mess. My lord, prince Pericles is fled.

[Exit Messenger.

Ant. Will live, fly after: and, as a arrow, shot
From a well-experienced archer, hits the mark
His eye doth level at, so ne'er return,
Unless thou say Prince Pericles is dead.

Thal. My lord, if I
Can ge' him once within my pistol's length,
I'll make him sure: so, farewell to your highness. [Exit.

Ant. Thalidair, adieu.—Till Pericles be dead,
My heart can lend no succour to my head. [Exit.

SCENE II.—Tyre. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Pericles, Helicanus, and other Lords.

Per. Let none disturb us: why should this change of thoughts?
The sad companion, dull-eyed melancholy,
By most, 'tis said a guest is, not an hour,
In the day's glorious walk, or peaceful night.
The tomb where grief should sleep, can breed me quiet.
Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes shun them,
And danger, which I fear'd, is at Antioch.
Whose arm seems far too short to hit me here;
Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits,
Nor yet the other's distance comfort me.
Then, it is thus: that passions of the mind,
That have their first conception by mis-dread,
Have after-nourishment and life by care;
And what was first but fear what might be done,
Grows elder now, and cares it be not done:
And so with me:—the great Antiochus
(Gainst whom I am too little to contend,
Since he's so great, can make his will his act)
Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence:
Nor boots it me to say, I honour,
If he suspect I may dishonour him:
And what may make him blush in being known.
He'll stop the course by which it might be known.
With hostile forces he'll o'erspread the land.
And with the oaten9 of war will look so huge,
Amazement shall drive courage from the state;
Our men be vanquish'd ere they do resist.
And subjects punish'd that me'er thought offence:
Which care of them, not pity of myself.
Who am I no more but as the tops of trees,
Which fence the roots they grow by, and defend them)
Makes both my body pine, and soul to languish,
And punish that before, that he would punish.

1 Lord. Joy and all comfort in your sacred breast.
2 Lord. And keep your mind, till you return to us,
Peaceful and comfortable.

Hel. Peace, peace! and give experience tongue.
They do abuse the king, that flatter him:
For flattery is the bellows blows up sin:
The thing which is flatter'd, but a spark,
To which that blast9 gives heat and stronger glowing:
Whereas reproach, obedient and in order,
Fits kings, as they are men, for they may err:

[when signior Sooth, here, does proclaim a peace.
He flatters you: no makes war upon your life.
Prince, pardon me, or strike me, if you please;
I cannot be much lower than my knees.

Per. All leave us else; but let your cares o'er-look
What shipping, and what landing's in our haven,
And then return to us. [Exit Lords.] Helicanus,
Hast moved us: what seest thou in our looks?

Hel. An angry brow, dread lord.

Per. If there be such a dart in prince's frowns,
How durst thy tongue move anger to our face?

Hel. How dare the plants look up to heaven, from whence
They have their nourishment?

Per. Thou know'st I have power
To take thy life from thee.

Hel. I have ground the axe myself.
Do you but strike the blow.

Per. Sit down; thou art no flatterer:
I thank thee for it; and heaven forbid,
That kings should let their ears hear their faults hid
By counsellor, and servant for a prince,
Who by thy wisdom make'st a prince thy servant,
What would'st thou have me do?

Hel. To hear with patience
Such griefs as you yourself do lay upon yourself.

Per. Thou speakest like a physician, Helicanus,
That ministers a potion unto me.
That thou wouldst tremble to receive thyself.
Attend me, then: I went to Antioch,
Where, as thou know'st, against the face of death
I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty,
From whence an issue I might propagate,
Are arms to princes, and bring joys to subjects.
Her face was to mine eye beyond all wonder;
The rest (hark in thine ear) as black as incest:
Which by my knowledge found, the sinful father
Seem'd not to strike, but smooth; but thou know'st this
'Tis time to fear, when tyrants seem to kiss,
Which fear so grew in me, I hither fled
Under the covering of a careful night,
Who seem'd my good protector: and being here,
Bethought me what was past, what might succeed.
I knew him tyrannous; and tyrants' fears
Decrease not, but grow faster than the years.
And should he doubt it, (as no doubt he doth) That I should open to the listening air,
How many worthy princes' bloods were shed,
To keep his bed of blackness unlayd ope,
To top that doubt he'll fill this land with arms,
And make pretence of wrong that I have done him,
When all, for mine, if I may call 't, offence,
Must feel war's blow, who spares not innocence:
Which love to all, of which thyself art one, *
Who now reprov'st me for it—

Hel. Alas, sir! Drear.

Per. Drew sleep out of mine eyes, blood from my

SCENE IV. PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

Who either by public war, or private treason,
Will take away your life.
Therefore, my lord, go travel for a while,
Till that his rage and anger be forgot,
Or till the Destinies do cut his thread of life.
Your rule direct to any; if to me,
Day serves not light more faithful than I'll be.

Per. I do not doubt thy faith;
But should he wrong my liberties in my absence?
Hel. We'll mingle our bloods together in the earth,
From whence we had our being and our birth.
Per. Tyre, I now look from thee, then; and to Tharsus
Intend my travel. Where I'll hear from thee,
And by whose letters I'll dispose myself.
The care I had, and have, of subjects' good,
On thee I lay, whose wisdom's strength can bear it.
I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath;
Who shuns not to break one, will sure crack both.
But in our orbs we live so round and safe,
That time of both this truth shall ne'er convince,
Thou show'st a subject's shine, I a true prince.

[Exit.]

Enter Thaliard.
Thal. So this is Tyre, and this is the court. Here must I kill king Pericles: and if I do not, I am sure to be hang'd at home: 'tis dangerous.—Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets: now do I see he had some reason for it; for if a king bid a man be a villain, he is bound by the indenture of his oath to be one.—
Hush! here come the lords of Tyre.

Enter Helicanus, Escanes, and other Lords.
Hel. You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre,
Farther to question me of your king's departure:
His seal'd commission, left in trust with me,
Both speak sufficiently, he's gone to travel.
Thal. [Aside.] How! the king gone?
Hel. If farther yet you will be satisfied,
Why, as it were unlicensed of your loves,
He would depart, I'll give some light unto you.

Being at Antioch. [Aside.]
Hel. Roal Antiochus (on what cause I know not)
Took some displeasure at him: at least, he judg'd so;
And doubting lest that he had err'd or sin'd,
To show his sorrow he'd correct himself;
So puts himself unto the shipman's toil,
With whom each minute threatens life or death.
Thal. [Aside.] Well, I perceive
I shall not be hang'd now, although I would;
But since he's gone, the king's seas must please:
He scap'd the land, to perish at the sea,—
I'll present myself.—[To them.] Peace to the lords of Tyre.
Hel. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome.
Thal. From him I come,
With message unto princely Pericles:
But since my landing I have understood,
Your lord hath betook himself to unknown travels,
My message must return from whence it came.
Hel. We have no reason to desire it,
Commended to our master, not to us:
Yet, ere you shall depart, this we desire,
As friends to Antioch we may feast in Tyre. [Exit.]
And so in ours. Some neighbouring nation,
Taking advantage of our misery;
Hath stuff'd these hollow vessels with their power,
To beat us down, the which are down already;
And make a conquest of unhappy me,
Whereas no glory's got to overcome,
Lord. That's the least fear; for by the semblance
Of their white flags display'd, they bring us peace,
And come to us as favourers, not as foes.
Cle. Thou speak'st like him's untutor'd to repeat;
Who makes the fairest show means most deceit.
But bring they what they will, and what they can,
What need we fear?
The ground's the lowest, and we are half way there,
Go, tell their general we attend him here.
To know for what he comes, and whence he comes,
And what he craves.
Lord. I go, my lord.
Cle. Welcome is peace, if he on peace consist;?
If wars, we are unable to resist.
Enter Pericles with Attendants.
Per. Lord governor, for so we hear you are,
Let not our ships and number of our men,
Be, like a beacon fire'd, to amaze your eyes.

ACT II.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Here have you seen a mighty king
His child, I wis, to inceit bring;
A better prince, and benign lord,
That will prove awfyl both in deed and word.
Be quiet, then, as men should be,
Till he hath pass'd necessity.
I'll show you those in trouble's reign.
Losing a mite, a mountain gain.
The good in conversation
(To whom I give my benison)
Is still at Tharsus, where each man
Thinks all is writ he spoken can.
And to remember what he does,
Build his statue to make him glorious:
But tiding to the contrary
Are brought your eyes; what need speak I?
Dumb show.

Enter at one door Pericles, talking with Cleon; all the Train with them. Enter at another door, a Gentleman, with a Letter to Pericles: Pericles shews the Letter to Cleon; then gives the Messenger a reward, and knights him.

Gow. Good Helicane hath* stay'd at home,
Not to eat honey like a drone,
From others' labours: for though he strive
To killen bad, keep good alive;
And, to fulfil his prince's desire,
Sends word of all that hap's in Tyre:
How Thaliard came full bent with sin,
And bid intent, to murder him;
And that in Tharsus was not best
Longer for him to make his rest.
He knowing so,* put forth to seas,
Where when men been, there's seldom ease,
For now the wind begins to blow;
Thunder above, and deeps below,

We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre,
And seen the desolation of your streets;
Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears,
But to relieve them of their heavy load:
And these our ships you happily may think
Are like the Trojan horse, was stuff'd within
With bloody veins, expecting overthrow,
Are stord with corn to make your needy bread,
And give them life whom hunger starv'd half dead.
All. The gods of Greece protect you!
And we'll pray for you.

Per. Arise, I pray you, arise:
We do not look for reverence, but for love,
And harbourage for ourself, our ships, and men.
Cle. The which when any shall not gratify,
Or pay you with unthankfulness in thought,
Be it our wives, our children, or ourselves,
The curse of heaven and men succeed their evils!
Till when, (the which, I hope, shall ne'er be seen)
Your grace is welcome to our town and us.
Per. Which welcome we'll accept; feast here a while,
Until our stars that frown lend us a smile.

Enter Pericles, with Attendants.

Per. Lord governor, for so we hear you are,
Let not our ships and number of our men,
Be, like a beacon fire'd, to amaze your eyes.

SCENE I.—Pentapolis. An open Place by the Sea-side.

Enter Pericles, with.

Per. Yet cease your ire, you angry stars of heaven!
Wind, rain, and thunder, remember, earthly man
Is but a substance that must yield to you;
And I, as fits my nature, do obey you.
Alas! the sea hath cast me on the rocks,
Washed me from shore to shore, and left me breath
Nothing to think on, but ensuing death:
To be bereft a prince of all his fortunes;
And having thrown him from your watery grave,
Here have to die in peace is all he'll crave.

Enter three Fishermen.

Fish. What, ho, Pilch!
Fish. Ho! come, and bring away the acts
Fish. What, Patch-breech, I say!
Fish. What say you, master?
Fish. Look how thou stirrest now. Come away or I'll fetch thee with a warrant.
Fish. Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men, that were cast away before us even now.
Fish. Alas, poor souls! I grieved my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce keep ourselves.
Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much, when I saw the porpus, how he bounded and stumbled? they say

1 That: in old copies. 2 Him who is. 3 Stand. 4 that: in old copies. 5 doing so: in old copies. 6 Steevens made the ed agB to 7 A letter or covering.
they are half fish, half flesh: a plague on them! they ne'er come, but I look to be washed. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.

1 Fish. Why as men do a-land: the great ones eat up the little ones. I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fitly as to a whale; 'a plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a mouthful. Such whales have I heard on the land, who never leave gaping, till they've swallowed the whole parish, church, steeple, bells and all.

Per. A pretty moral.

3 Fish. But, master, if I had been the sexton, I would have been that day in the belfry.

2 Fish. Why, man?

3 Fish. Because he should have swallowed me too; and when I had been in his belly, I would have kept such a jangling of the bells, that he should never have left, till he cast bells, steeple, church, and parish up again. But if the good king Simonides were of my mind—

Per. Simonides?

3 Fish. We would purge the land of these drones, that rob the bee of her honey.

Per. How from the finny subject of the sea? These fishes tell the infirmities of men; And from their watery empire recollect All that may men approve, or men detect!— Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen.

2 Fish. Honest! good fellow, what's that? if it be a day fits you, search out of the calendar, and no body look after it.

Per. Y' may see, the sea hath cast me upon your coast.

2 Fish. What a drunken knave was the sea, to cast thee in our way?

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind, In that vast towns-court, hath made the ball For them to play upon, entreats you pity him; He asks of you, that never us'd to beg.

1 Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg? here's them in our country of Greece, gets more with begging, than we can do with working.

2 Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes, then? Per. I never practis'd it.

2 Fish. Nay, then thou wilt starve, sure; for here's nothing to be got now a-days, unless thou canst fish for't.

Per. What I have been I have have to know, But what I am want teaches me to think on; A man throng'd up with cold: my veins are chill, And have no more of life, than may suffice To give my tongue that heat to ask your help; Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead, For that I am a man, pray see me buried.

1 Fish. Die quoth? Now, gods forbid it! I have a gown here; come, put it on; keep thee warm. Now, afore me, a handsome fellow! Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fasting-days, and more 'o'er puddings and plug-jacks; and thou shalt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, sir.

2 Fish. Hark you, my friend, you said you could not beg.

Per. I did but crave.

2 Fish. But crave? Then I'll turn craver too, and so I shall 'scape whippimg.

Per. Why, are all your beggars whipped, then?

2 Fish. O! not all, my friend. not all; for if all your beggars were whipped, I would wish no better offices than to be bandle. But, master, I'll go draw up the net.

[Exeunt Two of the Fishermen.

Per. How well this honest mirth becomes their labour!

1 Fish. Hark you, sir; do you know where you are? Per. Not well.

1 Fish. Why, I'll tell you; this is called Pentapolis, and our king the good Simonides.

Per. The good king Simonides, do you call him? 1 Fish. Ay, sir; and he deserves to be so called, for his peaceable reign, and good government.

Per. He is a happy king, since he gains from his subjects the name of good by his government. How far is his court distant from this shore?

1 Fish. Marry, sir, 'tis but a day's journey; and I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and to-morrow is her birthday; and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world, to joust and tourney for her love.

Per. Were my fortunes equal to my desires, I could wish to make one there.

1 Fish. O, sir! things must be as they may; and what a man cannot get, he may lawfully deal for. His wife's soul—

Re-enter the Two Fishermen, drawing up a Net.

2 Fish. Help, master, help! here's a fish hangs in the net, like a poor man's right in the law; 't will hardly come out. Ha! bots on 't; 't is come at last, and 't is turned to a rusty armour.

Per. An armour, friends! I pray you, let me see it. Thanks, fortune, yet, that after all crosses Thou giv'st me somewhat to repair myself: And though it was mine own, part of mine heritage, Which my dear father did bequeath to me, With this strict charge (even as he left his life) "Keep it, my Pericles, it hath been a shield Twixt me and death;" (and pointed to this brace) "For that it sav'd me, keep it; in like necessiety, The which (the gods protect thee from, it may defend thee.)"

It kept where I kept, I so dearly lov'd it, Till the rough seas, that spare not any man, Took it in rage, though calm'd, have given 't again. I thank thee for 't: my shipwreck now's no ill, Since I have here my father's gift in 's will.

1 Fish. What mean you, sir?

Per. To beg of you, kind friends, this coat of worth, For it was sometime target to a king; I know it by this mark. He lov'd me dearly, And for his sake I wish the having of it; And that you'd guide me to your sovereign's court, Where with it I may appear a gentleman: And if that ever my low fortunes better, I'll pay your bounties; till then, rest your debtor. 1 Fish. Why, wilt thou tourney for the lady?

Per. I'll show the virtue I have borne in arms.

1 Fish. Why, do ye take it; and the gods give the good on't!

2 Fish. Ay, but hark you, my friend: 't was we that made up this garment through the rough seas of the waters: there are certain condolements, certain vails I hope, sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had it.

Per. Believe it, I will.

By your furtherance I am cloth'd in steel; And spite of all the rapture of the sea, This jewel holds his bidding on my arm: Unto thy value will I mount myself

Upon a coursers, whose delightful steps
Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread.—
Only, my friend, I yet am unprovided
Of a pair of bases.

2 Fish. We'll sure provide: thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair, and I'll bring thee to the court myself.

Per. Then honour be but a goal to my will!
This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill. [Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Platform leading to the Lists. A Pavilion near it, for the reception of the King, Princess, Ladies, Lords, &c.

Enter Simonides, Thaisa, Lords, and Attendants.

Sim. Are the knights ready to begin the triumph?

1 Lord. They are, my liege;
And stay your coming to present themselves.
Sim. Return them, we are ready; and our daughter,
In honour of whose birth these triumphs are,
Sits here, like beauty's child, whom nature gat
For men to see, and seeing wonder at. [Exit a Lord.

Thaï. It pleaseth you, my royal father, to express
My commendations great, whose merit's less.
Sim. 'T is fit it should be so; for princes are
A model, which heaven makes like to itself:
As jewels lose their glory if neglected,
So princes their renown, if not respected.
'T is now your honour, daughter, to explain
The labour of each knight in his device,
Thaï. Which, to preserve mine honour, I'll perform.

Enter a Knight: he passe over the Stage, and his Square presents his Shield to the Princess.

Sim. Who is the first that doth prefer himself?
Thaï. A knight of Sparta, my renowned father;
And the device he bears upon his shield
Is a black Æthiop, reaching at the sun;
The word, Lux tua vita mihi.

Sim. He loves you well that holds his life of you.

[The second Knight passes over.

Who is the second that presents himself?
Thaï. A prince of Macedon, my royal father;
And the device he bears upon his shield
Is an arm'd knight, that's conquer'd by a lady:
The motto thus, in Spanish, Piu per dulceura que per fuerza.

[The third Knight passes over.

Sim. And what the third?
Thaï. The third of Antioch;
And his device, a wreath of chirality:
The word, Me pompe provet apex.

[The fourth Knight passes over.

Sim. What is the fourth?
Thaï. A burning torch, that's turn'd upside down;
The word, Quod me sit, me extinguit.

Sim. Which shows that beauty hath his power and will,
Which can as well inflame, as it can kill.

[The fifth Knight passes over.

Thaï. The fifth, a hand environ'd with clouds,
Holding out gold that's by the touchstone tried;
The motto thus, Sic spectanda fides.

[The sixth Knight passes over.

Sim. And what's the sixth and last, the which the knight himself
With such a graceful courtesy deliver'd?
Thaï. He seems to be a stranger; but his present
Is a wither'd branch, that's only green at top:
The motto, In hac spe tiro.

Sim. A pretty moral:
From the dejected state wherein he is,
He hopes by his fortunes yet may flourish.

1 Lord. He had need mean better, than his outward show
Can any way speak in his just commend;
For by his rusty outside he appears
To have practis'd more the whisperstock, than the lance
2 Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he comes
To an honour'd triumph strangely furnished.
3 Lord. And on set purpose let his armour rust
Until this day, to scour it in the dust.
Sim. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us see
The outward habit by the inward man.
But stay, the knights are coming: we'll withdraw
Into the gallery. [Exit.

[Great Shouts, and all cry. The mean knight

Enter Simonides, Thaisa, Ladies, Lords, Knights, and Attendants.

Sim. Knights,
To say you are welcome were superfluous.
To place upon the volume of your deeds,
As in a title-page, your worth in arms,
Were more than you expect, or more than's fit,
Since every worth in show commends itself.
Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast:
You are princes, and my guests.
Thaï. But you, [To Per.] my knight and guest;
To whom this wreath of victory I give,
And crown you king of this day's happiness.
Per. 'Tis more by fortune, lady, than my merit.
Sim. Call it by what you will: the day is yours:
And here, I hope, is none that envies it.
In framing an artist art hath thus decreed,
To make some good, but others to exceed;
And you're her labour'd scholar. Come, queen o' the feast,
(For, daughter, so you are) here take your place:
Marshal the rest, as they deserve their grace.

Knights. We are honour'd much by good Simonides.
Sim. Your presence glads our days; honour we love.
For who hates honour hates the gods above.

Marshal. Sir, your Grace's place is here.

Per. Some other is more in

1 Knight. Contend not, sir; for we are gentlemen,
That neither in our hearts, nor outward eyes,
Envy the great, nor do the low despise.

Per. You are right courtesie knights.

Sim. Sit, sir; sit.
By Jove, I wonder, that is king of thoughts,
These cates resist me, he not thought upon.
Thaï. By Juno, that is queen
Of marriage, all the viands that I eat
Do seem unsavoury, wishing him my meat.
Sure, he's a gallant gentleman.

Sim. He's but a country gentleman
He has done no more than other knights have done,
He has broken a staff, or so: so, let it pass.

Thaï. To me he seems like diamond to glass.

Per. Yond' king's to me like to my father's picture
Which tells me in that glory once he was;
Had princes sit, like stars, above his throne,
And he the sun for them to reverence.
None that behold him, but like lesser lights
Did vail their crowns to his supremacy;
Where now his son, like a glow-worm in the night,
The which hath fire in darkness, none in light:
Whereby I see that Time's the king of men;
He's both their parent, and he is their grave,

1 A mantle, hanging from the middle to the knees. To entertain old copies Steevens made the change. 2 Whip handles.
These knights unto their several lodgings!—Yours, sir
We have given order to be next our own.

Per. I am at your grace's pleasure.
Sim. Princes, it is too late to talk of love,
And that's the mark I know you level at:
Therefore, each one betake him to his rest;
To-morrow all for speeding do their best.

SCENE IV.—Tyre. A Room in the Governor's House

Enter Helicanus and Escanes.

Hel. No, Escanes; know this of me, Antiochus from incest liv'd not free:
For which the most high gods, not minding longer
To withhold the vengeance, that they had in store,
Due to this heinous capital offence.
Even in the height and pride of all his glory,
When he was seated, and his daughter with him,
In a chariot of inestimable value,
A fire from heaven came, and shrivell'd up
Those bodies, even to loathing; for they so stunk,
That all these eyes ador'd them ere their fall,
Scorn now their hand should give them burial.

Esca. 'T was very strange.

Hel. And yet but just; for though
This king were great, his greatness was no guard
To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward.

Esca. 'T is very true.

Enter Three Lords.

1 Lord. See! not a man, in private conference
Or council, has respect with him but he.

2 Lord. It shall no longer grieve without reproof
3 Lord. And curs'd be he that will not second it

1 Lord. Follow me, then.—Lord Helicanus, a word.

Hel. With me? and welcome.—Happy day, my lords

Lord. Know, that our griefs are risen to the top,
And now at length they overflow their banks.

Hel. Your griefs! for what? wrong not the prince you love.

1 Lord. Wrong not yourself, then, noble Helican;
But if the prince do live, let us salute him,
Or know what ground's made happy by his breath.
If in the world he live, we'll seek him out;
If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there;
And be resolved, he lives to govern us,
Or dead, gives cause to mourn his funeral,
And leaves us to our free election.

2 Lord. Whose death's, indeed, the strongest in our censure:

And knowing this kingdom is without a head,
Like goodly buildings left without a roof,
Soon fall to ruin, your noble self,
That best know'st how to rule, and how to reign.
We thus submit unto, our sovereign.

All. Live, noble Helican!

Hel. Try' honour's cause; forbear your suffrages
If that you love prince Pericles forbear.
Take I your wish, I leap into the seas,
Where's hourly trouble for a minute's case.
A twelvemonth longer, let me entreat you
To forbear the absence of your king;
If in which time expir'd he not return,
I shall with aged patience bear your yoke,
But if I cannot win you to this love,
Go search like nobles, like noble subjects.
And in your search spend your adventurous worth.
Whom if you find, and win unto return,
You shall like diamonds sit about his crown.

1 Lord. To wisdom he's a fool that will not yield
And since lord Helican enjoineth us,
We with our travels will endeavour.

_Hel._ Then, you love us, we you, and we'll clasp lands:
When peers thus knit a kingdom ever stands. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Pentapolis. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Simeonides, reading a Letter: the Knights meet
him.

1 Knight. Good morrow to the good Simeonides.

_Sim._ Knights, from my daughter this I let you know:
That for this twelvemonth she'll not undertake
A married life.

Her reason to herself is only known,
Which yet from her by no means can I get.

2 Knight. Nay, we not get access to her, my lord?

_Sim._ Faith, by no means: she hath so strictly tied her
To her chamber, that it is impossible.

One twelve moons more she'll wear Diana's livery;
This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vow'd,
And on her virgin honour will not break it.

3 Knight. Though loath to bid farewell, we take our leaves. [Exeunt.

_Sim._ So,
They're well despatch'd: now to my daughter's letter.
She tells me here, she'll wed the stranger knight,
Or never more to view nor day nor light.
'Tis well, mistress; your choice agrees with mine;
I like that well:—nay, how absolute she's in't,
Not minding whether I dislike or no.

Well, I commend her choice,
And will no longer have it be delay'd.
Soft! here he comes: I must dissemble it.

Enter PERICLES.

_Per._ All fortune to the good Simeonides!

_Sim._ To you as much, sir. I am beholding to you
For your sweet music this last night: I do
Protest, my ears were never better fed
With such delightful pleasing harmony.

_Per._ It is your grace's pleasure to commend,
Not my desert.

_Sim._ Sir, you are music's master.

_Per._ The worst of all her scholars, my good lord.

_Sim._ Let me ask one thing.

What do you think of my daughter, sir?

_Per._ As of a most virtuous princess.

_Sim._ And she is fair too, is she not?

_Per._ As a fair day in summer: wondrous fair.

_Sim._ My daughter, sir, thinks very well of you;
Ay, so well, sir, that you must be her master,
And she'll your scholar be: therefore, look to it.

_Per._ I am unworthy for her schoolmaster.

_Sim._ She thinks not so; peruse this writing else.

_Per._ [Aside.] What's here?

A letter, that she loves the knight of Tyre?
T is the king's subtlety, to have my life.

[To him.] O seek not to entrap me, gracious lord,
A stranger and distressed gentleman.
That never aim'd so high to love your daughter,
But bent all offices to honour her.

_Sim._ Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter, and thou art
A villain.

_Per._ By the gods, I have not.
Never did thought of mine levies offence;
Nor never did my actions yet commence
A deed might gain her love, or your displeasure.

_Sim._ Traitor, thou liest.

_Per._ Traitor! Ay, traitor.

_Per._ Even in his throat, unless it be the king,
That calls me traitor, I return the lie.

_Sim._ [Aside.] Now, by the gods, I do applaud his courage.

_Per._ My actions are as noble as my thoughts,
That never relish'd of a base descent.
I came unto your court for honour's cause,
And not to be a rebel to her state;
And he that otherwise accounts of me,
This sword shall prove he's honour's enemy.

_Sim._ No!—
Here comes my daughter, she can witness it.

Enter THAISA.

_Per._ Then, as you are as virtuous as fair,
Resolve your angry father, if my tongue
Did e'er solict, or my hand subscribe
To any syllable that made love to you?

_Tha._ Why, sir, if you had,
Who takes offence at that would make me glad?

_Sim._ Yea, mistress, are you so peremptory?

[Aside.] I am glad on't with all my heart.

_To her._ I'll Jame you; I'll bring you in subjection.
Will you, not having my consent,
Bestow your love and your affections
Upon a stranger? [Aside.] who, for ought I know,
May be, (nor can I think the contrary)
As great in blood as I myself.

[To her.] Therefore, hear you, mistress; either frame
Your will to mine; and you, sir, hear you,
Either be rul'd by me, or I will make you—
Man and wife—Nay, come; your hands,
And lips must seal it too;
And being join'd, I'll thus your hopes destroy;
And for farther grief.—God give you joy!—

What, are you both pleas'd?

_Tha._ Yes, if you love me, sir.

_Per._ Even as my life, my blood that fosters it.

_Sim._ What! are you both agreed?

_Tha._ Yes, if't please your majesty.

_Sim._ It pleaseth me so well, I'll see you wed;
Then, with what haste you can, get you to bed.

[Exeunt.

ACT III.

Enter Gower.

_Gow._ Now sleep yslaked hath the rout;
No din but snores the house about,
Made louder by the o'er-fed breast
Of this most pompous marriage feast.
The cat with eyne of burning coals,
Now couches 'fore the mouse's hole;

And crickets sing at the oven's mouth,
Are the blithe for their drouth.
Hymen hath brought the bride to bed,
Where, by the loss of maidenhead,
A babe is moulded.—Be attaint,
And time that is so briefly spent,
With your fine fancies quaintly cecho;
What's dumb in show, I'll plain with speeche.
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

SCENE I.

Dumb Show.

Enter PERICLES and Simonides at one door, with attendants; a Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives PERICLES a Letter: Pericles shows it to Simonides; the Lords kneel to Pericles. Then, enter Thaisa with child, and Lychorida: Simonides shows his Daughter the Letter; she rejoices: she and Pericles take leave of her Father, and all depart.

Gone. By many a der. and painful perch
Of Pericles the careful search
By the four opposing coines, Which the world together joins, Is made, with all due diligence, That horse, and sail, and high expence. Can stand the quest. At last from Tyre (Fame answering the most strange Inquire,) To the court of king Simonides Are letters brought, the tenour these:— Antiochus and his daughter dead;
The men of Tyres on the head Of Helicanus would set on The crown of Tyre, but he will none The mutiny he there hastes t' oppress, Says to them, if king Pericles Come not home in twice six moons, He, obedient to their dooms, Will take the crown. The sum of this, Brought hither to Pentapolis, Yravished the regions round, And every one with claps 'gan sound, "Our heir apparent is a king! Who dream'd, who thought of such a thing?"
Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre: His queen, with child, makes her desire (Which who shall cross?) along to go. Omit we all their dole and woe: Lychorida, her nurse, she takes, And so to sea. Then, vessel shakes On Neptune's bilow: half the flood Hath their keel cut; but fortune's mood Varies again: the grizzly north, Disgorges such a tempest forth That, as a duck for life that dives, So up and down the poor ship drives. The lady shrieks, and well-a-near, Does fall in travail with her fear: And what ensues in this self storm Shall for itself itself perform. I will relate, action may Conveniently the rest convey, Which might not what by me is told. In your imagination hold This stage the ship, upon whose deck The seas-lost Pericles appears to speak. [Exit.}

Divinest patroness and midwife, gentle
To those that cry by night, convey thy deity
Aboard our dancing boat; make swift the range
Of my queen's travails!—Now, Lychorida—

Enter Lychorida, with an Infant.

Lyc. Here is a thing too young for such a place, Who, if it had conceit, would die as I Am like to do. Take in your arms this piece Of your dead queen.

Per. How! how, Lychorida!
Lyc. Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm.
Here's all that is left living of your queen, A little daughter: for the sake of it, Be manly, and take comfort.
Per. O you gods! Why do you make us love your goodly gifts, And snatch them straight away? We, here below, Recall not what we give, and therein may Use honour with you.

Lyc. Patience, good sir, Even for this charge.

Per. Now, mild may be thy life, For a more blust'rous birth had never babe: Quiet and gentle thy conditions;
For thou 'rt the rudest welcome to this world, That e'er was prince's child. Happy what follows! Thou hast as eluding a mativity; As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven can make, To herald thee from the womb: even at the first, Thy loss is more than can thy portage quit, With all thou canst find here.—Now the good gods Throw their best eyes upon it!

Enter Two Sailors.

1 Sail. What, courage, sir! God save you.
Per. Courage enough. I do not fear the flaw; It hath done to me the worst: yet, for the love Of this poor infant, this fresh new sea-farer, I would it would be quiet.
1 Sail. Slack the bowlines there; thou wilt not, wilt thou?—Blow, and split thyself.
2 Sail. But sea-room, an the brine and cloudy billow kiss the moon, I care not.
1 Sail. Sir, your queen must overboard; the sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie till the ship be cleared of the dead.
Per. That's your superstition.
1 Sail. Pardon us, sir; with us at sea it hath been still observed, and we are strong in earnest. There fore briefly yield her, for she must overboard straight.
Per. As you think meet.—Most wretched queen!
Lyc. Here she lies, sir.
Per. A terrible child-bed hast thou had, my dear.
No light, no fire: the unfriendly elements Forgot thee utterly; nor have I time To give thee hallow'd to thy grave, but straight Must cast thee, scarcely coffind, in the ooze; Where, for a monument upon thy bones, And aye*—remaining lamps, the belching whale, And hummimg water must overwhelm thy corpse, Lying with simple shells.—O Lychorida! Bid Nestor bring me spices, ink and paper, My casket and my jewels; and bid Nicander Bring me the satin coffin* lay the babe Upon the pillow. He thee, whiles I say A priestly farewell to her: suddenly, woman.

2 Sail. Sir, we have a chest beneath the hatches, caulk'd and bitumen ready.

1 daily: in old copies. 2 Blast. 3 eastern: in old copies M. Mason made the change. Boswell reads: custom. 4 avre: in old copies Malone made the change. 5 coffin: in old copies
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

ACT III.

Per. I thank thee. Mariner, say what coast is this?

2 Sail. We are near Tharsus.

Per. Thither, gentle mariner.

After thy course for Tyre. When canst thou reach it?

2 Sail. By break of day, if the wind cease.

Per. O't make for Tharsus.—

There will I visit Cleon, for the babe

Cannot hold out to Tyrus: there I'll leave it

At careful nursing.—Go thy ways, good mariner:

I'll bring the body presently. [Exit.

SENE II.—Ephesus. A Room in Cerimon's House.

Enter Cerimon, a Servant, and some Persons who have been Shipwrecked.

Cer. Philemon, ho!

Phil. Dost my lord call?

Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men:

It has been a turbulent and stormy night.

Serv. I have been in many; but such a night as this,

Till now I ne'er endur'd.

Cer. Your master will be dead ere you return:

There's nothing can be minister'd to nature,

That can recover him. Give this to the pothecary,

And tell me how it works. [To Philemon.

Enter Two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Good morrow, sir.

2 Gent. Good morrow to your lordship.

Cer. Gentlemen,

Why do you stir so early?

1 Gent. Sir,

Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea,

Shook, as the earth did quake;

The very principals did seem to rend,

And all to topple. Pure surprise and fear

Made me to quit the house.

2 Gent. This is the cause we trouble you so early;

'Tis not our husbandry.

Cer. O! you say well.

1 Gent. But I much marvel that your lordship, having

Rich tire about you, should at these early hours

Shake off the golden slumber of repose.

'Tis most strange;

Nature should be so conversant with pain,

Being thereto not compell'd.

Cer. I hold it ever,

Virtue and cunning were endowments greater
Than nobleness and riches: careless heirs
May the two latter darken and expend;

But immortality attends the former,
Making a man a god. 'Tis known, I ever

Have studied physic, through which secret art,

By turning o'er authorities, I have

(Together with my practice) made familiar
To me and to my aid, the blest infusions

That dwell in vegetibles, in metals, stones:

And can speak of the disturbances that nature

Works, and of her eues; which doth give me

A more content, in course of true delight,

Than to be thirsty after tottering honour,

Or tie my treasure up in silken bags,

To please the fool and death.

2 Gent. Your honour has through Ephesus pour'd forth

Your charity, and hundreds call themselves

Your creatures, who by you have been restor'd:

And not your knowledge, your personal pain, but even

Your purse, still open. hath built lord Cerimon

Such strong renown as time shall never—

Enter Two Servants with a Chest.

Serv. So; lift there.

Cer. What is that?

Serv. Sir, even now

Did the sea toss upon our shores this chest:

'Tis of some wreck.

Cer. Set it down; let's look upon it.

2 Gent. 'T is like a coffin, sir.

Cer. Whate'er it be,

'Tis wondrous heavy. Wrench it open straight:

If the sea's stomach be o'ercharg'd with gold,

'Tis a good constraint of fortune it belches upon us.

2 Gent. 'T is so, my lord.

Cer. How close 'tis caulk'd and bitum'd

Did the sea cast it up?

Serv. I never saw so huge a billow, sir,

As toss'd it upon shore.

Cer. Come, wrench it open.

Soft, soft! it smells most sweetly in my sense.

2 Gent. A delicate odour.

Cer. As ever hit my nostril. So, up with it.

O, you most potent gods! what's here? a corse?

1 Gent. Most strange!

Cer. Shirrouded in cloth of state; balm'd and en-

treasured

With full bags of spices! A passport too:

Apollo, perfect me if the characters! [Unfolds a Scroll

"Here I give to understand, [Reads

(If o'er this coffin drive a-land)

I, king Pericles, have lost

This queen, worth all our mundane cost.

Who finds her, give her burying;

She was the daughter of a king;

Besides this treasure for a fee,

The gods requite his charity!"

If thou livest, Pericles, thou hast a heart.

That even cracks for woo!—This chanc'd to-night.

2 Gent. Most likely, sir.

Cer. Nay, certainly to-night;

For look, how fresh she looks.—They were too rough.

That threw her in the sea. Make fire within:

Fetch hither all the boxes in my closet.

Death may usurp nature many hours,

And yet the fire of life kindle again

The overpressed spirits. I heard

Of an Egyptian, that had nine hours lien dead,

Who was by good appliance recovered.

Enter a Servant, with Boxes, Napkins, and Fire.

Well said, well said; the fire and the clothes.—

The rough and woful music that we have,

Cause it to sound, beseech you.

The vial once more;—how thou stir'st, thou block!—

The music there!—I pray you, give her air.

Gentlemen,

This queen will live: nature awakes a warm

Breath out of her: she hath not been entranc'd

Above five hours. See, how she 'gins to blow

Into life's flower again!

1 Gent. The heavens

Through you increase our wonder, and set up

Your fame for ever.

Cer. She is alive! behold,

Her eyelids, cases to those heavenly jewels

Which Pericles hath lost,

Begin to part their fringes of bright gold:

The diamonds of a most praised water

Do appear to make the world twice rich. Live,

And make us weep to hear your fate, fair creature
SCENE IV.

PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

901

Rare as you seem to be!

[She moves.

That.]  O dear Diana!

Where am I? Where's my lord? What world is this?

2 Gent. Is not this strange?

1 Gent. Most rare.

Cer. Hush, gentle neighbours! Leave me your hands; to the next chamber bear her.

Get linen: now this matter must be look'd to,

For her relapse is mortal. Come, come;

And Ascanius guide us!

[Exeunt, carrying Thaisa out.]

SCENE III.—Tharsus. A Room in Cleon's House.

Enter Pericles, Cleon, Dionysa, Lychoria, and Marina.

Per. Most honour'd Cleon, I must needs be gone:

My twelve months are expir'd, and Tyrus stands in a litigious peace. You, and your lady,

Take from my heart all thankfulness; the gods

Make up the rest upon you!

Cle. Your shafts of fortune, though they hurt you,

Yet glance full wanderingly on us. [mortaly,

Dion. O, your sweet queen!

That the strict fates had pleas'd you had brought her

To have bless'd mine eyes! [lither,

Per. We cannot but obey

The powers above us. Could I rage and roar

As both the sea she lies in, yet the end

Must be as 'tis. My gentle babe Marina (whom,

For she was born at sea, I have nam'd so) here

I charge your charity withal, and leave her

The infant of your care; beseeching you

To give her princely training, that she may

Be manner'd as she is born.

Cle. Fear not, my lord, but think

Your grace, that fed my country with your corn.

(For which the people's prayers still fall upon you)

Must in your child be thought on. If neglect

Should therein make me vile, the common body,

By you reliev'd, would force me to my duty;

But if to that my nature need a spur,

The gods revenge it upon me and mine,

To the end of generation.

PERICLES.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Imagine Pericles arriv'd at Tyre,

Welcom'd and settled to his own desire:

His woful queen we leave at Ephesus,

Unto Diana there a votarist.

Now to Marina bend your mind,

Whom our fast-growing scene must find

At Tharsus, and by Cleon train'd

In music, letters; who hath gain'd

Of education all the grace,

Which makes her both the heart and place

Of general wonder. But alack!

That monster envy, oft the wrack

Of earnest praise, Marina's life

Seeks to take off by treason's knife

And in this kind hath our Cleon

One daughter, and a wench full grown,

Even ripe for marriage rite? this maid

Hight Philoten; and it is said

For certain in our story, she

ACT IV.

Would ever with Marina be:

Bo't when she weav'd the sieled silk

With fingers, long, small, white as milk;

Or when she would with sharp needle wound

The cambrie, which she made more sound

By hurting it; or when to the lute

She sung, and made the night-bird mute,

That still records with moan; or when

She would with rich and constant pen

Vail to her mistress Diana; still

This Philoten contends in skill

With absolute Marina: so

With the dove of Paphos might the crow

Vie feathers white. Marina gets

All praises, which are paid as debts,

And not as given. This so darks

In Philoten all graceful marks,

That Cleon's wife, with envy rare,

A present murderer does prepare

For good Marina, that her daughter

Might stand peerless by this slaughter.
The sooner her vile thoughts to steal,
Lychorida, our nurse, is dead:
And cursed Dionyza hath
The pregnant instrument of wrath
Prest! for this blow. The unborn event
I do commend to your content:
Only I carried winged time
Post on the lame feet of my rhyme;
Which never could I so convey,
Unless your thoughts went on my way.—
Dionyza doth appear,
With Leonine, a murderer. [Exit.]

SCENE I.—Tharsus. An open Place near the Seashore.

Enter Dionyza and Leonine.

Dion. Thy oath remember; thou hast sworn to do't;
'Tis but a blow, which never shall be known.
Thou canst not do a thing i' the world so soon,
To yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience,
Which is but cold, inflaming love in thy bosom,
Inflame too nicely; nor let pity, which Even women have cast off, melt thee, but be
A soldier to thy purpose.

Leon. I'll do't: but yet she is a goodly creature.

Dion. The fitter then the gods should have her. Here
She comes weeping for her old nurse's death.
Thou art resolv'd?

Leon. I am resolv'd.

Enter Marina, with a Basket of Flowers.

Mar. No, I will rob Tellus of her weed,
To strew thy grave* with flowers: the yellows, blues,
The purple violets, and marigolds,
Shall, as a carpet, hang upon thy grave,
While summer days do last. Ah me, poor maid!
Born in a tempest, when my mother died,
This world to me is like a lasting storm,
Whirling me from my friends.

Dion. How now, Marina! why do you weep alone?
How chance my daughter is not with you? Do not Consume your blood with sorrowing: you have
A nurse of me. Lord! how your favour's chang'd
With this unprofitable woe. Come, come;
Give me your flowers; ere the sea mar it.
Walk with Leonine: the air is quick there,
And it pierces and sharpens the stomach. Come,
Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with her.

Mar. No, I pray you;
I'll not bereave you of your servant.

Dion. Come, come;
I love the king your father, and yourself,
With more than foreign heart. We every day
Expect him here: when he shall come, and find
Our paragon to all reports thus blasted,
He will repent the breadth of his great voyage;
Blame both my lord and me, that we have taken
No care to your best courses. Go, I pray you;
Walk, and be cheerful once again: reserve
That excellent complexion, which did steal
The eyes of young and old. Care not for me;
I can go home alone.

Mar. Well, I will go;
But yet I have no desire to it.

Dion. Come, come, I know 'tis good for you.—
Walk half an hour, Leonine, at least.
Remember what I have said.

Leon. I warrant you, madam.

Dion. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for a while.
Pray you walk softly, do not heat your blood:

What! I must have care of you.

Mar. Thanks, sweet madam.—[Exit Dionyza.

Leon. South-west.

Mar. When I was born, the wind was north.

Leon. Was't so?

Mar. My father, as nurse said, did never fear,
But cry'd 'good seamen!' to the sailors, gallier
His kindly hands hauling ropes;
And, clasping to the mast, endured a sea
That almost burst the deck.

Leon. When was this?

Mar. When I was born:

Never were waves nor wind more violent;
And from the ladder-tackles washes off
A canvass-climber. "Ha!" says one, "wilt out?"

And with a dropping industry they skip
From stern to stern: the boatswain whistles, and
The master calls, and trebles their confusion.

Leon. Come; say your prayers.

Mar. What mean you?

Leon. If you require a little space for prayer,
I grant it. Pray; but be not tedious,
For the gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn
To do my work with haste.

Mar. Why will you kill me?

Leon. To satisfy my lady.

Mar. Why would she have me kill'd?

Now as I can remember, by my troth,
I never did her hurt in all my life.
I never spoke bad word, nor did ill turn
To any living creature: believe me, la,
I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly:
I trod upon a worm against my will,
But I wept for it. How have I offended,
Wherein my death might yield her profit, or
My life imply her any danger?

Leon. My commission
Is not to reason of the deed, but do it.

Mar. You will not do't for all the world, I hope.
You are well favour'd, and your looks foreshow
You have a gentle heart. I saw you lately,
When you caught hurt in parting two that fought:
Good sooth, it show'd well in you: do so now:
Your lady seeks my life; come you between,
And save poor me, the weaker.

Leon. I am sworn,
And will despatch.

Enter Pirates, whilst Marina is struggling.

1 Pirate. Hold, villain! [Leonine runs away
2 Pirate. A prize! a prize!
3 Pirate. Half-part, mates, half-part. Come, let's have her aboard suddenly. [Execute Pirates with Marina.

SCENE II.—Near the Same.

Enter Leonine.

Leon. These roguing thieves serve the great pirate
Valdes:
And they have seiz'd Marina. Let her go:
There's no hope she'll return. I'll swear she's dead
And thrown into the sea.—But I'll see farther;
Perhaps they will but please themselves upon her,
Not carry her aboard. If she remain,
Whom they have ravish'd must by me be slain. [Exit.

SCENE III.—Mitylene. A Room in a Brothel.

Enter Pandar, Baud, and Boult.

Pand. Boult.
Boult. Sir.
Pand. Search the market narrowly; Mitylene is full of gallants: we lost too much money this mart, by being too wenchless.

Bawd. We were never so much out of creatures. We have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do; and they with continual action are even as good as rotten.

Pand. Therefore, let's have fresh ones, whate'er we pay for them. If there be not a conscience to be used in every trade, we shall never prosper.

Bawd. Thou say'st true: it is not the bringing up of poor bastards, as I think, I have brought up some eleven—

Boult. Ay, to eleven; and brought them down again. But shall I search the market?

Bawd. What else, man? The stuff we have, a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sodden.

Pand. Thou say'st true: they're too unwholesome. The poor Transsilvanian is dead, that lay with the little baggage.

Boult. Ay, she quickly pooped him; she made him roast-meat for worms. But I'il go search the market. [Exit Boult.]

Pand. Three or four thousand chequins were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.

Bawd. Why, to give over, I pray you; is it a shame to get when we are old?

Pand. O! our credit comes not in like the commodity; nor the commodity wages not with the danger; therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 'twere not amiss to keep our door hatched. Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods will be strong with us for giving over.

Bawd. Come; other sorts offend as well as we. Pand. As well as we? ay, and better too; we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade; it's no calling. But here comes Boult.

Enter Boult, and the Pirates with Marina.

Boult. Come your ways. My masters, you say she's a virgin?

Pirate. O, sir! we doubt it not.

Boult. Master, I have gone thorough for this piece, you see: if you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest.

Bawd. Boult, has she any qualities?

Boult. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes: there is no farther necessity of qualities can make her be refused.

Bawd. What's her price, Boult?

Boult. I cannot be bated one doit of a thousand pieces.

Pand. Well, follow me, my masters, you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in: instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment. [Exit Pand and Pirates.]

Bawd. Boult, take you the marks of her: the colour of her hair, complexion, height, her age, with warrant of her virginity, and cry, "He that will give most, shall have her first." Such a maidenhead were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you.

Bawd. Performance shall follow. [Exit Boult.]

Mar. Ahuck, that Lencine was so slack, so slow! He should have struck, not spoke; or that these pirates, (Not enough barbarous) had not o'erboard thrown me For to seek my mother!

Bawd. Why lament you, pretty one?

Mar. That I am pretty.

Bawd. Come, the gods have done their part in you.

Mar. I accuse them not.

Bawd. You are fit into my hands, where you are like to live.

Mar. The more my fault. To escape his hands where I was like to die.

Bawd. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure.

Mar. No.

Bawd. Yes, indeed, shall you, and taste gentlemen of all fashions. You shall fare well; you shall have the difference of all complexions. What do you stop your ears?

Mar. Are you a woman?

Bawd. What would you have me be, an I be not a woman?

Mar. An honest woman; or not a woman.

Bawd. Marry, whip thee, gosling: I think I shall have something to do with you. Come, you are a young foolish sapling, and must be bowed as I would have you.

Mar. The gods defend me!

Bawd. If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men stir you up.—Boult's returned.

Re-enter Boult.

Now, sir, hast thou cried her through the market?

Boult. I have cried her almost to the number of her hairs: I have drawn her picture with my voice.

And I pray thee, tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boult. Faith, they listened to me, as they would have hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description.

Bawd. We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on.

Boult. To-night, to-night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that owers i' the hams?

Bawd. Who? monsieur Verolez?

Boult. Ay: he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow.

Bawd. Well, well; as for him, he brought his disease hither: here he does but repair it. I know, he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Boult. Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this sign.

Bawd. Pray you, come hither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me: you must seem to do that fearfully, which you commit willingly; to despise profit, where you have most gain. To weep that you live as you do makes pity in your lovers: seldom, but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a mere profit.

Mar. I understand you not.

Boult. O! take her home, mistress, take her home: these blushes of hers must be quenched with some present practice.

Bawd. Thou say'st true, if faith, so they must: for your bride goes to that with shame, which is her way to go with warrant.

Boult. Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargained for the joint—

Bawd. Thou may'st cut a morsel off the spit.

Boult. I may so?

Bawd. Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boult. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

Bawd. Boult, spend thou that in the town: report what a sojourner we have; you'll lose nothing by custom. When nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn; therefore, say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Boud. I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the beds of eels, as my giving you her beauty stir up the lewdly inclined. I'll bring home some to-night.

Boud. Come your ways; follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep; United I still my virgin knot will keep.

Diana, aid my purpose!

Boud. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us? [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Tharsus. A Room in Cleon's House.

Enter Cleon and Dionyza.

Dion. Why, are you foolish? Can it be undone?

Cle. O Dionyza! such a piece of slaughter
The sun and moon ne'er look'd upon.

Dion. I think,
You'll turn a child again.

Cle. Were I chief lord of all this spacious world,
I'd give it to undo the deed. O lady!

Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess
To equal any single crown o' the earth,
I'the justice of compare! O villain Leonine!
Whom thou hast poison'd too.

If thou hast drunk to him, it had been a kindness
Becoming well thy face: what causeth thou say,
When noble Pericles shall demand his child?

Dion. That she is dead. Nurses are not the fates,
To foster it, nor ever to preserve.

She died at night; I'll say so. Who can cross it, Unless you play the pious innocent,
And for an honest attribute, cry out,
She died by foul play?]

Cle. O! go to. Well, well;
Of all the faults beneath the heavens, the gods
Do like this worst.

Dion. Be one of those, that think
The pretty wrens of Tharsus will fly hence,
And open this to Pericles. I do shame
To think of what a noble strain you are,
And of how coward a spirit.

Cle. To such proceeding
Who ever but his approbation added,
Though not his pre consent, did he not flow
From honourable courses.

Dion. Be it so, then;
Yet none does know, but you, how she came dead,
Nor none can know, Leonine being gone.
She did disdain my child, and stood between
Her and her fortunes: none would look on her,
But east their gazes on Marina's face;
Whilst ours was blurted at, and held a malkin,
Not worth the time of day. It pierc'd me thorough;
And though you call my course unnatural,
You not your child well loving, yet I find,
It greeves me as an enterprise of kindness,
Perform'd to your sole daughter.

Cle. Heavens forgive it!

Dion. And as for Pericles,
What should he say? We wept after her hearse,
And even yet we mourn: her monument
Is almost finish'd, and her epitaph
In glittering golden characters express
A general praise to her, and care in us
At whose expense 'tis done.

Cle. Thou art like the harpy
Which, to betray, doth with thine angel's face,
Seize with thine eagle's talons.

Dion. You are like one, that superstitionlessly
Doth swear to the gods, that winter killeth the flies:
But yet, I know, you'll do as I advise.

[Exeunt.

Enter Gower, before the Monument of Marina at Tharsus.

Gow. Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short;
Sail seas in cockles, have, and wish but for't;

Making (to take your imagination)
From bourn to bourn, region to region.

By you being pardon'd, we commit no crime
To use one language, in each several clime,
Where our scenes seem to live. I do beseech you,
To learn of me, who stand i' the gaps to teach you,
The stages of our story. Pericles
Is now again thwarting the wayward seas,
Attended on by many a lord and knight.
To see his daughter, all his life's delight.
Old Escanes, whom Helicaneus late
Advanc'd in time to great and high estate,
Is left to govern. Bear you it in mind,
Old Helicaneus goes along behind.

Well-sailing ships, and bounteous winds, have brought
This king to Tharsus, (think this pilot thought,
So with his steerage shall your thoughts grow on;
To fetch his daughter home, who first is gone
Like motes and shadows see them move awhile;
Your ears unto your eyes I'll reconcile.

Dumb show.

Enter Pericles with his Train, at one door; Cleon and Dionyza at the other. Cleon shows Pericles the Tomb of Marina; whereas Pericles makes lamentation, puts on Sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs.

Gow. See, how belief may suffer by foul show
The borrow'd passion stands for true old woe;
And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd,
With sighs shot through, and biggest tears o'er-
show'r'd,
Leaves Tharsus, and again embarks. He swears
Never to wash his face, nor cut his hairs;
He puts on sackcloth, and to sea. He bears
A tempest, which his mortal vessel tears,
And yet he rides it out. Now, please you, wit
The epitaph is for Marina writ
By wicked Dionyza.

4 The fairest, sweet st, and best, lies here,
Who witter'd in her spring of year:
She was of Tyrsus, the king's daughter.
On whom foul death hath made this slaughter.
Marina was she call'd; and at her birth.
Thetis, being proud, swallow'd some part o' the earth.
Therefore the earth, fearing to be overswarm'd,
Hath Thetis' birth-child on the heavens bestow'd:
Wherefore she does (and swears she'll never stand)
Make raging battery upon shores of flint?
No visor does become such villainy.
So well as soft and tender flattery,
Let Pericles believe his daughter's dead,
And bear his courses to be ordered
By lady fortune; while our scene must play
His daughter's woe and heavy well-a-day,
In her unholy service. Patience then,
And think you now are all in Mitylen.
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

SCENE V.—Mitylene. A Street before the Brothel.

Enter from the Brothel, two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Did you ever hear the like?

2 Gent. No; nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone.

1 Gent. But to have divinity preach'd there, did you ever dream of such a thing?

2 Gent. No, no. Come, I am for no more bawd-houses. Shall we go hear the vestals sing?

1 Gent. I'll do any thing now that is virtuous; but I am out of the road of rutting for ever.

[Exit.

SCENE VI.—The Same. A Room in the Brothel.

Enter Pander, Bawd, and Boud.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her, she had never come here.

Bawd. Fie, fie upon her! she is able to freeze the god Priapus, and undo a whole generation: we must either get her ravi-sh'd, or be rid of her. When she should do for clients her fitment, and do me the kindness of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master reasons, her prayers, her knees, that she would make a puritan of the devil, if he should cheapen a kiss of her.

Boult. Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll disturb us all of us our cavilers, and make all our swearer priests.

Pand. Now, the pox upon her green-sickness for me!

Bawd. 'Faith, there's no way to be rid on't, but by the way to the pox. Here comes the lord Lysimachus, disguised.

Boult. We should have both lord and bawd, if the peevish baggage would but give way to customers.

Enter LYSIMACHUS.

Lys. How now! How a dozen of virginitie?

Bawd. Now, the gods to-bless your honour!

Boult. I am glad to see your honour in good health.

Lys. You may so; 't is the better for you that your resorters stand upon sound legs. Now, wholesome iniquity! have you that a man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon?

Bawd. We have here one, sir, if she would—but there never came her like in Mitylene.

Lys. If she 'd do the deeds of darkness, thou wouldst say.

Bawd. Your honour knows what 't is to say, well enough.

Lys. Well; call forth, call forth.

Boult. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose; and she were a rose indeed, if she had but—

Lys. What, p'r'ly thee?

Bawd. O, sir! I can be modest.

Lys. That dignifies the renown of a bawd, no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste.

Enter MARINA.

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk;—never pluck'd yet, I can assure you.—Is she not a fair creature?

Lys. Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you: leave us.

Bawd. I beseech your honour, give me leave: a word and I'll have done presently.

Lys. I beseech you, do.

Boult. First, I would have you note, this is an honourable man.

Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him.

Bawd. Next, he's the governor of this country and a man whom I am bound to.

Mar. If he govern the country, you are bound to him indeed; but how honourable he is in that, I know not.

Bawd. 'Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold.

Mar. What he will do graciosily, I will thankfully receive.

Lys. Have you done?

Bawd. My lord, she's not paced yet; you must take some pains to work her to your manage.—Come, we will leave his honour and her together. Go thy ways [Exeunt Bawd, Pander, and Boud.

Lys. Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, sir?

Lys. Why, I cannot name but I shall offend.

Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade. Please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profession?

Mar. Ever since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to it so young? Were you a gamaster at five, or at seven?

Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one.

Lys. Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale.

Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into it? I hear say, you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place.

Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am?

Mar. Who is my principal?

Lys. Why, your herb-woman; she that sets seed and roots of shame and iniquity. O! you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else, look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place: come, come.

Mar. If you were born to honour, show it now; if put upon you, make the judgment good That thought you worthy of it.

Lys. How's this? how's this? Some more, be sage.

Mar. For me, That am a maid, though most ungentle fortune Hath plac'd me in this sty, where, since I came, Diseases have been sold dearer than physic.—

That the gods Would set me free from this unhallow'd place, Though they did change me to the meanest bird That flies 't the purer air!

Lys. I did not think Thou couldst have spoke so well; ne'er dream'd thou couldst Had I brought hither a corrupted mind, Thy speech had alter'd it. Hold, here's gold for thee Persevere in that clear way thou goest, And the gods strengthen thee.

Mar. The gods preserve you!

Lys. For me, be you thoughten That I came with no ill intent; for to me The very doors and windows savour vilely, Farewell. Thou art a piece of virtue, and I doubt not but thy training hath been noble. Hold, here's more gold for thee. A curse upon him, die he like a thief, That robs thee of thy goodness! If thou dost hear From me, it shall be for thy good.

Enter BOUNT

Bawd. I beseech your honour, one piece for me
Lys. Avault, thou damned door-keeper! Your house,
But for this virgin that doth prop it, would Sink, and overwhelm you. Away!
[Exit Lysimachus.

Boult. How's this? We must take another course with you. If your peevish-chastity, which is not worth a breakfast in the cheapest country under the cope,¹ shall, under a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel, come your ways.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it. Come your way. We'll have no more gentlemen driven away, come your ways, I say.

Re-enter Boult.

Bawd. How now! what's the matter?

Boult. Worse and worse, mistress: she has here spoken holy words to the lord Lysimachus.

Bawd. O, abominable!

Boult. She makes our profession as it were to stink afore the face of the gods.

Bawd. Marry, hang her up for ever!

Boult. The nobleman would have dealt with her like a nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a snowball; saying his prayers, too.

Bawd. Boult, take her away; use her at thy pleasure; crack the glass of her virginity, and make the rest malleable.

Boult. An if she were a thornier piece of ground than she is, she shall be ploughed.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods!

Bawd. She conjures: away with her. Would she had never come within my doors. — Marry, hang you — She's born to undo us. — Will you not go the way of women-kind? Marry come up, my dish of chastity with rosemary and bays! [Exit Bawd

Boult. Come, mistress; come your way with me,

Mar. Whither wilt thou have me?

Boult. To take from you the jewel you hold so dear,

Mar. Pr'ythee, tell me one thing first.

Boult. Come now, your one thing.

Mar. What canst thou wish thine enemy to be?

Boult. Why, I could wish him to be my master; or rather, my mistress.

Mar. Neither of these are so bad as thou art,
Since they do better thee in their command.

Thou hold'st a place, for which the painted fiend
Of hell would not in reputation change:
Thou 'rt the damned door-keeper to every coxstrel²
That hither comes inquiring for his Tib:
To the choleric listing of each rogue thy ear
Is liable: thy food is such
As hath been beleched on by infected lungs.

Boult. What would you have me do? Go to the wars would you? where a man may serve seven years for the loss of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a wooden one?

Mar. Do any thing but this thou dost. Empty
Old receptacles, or common sewers, of filth;
Serve by indenture to the common hangman:
Any of these ways are yet better than this;
For what thou professest, a baboon, could he speak,
Would own a name too dear. That the gods
Would safely deliver me from this place!
Here, here's gold for thee.
If that thy master would gain by me,
Proclaim that I can sing, weave, sew, and dance,
With other virtues, which I'll keep from boast;
And I will undertake all these to teach
I doubt not but this populous city will Yield many scholars.

Boult. But can you teach all this you speak of?

Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home again,
And prostitute me to the basest groom
That doth frequent your house.

Boult. Well, I will see what I can do for thee: if I can place thee, I will.

Mar. But, amongst honest women?

Boult. Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them. But since my master and mistress have bought you, there's no going but by their consent; therefore,
I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and
I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough.
Come; I'll do for thee what I can: come your ways.

ACT V.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Marina thus the brothel scapes, and chances into an honest house, our story says.
She sings like one immortal, and she dances,
As goddess-like, to her admired lays.
Deep clerks she dumbs, and with her needle composes
Nature's own shape, of bud, bird, branch, or berry,
That even her art sisters the natural roses;
Her inkle,³ silk, twin with the rubied cherry;
That pupils lacks she none of noble race,
Who pour their bounty on her; and her gain
She gives the cursed bawd. Here we her place,
And to her father turn our thoughts again,
Where we left him on the sea, tumbled and tost;
And, driven before the winds, he is arriv'd
Here where his daughter dwells: and on this coast
Suppose him now at anchor. The city striv'd
God Neptune's annual feast to keep: from whence Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies, his banners sable, trimm'd with rich expense;

And to him in his barge with favour lies,
In your supposing once more put your sight;
Of heavy Pericles think this the bark:
Where, what is done in action, more, if might,
Shall be discover'd; please you, sit, and hark. [Exit

SCENE I.—On board PERICLES' Ship, off Mitylene.

A Pavilion on deck, with a Curtain before it; PERI-
CLES within it, reclining on a Couch. A Barge lying beside the Tyrian Vessel.

Enter Two Sailors, one belonging to the Tyrian Vessel
the other to the Barge; to them HELICANUS,

Tyr. Sail. Where's the lord Helenus? he can resolve you. [To the Sailor of Mitylene

O here he is.—
Sir, there's a barge put off from Mitylene,
And in it is Lysimachus, the governor.
Who craves to come aboard. What is your will?
Hel. That he have his. Call up some gentleman
Tyr. Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls.
Enter Two or Three Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Doth your lordship call?

Hel. Gentlemen,

There is some of worth would come aboard: I pray
Greet them fairly.

[Gentlemen and Sailors descend, and go board the Barge.]

Enter, from thence, Lysimachus and Lords; the Tyrian
Gentlemen, and the Two Sailors.

Tyr. Sail. Sir,

This is the man that can in aught you would Resolve you.

Lys. Hail, reverend sir! The gods preserve you!

Hel. And you, sir, to outlive the age I am,
And die as I would do.

Lys. You wish me well.

Being on shore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs,
Seeing this goodly vessel ride before us,
I made to it to know of whence you are.

Hel. First, what is your place?

Lys. I am the governor of this place you lie before.

Hel. Sir,

Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king;
A man, who for the three months hath not spoken
To any one, nor taken sustenance,
But to prologue his grief.

Lys. Upon what ground is his distemperature?

Hel. It would be too tedious to repeat;
But the main grief of all springs from the loss
Of a beloved daughter and a wife.

Lys. May we not see him, then?

Hel. You may,

But bootless is your sight; he will not speak
To any.

Lys. Yet, let me obtain my wish.

Hel. Behold him. [Pericles discovered.] This was a goodly person,
Till the disaster that one mortal night
Drove him to this.

Lys. Sir king, all hail! the gods preserve you!

Hail, royal sir!

Hel. It is in vain; he will not speak to you.

1 Lord. Sir, we have a maid in Mitylene, I durst wager,

Would win some words of him.

Lys. 'T is well bethought.

She, questionless, with her sweet harmony,
And other choice attractions, would allure,
And make a battery through his deafen'd parts,
Which now are midway stopp'd:
She is all happy as the fair'st of all,
And with her fellow maids is now upon
The leafy shelter that abuts against
The island's side.

[He whispers one of the attendant Lords.—Exit Lord.]

Hel. Sure, all effectless: yet nothing we'll omit,
That bears recovery's name.

But, since your kindness we have stretch'd thus far,
Let us beseech you,
That for our gold we may provision have,
Wherein we are not destitute for want,
But weary for the stalesness.

Lys. O, sir! a courtesy,

Which, if we should deny, the most just God
For every graff would send a caterpillar,
And so afflict our province.—Yet once more
Let me entreat you: now at large the cause
Of your king's sorrow.

Hel. Sit, sir, I will recount it to you.—

But see, I am prevented.

Enter Lord, Marina, and a young Lady.

Lys. O! here is

The lady that I sent for. Welcome, fair one!
Is 't not a goodly presence?

Hel. She's a gallant lady.

Lys. She's such a one, that were I well assured she came
Of gentle kind, and noble stock, I'd wish
No better choice, and think me rarely wed.—
Fair one, all goodness that consists in bounty
Expect even here, where is a kingly patient:
If that thy prosperous and artificial feat
Can draw him but to answer thee in aught,
Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay
As thy desires can wish.

Mar. Sir, I will use

My utmost skill in his recovery,
Provided none but I and my companion
Be suffer'd to come near him.

Lys. Come, let us leave her;

And the gods make her prosperous! [Marina sings]

Lys. Mark'd he your music?

Mar. No, nor look'd on us

Lys. See, she will speak to him.

Mar. Hail, sir! my lord, lend ear.—

Per. Hum! ha!

Mar. I am a maid,
My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes,
But have been gaz'd on like a comet: she speaks,
My lord, that may be, hath endur'd a grief
Might equal yours, if both were justly weigh'd.
Though wayward fortune did malign my state,
My derivation was from ancestors
Who stood equivalent with mighty kings;
But time hath rooted out my parentage,
And to the world and awkward casualties
Bound me in servitude.—I will desist;
But there is something glowes upon my cheek,
And whispers in mine ear; "Go not till he speak."

Per. My fortunes—parentage—good parentage—
To equal mine!—was it not thus? what say you?

Mar. I said, my lord, if you did know my parentage,
You would not do me violence.

Per. I do think so.

I pray you, turn your eyes again upon me.—

You are like something that—What countrywoman?
Here of these shores?

Mar. No, nor of any shores;
Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am
No other than I appear.

Per. I am great with woe, and shall deliver weeping.
My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a one
My daughter might have been: my queen's square
brows;
Her stature to an inch; as wand-like straight;
As silver-voic'd; her eyes as jewel-like;
And cas'd as richly: in pace another Juno;
Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry.
The more she gives them speech.—Where do you live?

Mar. Where I am but a stranger: from the deck
You may discern the place.

Per. Where were you brea?

And how achiev'd you those endowments, which
You make more rich to owe.2

Mar. Should I tell my history
'T would seem like lies, disdain'd in the reporting.

Per. Prythee, speak:

Falseness cannot come from thee, for thou look'st
You think me an impostor: no, good faith,
I am the daughter to king Pericles,
If good king Pericles be.

Per. Ho, Helicanus!

Hel. Calls my gracious lord?

Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsellor,
Most wise in general: tell me, if thou canst,
What this maid is, or what is like to be,
That thus hath made me weep?

Hel. I know not. but

Here is the regent, sir, of Mitylene,
Speaks nobly of her.

Lys. She would never tell
Her parentage; being demanded that,
She would sit still and weep.

Per. O Helicanus! strike me, honour'd sir;
Give me a gash; put me to present pain,
Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me,
O'erbear the shores of my mortality,
And drown me with their sweetness. O! come hither,
Thou that beget'st him that did thee beget;
Thou that wast born at sea, buried at Tharsus,
And found at sea again.—O Helicanus!

Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods as loud
As thunder threatens us: this is Marina!—
What was thy mother's name? tell me but that,
For truth can never be confirm'd enough,
Though doubts did ever sleep.

Mar. First, sir, I pray,
What is your title?

Per. I am Pericles of Tyre: but tell me, now,
My drownd'queen's name, (as in the rest you said
Thou hast been godlike perfect) the heir of kingdoms,
And another like to Pericles thy father.

Mar. Is it no more to be your daughter, than
To say, my mother's name was Thaisa?
Thaisa was my mother, who did end
The minute I began.

Per. Now, blessing on thee! rise; thou art my child.
Give me fresh garments! Mine own, Helicanus,
She is not dead at Tharsus, as she should have been.
By savage Cleon: she shall tell thee all;
When thou shalt kneel and justify in knowledge,
She is thy very princess.—Who is this?

Hel. Sir, 'tis the governor of Mitylene,
Who, hearing of your melancholy state,
Did come to see you.

Per. I embrace you,
Give me my robes! I am wild in my beholding,
O heavens, bless my girl! But hark! what music?
Tell Helicanus, my Marina, tell him
O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to doubt,
How sure you are my daughter.—But what music?

Hel. My lord I hear none.

Per. None?

The music of the spheres! list, my Marina.

Lys. It is not good to cross him; give him way.

Per. Rarest sounds! Do ye not hear?

Lys. Music? My lord, I hear—

Per. Most heavenly music:
It tips me unto list'ning, and thick slumber
Hangs upon mine ears: let me rest. [He sleeps.

Lys. A pillow for his head.

[The Curtain before the Pavilions of Pericles is closed,
So, leave him all.—Well, my companion-friends,
If this but answer to my just belief,
I'll well remember you.

[Exeunt Helicanus, Helicanus, Marina, and Lady]
PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE.

SCENE III.—The Same.

PERICLES on the Deck asleep; DIANA appearing to him in a vision.

Diss. My temple stands in Ephesus: hie thee thither, and do upon mine altar sacrifice.

Thaisa. There, when my husband priests are met together, before the people all,

Revel how thou at sea didst lose thy wife:

To mourn thy crosses, with thy daughter’s, call,

And give them repetition to the life.

Or perform my bidding, or thou livest in woe:

Do’t, and be happy, by my silver bow.

Dian. Awake, and tell thy dream. [Diana disappears.

Per. Celestial Dian, goddess argentine,

I will obey thee.— Helicanus!

Enter Lytsimachus, Helicanus, and Marina.

Hel. Sir.

Per. My purpose was for Tharsus, there to strike The inhospitable Cleon; but I am For other service first: toward Ephesus Turn our bloomed sails; eftsoons I’ll tell thee why.

Shall we refresh us, sir, upon your shore, And give you gold for such provision As our intents will need?

Lyts. Sir, with all my heart, and when you come ashore, I have another suit.

Per. You shall prevail,

Were it to woo my daughter; for, it seems, You have been noble towards her.

Per. Come, my Marina. [Exeunt.

Enter Gower, before the Temple of Diana at Ephesus.

Gow. Now our sands are almost run;

More a little, and then dumb.

This, as’ my last boon, give me,

For such kindness must relieve me,

That you apply will suppose

What pageantry, what feats, what shows,

What ministrail, and pretty din,

The regent made in Mitylen.

To greet the king. So he thriv’d,

That he promis’d to be wiv’d

To fair Marina; but in no wise

Till he had done his sacrifice, As Dian bade: whereto being bound, The interim, pray you, all confound. In feather’d briefness sails are fill’d, And wishes fall out as they’re will’d. At Ephesus, the temple see, Our king and all his company, That he can hither come so soon, Is by your fancy’s thankful doom.

[Exit.}

SCENE III.—The Temple of Diana at Ephesus; Thaisa standing near the Altar, as high Priestess; a number of Virgins on each side: Cerimon and other Inhabitants of Ephesus attending Enter Pericles, with his Train; Lytsimachus, Helicanus and Marina, and Lady.

Per. Hail Dian! to perform thy just command, I here confess myself the king of Tyre; Who, frighted from my country, did wed At Peutapolis, the fair Thaisa. At sea in childbed die she, but brought forth A maid-child call’d Marina; who, O goddess! Wears yet thy silver livery. She at Tharsus Was nurs’d with Cleon, whom at fourteen years He sought to murder, but her better stars Brought her to Mitylene; against whose shore Riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard us. Where, by her own most clear remembrance, she Made known herself my daughter.

Thaisa. Voice and favour! —

You are, you are—O royal Pericles!—[She faints.

Per. What means the woman? she dies; help, gentlemen!

Cer. Noble sir,

If you have told Diana’s altar true, This is your wife.

Per. Reverend appearer, no.

I threw her overboard with these very arms

Cer. Upon this coast, I warrant you.

Per. ’Tis most certain.

Cer. Look to the lady.—O! she’s but o’erjoy’d.

Early in blust’ring morn this lady was Thrown on this shore. I op’d the coffin, Found there rich jewels; recover’d her, and plac’d her Here, in Diana’s temple.

Per. May we see them?

Cer. Great sir, they shall be brought you to my house, Whither I invite you. Look! Thaisa is recover’d.

Thaisa. O! let me look.

If he be none of mine, my sanctity Will to my sense bend no licentious cat, But curb it, spite of seeing. O, my lord!

Are you not Pericles? Like him you speak, Like him you are. Did you not name a tempes,

A birth, and death?

Per. The voice of dead Thaisa!

Thaisa. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead, and drown’d.

Per. Immortal Dian!

Thaisa. Now I know you better —

When we with tears parted Pentapolis, The king, my father, gave you such a ring.

[Gives a Ring.

Per. This, this no more, you gods! your present kindness Makes my past miseries sweet; you shall do well. That on the touching of her lips I may Melt, and no more be seen. O! come, be buried A second time within these arms.

Mar. My heart Leaps to be gone into my mother’s bosom.

Per. Look, who kneels here. Flesh of thy flesh Thaisa;

Thy burden at the sea, and call’d Marina, For she was yield’d there.

Thaisa. Bless’d, and mine own!

Hel. Hail, madam, and my queen!

Thaisa. I know you not.

Per. You have heard me say, when I did fly from Tyre, I left behind an ancient substitute; Can you remember what I call’d the man? I have nam’d him oft.

Thaisa. ’T was Helicanus, then.

Per. Still confirmation!

Embrace him, dear Thaisa; this is he. Now do I long to hear how you were found, How possibly preserv’d, and whom to thank Besides the gods, for this great miracle.

Thaisa. Lord Cerimon, my lord; this man Through whom the gods have shown their power, that can

From first to last resolve you.

Per. Reverend sir.
The gods can have no mortal officer
More like a god than you. Will you deliver
How this dead queen re-lives?

Ccr.  I will, my lord.
Beseech you, first go with me to my house,
Where shall be shown you all was found with her,
No needful thing omitted.

Per. Pure Dian! bless thee for thy vision,
I will offer night oblations to thee. Thaisa,
This prince, the fair-betrothed of your daughter
Shall marry her at Pentapolis. And now,
This ornament,
Makes me look dismal, will I clip to form;
And what this fourteen years no razor touch'd,
To grace thy marriage-day, I'll beautify.

Thais. Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit:
Sir, my father's dead.
Per. Heavens, make a star of him! Yet there, my queen,
We'll celebrate their nuptials, and ourselves
Will in that kingdom spend our following days:
Our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.
POEMS

VENUS AND ADONIS.

INTRODUCTION.

Six are told by Shakespeare, in his dedication of this poem to the Earl of Southampton, in 1593, that it was "the first heir of his invention," and as it was the earliest printed, so probably, it was the earliest written of his known productions. At what time it is likely that he commenced the composition of it, is a question which we have considered in the biography of the poet.

The popularity of it is indisputable: having been originally printed by Richard Field, in 1593, 4to, the edition seems to have been soon exhausted, and it was reprinted by the same printer in 1594, 4to., before 26th June, because on that day, according to the Stationers' Registers, he assigned over his interest in it to John Harrison, for whom Field printed an octavo impression in 1594. Field's second edition was unknown to Malone and his contemporaries; and as it was not a re-issue of some remaining copies of 1593 with a new title-page, but a distinct re-impresion, it affords some important confirmations of the correctness of the older text, corrupted more or less in all subsequent editions. Harrison published his second edition in 1594, which was the fourth time "Venus and Adonis" had been printed in seven years. It had been entered at Stationers' Hall by W. Leneke, in 1586. After this date it went through the press many times, and copies in 1592, 1516, 1620, &c. are known; in 1627 it was printed by John Wrightson, at Edinburgh.

The popularity of "Venus and Adonis" is established also by the frequent mention of it in early writers. It is probably that Peele died in 1597, and very soon afterwards his "Merry Concoited jests" must have been published, although no edition of them is now known older than that of 1607. In one of these, a tapster, "much given to poetry," is represented as having in his possession "the Knight of the Sun, Venus and Adonis, and other pamphlets." Thomas Heywood's "Fair Maid of the Exchange," was printed in 1607, but written some few years before, and there a young lover is recommended to court his mistress by the aid of "Venus and Adonis." How long this reputation, and for the same purpose, was maintained, may be seen from a passage in Lewis Sharp's "Noble Stranger," 1640, where Pupillus exclaims, "Oh, for the book of Venus and Adonis, to court my mistress by!" Thomas Cranley, in his "Amanda," 1653, makes "Venus and Adonis" part of the library of a courtisan:

"amorous pamphlets, that best like thine eyes,
And songs of love, and sonnets exquisite;
Among these Venus and her Hermaphrodit,
With Salmacis and her Hermaphrodite;
Pygmalion's there with his transform'd delight."

"Salmacis and her Hermaphrodit" refers to the poem imputed (perhaps falsely) to Beaumont, printed in 1604; and the third poem is "Pygmalion's Image," by Marston, published in 1598.

* * *

EVEN as the sun with purple-colour'd face
Had taken his last leave of the weeping morn,
Rose-cheek'd Adonis hied him to the chase;
Hunting he lov'd, but love he laugh'd to scorn:
Sick-thoughted Venus makes amain unto him,
And like a bold-fad'rt suit's guns to woo him.

S. Nicholson, in his "Acolastus his Afterwrit," 1600, committed the most impudent plagiarisms from "Venus and Adonis;" and R. S., the author of "Philis and Floris," 1588, did not scruple to copy, almost with verbal exactness, part of the description Shakespeare gives of the horse of Adonis: we extract the following lines, that the reader may be able to make a comparison (See p. 866):

"His mayne thin hair'd, his neck high crested,
Small ears, short head, and hairt breasted.

* * *

"Strait legs'd, large thigh'd, and hollow hoved,
All nature's skill in him was prov'd."

Our text of "Venus and Adonis," is that of the earlier quarto, 1594, which, for the time, is very correctly printed, and we will illustrate by a single quotation the importance of resorting to it: the line which it stands,

"He cheers the morn, and all the earth relieth,

is misprinted in all modern editions,

"He cheers the morn, and all the world relieth."

The corruption was introduced in the quarto, 1604, and it has ever since been repeated. The same remark will apply to other changes; such as "all swols with chaising," instead of "chasing," "to love a darmor," instead of "alarms," "from morn to night," instead of "till night," &c.; all which show strange carelessness of collation, but it is not necessary here to dwell upon them, as they are pointed out in the notes.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE
HENRY WROTHELY,
EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TICHFIELD.

RIGHT HONORABLE,

I know not how I shall offend in dedicating my unpolished lines to your lordship; nor how the world will excuse me for choosing so strong a prop to support so weak a burden: only, if your honour seem but pleased, I account myself highly praised, and vow to take advantage of all idle hours, till I have hon'ourd you with some graver labour. But if the first heir of my invention prove deform'd, I shall be sorry it had so noble a godfather, and never after ear so barren a hand, for fear it yield me still so bad a harvest. I leave it to your honourable survey, and your honour to your heart's content which I wish may always answer your own wish, and the world's hopeful expectation.

Your honour's in all duty,
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

Three fairest than myself, (thus she began)
The field's chief flower, sweet above compare,
Stain to all nymphs, more lovely than a man,
More white and red than doves or roses are:
Nature that made thee, with herself at strife,
Saith, that the world hath ending with thy life.

Adonis" and "Lucrece," in 1594; reprinted in 1605; see Bridge-water Catalogue, 4to. 1827, p. 39) as well as to William Barksted's allusion to it in 1607, in his "Mynhs the Mother of Adonys." These may be added the praise of Shakespeare, and of his "Venus and Adonis," and "Lucrece," in the play of "The Return from Par," which was certainly produced before the death of Queen Elizabeth.
Vouchsafe, thou wonder, to alight thy steed,
And rein his proud head to the saddle-bow;
If thou wilt deign this favour, for thy meed,
A thousand honey secrets shalt thou know:
Here come and sit, where never serpent hisses
And being set, I'll smother thee with kisses

And yet not cloy thy lips with loath'd satiety,
But rather famish them amid their plenty,
Making them red and pale with fresh variety;
Ten kisses short as one, one long as twenty:
A summer's day will seem an hour but short,
Being wasted in such time-beguiling sport.

With this she ecizeth on his sweating palm,
The precedent of pith and livelihood,
And, trembling in her passion, calls it balm,
Earth's sovereign salve to do a goddess good:
Being so enrag'd, desire doth lend her force
Courageously to pluck him from his horse.

Over one arm the lusty courser's rein,
Under her other was the tender boy,
Who blushed and pouted in a dull disdain,
With leaden appetite, unapt to toy;
She red and hot as coals of glowing fire,
He red for shame, but frosty in desire.

The studded bridle on a ragged bough
Nimbly she fastens; (Oh, how quick is love!)
The steed is stalled up, and even now
To tie the rider she begins to prove:
Backward she push'd him, as she would be thrust,
And govern'd him in strength, though not in lust.

So soon was she along, as he was down,
Each leaning on their elbows and their hips:
Now doli she stroke his cheek; now doth he frown,
And 2gins to chide, but soon she stops his lips;
And kissing speaks, with lustful language broken,
If thou wilt chide, thy lips shall never open.

He burns with bashful shame, she with her tears
Doth quench the maiden burning of his cheeks;
Then with her windy sighs, and golden hairs,
To fan and blow them dry again she seeks:
He saith she is immodest, blames her 'miss';
What follows more she murders with a kiss.

Even as an empty eagle, sharp by fast,
Tires with her beak on feathers, flesh, and bone,
Shaking her wings, devouring all in haste,
Till either gorge be stuff'd, or prey be gone;
Even so she kiss'd his brow, his cheek, his chin,
And where she ends she doth anew begin.

For'd to content, but never to obey,
Panting he lies, and breatheth in her face;
She feedeth on the steam, as on a prey,
And calls it heavenly moisture, air of grace.
Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of flowers,
So they were daw'd with such distilling showers.

Look how a bird lies tangled in a net,
So fasten'd in her arms Adonis lies;
Pure shame and aw'd resistance made him fret,
Which bred more beauty in his angry eyes:
Rain added to a river that is rank,
Perforce will force it overflow the bank.

Still she entreats, and prettily entreats,
For to a pretty ear she tunes her tale;
Still is he sullen, still he lowers and frets,
Twixt crimson shame, and anger ashy-pale;
Being red, she loves him best; and being white,
Her best is better'd with a more delight.

Look how he can, she cannot choose but love;
And by her fair immortal hand she swears
From his soft bosom never to remove,
Till he take true with her contending tears,
Which long have rain'd, making his cheeks wet;
And one sweet kiss shall pay this countless debt.

Upon this promise did he raise his chin,
Like a dive-dapper peering through a wave,
Who being look'd on ducks as quickly in;
So offers he to give what she did crave,
But when her lips were ready for his pay,
He winks, and turns his lips another way.

Never did passenger in summer’s heat,
More thirst for drink than she for this good turn.
Her help she sees, but help she cannot get;
She bathes in water, yet her fire must burn.
O, pity, 'gan she cry, him-hearted boy!
’Tis but a kiss I beg; why art thou coy?

I have been woe'd as I entreat thee now,
Even by the stern and direful god of war,
Whose sinewy neck in battle never did bow,
Who conquers where he comes, in every jar;
Yet hath he been my captive and my slave,
And begg'd for that which thou unmask'd shalt have.

Over my altars hath he hung his lance,
His batter’d shield, his uncontrolled crest,
And for my sake hath learn’d to sport and dance,
To toy, to wanton, dally, smile, and jest;
Scorning his churlish drum, and ensign red,
Making my arms his field, his tent my bed.

Thus he that over-ru'd, I oversway’d,
Leading him prisoner in a red rose chain;
Strong-temper’d steel his stronger strength obey’d,
Yet was he servile to my coy disdain.
O! be not proud, nor brag not of thy might,
For mastering her that foil’d he god of fight.

Touch but my lips with those fair lips of thine,
Though mine be not so fair, yet are they red,
The kiss shall be thine own as well as mine.
What east thou in the ground? hold up thy head.
Look in mine eye-balls, there thy beauty lies;
Then, why not lips on lips, since eyes in eyes?

Art thou ashamed to kiss? then, wink again,
And I will wink; so shall the day seem night;
Love keeps his revels where there are but twain;
Be bold to play, our sport is not in sight:
These blue-vein’d violets whereon we lean,
Never can blab, nor know not what we mean.

The tender spring upon thy tempting lip
Shows thee unripe, yet may’st thou well be tasted
Make use of time, let not advantage slip;
Beauty within itself should not be wasted.
Fair flowers that are not gather’d in their prime
Rot and consume themselves in little time.
Were I hard-favour'd, foul, or wrinkled old,
Ill-nurtur'd, crooked, churlish, harsh in voice,
O'er-worn, despair'd, rheumatic, and cold,
Thick-sighted, barren, lean, and lacking juice.
Then might'st thou pause, for then I was not for thee;
But having no defects, why dost abhor me?

Thou canst not see one wrinkle in my brow;
Mine eyes are grey and bright, and quick in turning:
My beauty as the spring doth yearly grow,
My flesh is soft and plump, my mouth ever burning;
My smooth moist hand, were it with thy hand felt,
Would in thy pain dissolve, or seem to melt.

Witness this primrose bank whereon I lie;
These forestless flowers like sturdy trees support me;
Two strengthless doves will draw me through the sky,
From morn till night, even where I hast to sport me:
Is love so light, sweet boy, and may it be
That thou shouldst think it heavy unto thee?

Is thine own heart to thine own face affected?
Can thy right hand, seize low upon thy left?
Then woe thyself, be of thyself rejected,
Steal thine own freedom, and complain on theft.
Narcissus so himself forsook,
And died to kiss his shadow in the brook.

Torches are made to light, jewels to wear,
Dainties to taste, fresh beauty for the use;
Herbs for their smell, and sappy plants to bear;
Things growing to themselves are growth's abuse.
Seeds spring from seeds, and beauty breedeth beauty;
Thou wast begot, to get it is thy duty.

Upon the earth's increase why shouldst thou feed,
Unless the earth in thy increase be fed?
By law of nature thou art bound to breed,
That thine may live, when thou thyself art dead;
And so in spite of death thou dost survive,
In that thy likeness still is left alive.

By this, the love-sick queen began to sweat.
For where they lay the shadow had forsook them,
And Titan, tired in the mid-day heat,
With burning eye did hottly overlook them;
Wishing Adonis had his team to guide,
So he were like him, and by Venus' side.

And now Adonis, with a lazy sprite,
And with a heavy, dark, displeasing eye,
His lowering brows o'er-whelming his fair sight,
Like misty vapours, when they blot the sky,
Soaring his cheeks, cries, Fie! no more of love:
The sun doth burn my face; I must remove.

An me! (quoth Venus,) young, and so unkind?
What bare excuses meek'st thou to be gone!
I'll sigh celestial breath, whose gentle wind
Shall cool the heat of this descending sun;
I'll make a shadow for thee of my hairs;
If they burn too, I'll quench them with my tears.

The sun that shines from heaven shines but warm
And lo! I lie between that sun and thee:
The heat I have from hence doth little harm
Thine eye doth burn the fire that burns me;
And were I not immortal, life were done,
Between this heavenly and earthly sun.

Art thou obdurate, flinty, hard as steel?
Nay more than flint, for stone at rain relenteth;
Art thou a woman's son, and canst not feel?
What is to love? how want of love tormenteth?
O! had thy mother borne so hard a mind,
She had not brought forth thee, but died unkind.

What am I, that thou shouldst contemn me this?
Or what great danger dwells upon my suit?
What were thy lips the worse for one poor kiss?
Speak fair: but speak fair words, or else be mute:
Give me one kiss, I'll give it thee again,
And one for interest, if thou wilt have twain.

Fie! lifeless picture, cold and senseless stone
Well-painted idol, image dull and dead,
Statue, containing but the eye alone,
Things like a man, but of no woman bred:
Thou art no man, though of a man's complexion,
For men will kiss even by their own direction.

This said, impatiently shokes her pleasing tongue,
And swelling passion doth provoke a pause;
Red cheeks and fiery eyes blaze forth her wrong:
Being judge in love, she cannot right her cause:
And now she weeps, and now she fair would speak,
And now her sobs do her intentions break.

Sometimes she shakes her head, and then his hand.
Now gazeth she on him, now on the ground;
Sometimes her arms infold him like a band:
She would, he will not in her arms be bound:
And when from thence he struggles to be gone,
She locks her lily fingers one in one.

Fondling, she saith, since I have hemm'd thee here,
Within the circuit of this ivory pale,
I'll be his guide, and shalt be my deer;
Feed where thou wilt, on mountain or in dale:
Graze on my lips, and if those hills be dry,
Stray lower, where the pleasant fountains lie.

Within this limit is relief enough,
Sweet bottom-grass, and high delightful plum,
Round rising hillocks, brakes obscure and rough.
To shelter thee from tempest, and from rain:
Then, be my deer, since I am such a park;
No dog shall rouse thee, though a thousand bark.

At this Adonis smiles. as in disdain.
That in each cheek appears a pretty dimple:
Love made those hollows, if himself were slain,
He might be buried in a tomb so simple:
Fore-knowing well, if there he came to be,
Why, there Love liv'd, and there he could not die.

These lovely caves, the round enchanting pits,
Open'd their mouths to swallow Venus' hikig.
Being mad before, how doth she now for wise?
Struck dead at first, what needs a second striking?
Poor queen of love, in thine own law forlorn,
To love a cheek that smiles at thee in scorn.

1 Blue eyes were sometimes called gray
Now which way shall she turn? what shall she say?
Her words are done, her woes the more increasing;
The time is spent, her object will away,
And from her twining arms doth urge releasing.
Pity! she cries, some favour, some remorse!
Away he springs, and hasteth to his horse!

But lo! from forth a cope that neighbours by,
A breeding jennet, lusty, young, and proud,
Adonis' trampling courser doth espy,
And forth she rushes, snorts, and neighs aloud:
The strong-neck'd steed, being tied unto a tree,
Breaketh his rein, and to her straight goes he.

Imperiously he leaps, he neighs, he bounds,
And now his woven girths he breaks asunder;
The bearing earth with his hard hoof he wounds,
Whose hollow womb resounds like heaven's thunder:
The iron bit he crusheth 'twixt his teeth;
Controlling what he was controlled with.

His ears up prick'd, his braided hanging mane
Upon his compass'd crest now stands on end;
His nostrils drink the air, and forth again,
As from a furnace, vapours doth he send:
His eye, which scornfully glitters like fire,
Shows his hot courage, and his high desire.

Sometime he trots, as if he told the steps
With gentle majesty, and modest pride;
Anon he rears upright, curvets and leaps,
As who should say, lo! thus my strength is tried;
And this I do, to captivate the eye
Of the fair breeder that is standing by.

What reeketh he his rider's angry stir,
His flattering holli, or his "Stand, I say?"
What cares he now for curls, or pricking spur,
For rich caparisons, or trapping gay?
He sees his love, and nothing else he sees,
For nothing else with his proud sight agrees.

Look, when a painter would surpass the life,
In limning out a well-proportion'd steed,
His art with nature's workmanship at strife,
As if the dead the living should exceed;
So did his horse excel a common one,
In shape, in courage, colour, pace, and bone.

Round-hoof'd, short-jointed, the fetlocks shag and long,
Broad breast, full eye, small head, and nostril wide,
High crest, short ears, straight legs, and passing strong,
Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttock, tender hide;
Look, what a horse should have he did not lack,
Save a proud rider on so proud a back.

Sometime he scuds far off, and there he stares;
Anon he starts at stirring of a feather;
To bid the wind a base he now prepares,
And whe'er he run, or fly, they know not whether;
For through his mane and tail the high wind sings,
Fanning the hairs, who wave like feather'd wings.

He looks upon his love, and neighs unto her;
She answers him, as if she knew his mind:
Being proud, as females are, to see him woo her,
She puts on outward strangeness, seems unkind:
Spurns at his love, and scorns the heat he feels,
Beating his kind embraces with her heels.

Then, like a melancholy malecontent,
He vails his tail, that, like a falling plume,
Cool shadow to his melting buttock lent:
He stamps, and bites the poor flies in his fume.
His love, perceiving how he is enraged,
Grew kinder, and his fury was assuaged.

His testy master goeth about to take him,
When lo! the unback'd breeder, full of fear,
Jealous of catching, swiftly doth forsake him
With her the horse, and left Adonis there.
As they were mad, unto the wood they hie them
Out-stripping crows that strive to over-fly them.

All swoln with chafing? down Adonis sits,
Banning his boisterous and unruly beast:
And now the happy season once more fits,
That love-sick love by pleading may be blest;
For lovers say, the heart hath treble wrong,
When it is bar'd the aidance of the tongue.

An oven that is stopp'd, or river stay'd,
Burneth more hotly, swelleth with more rage:
So of concealed sorrow may be said,
Free vent of words love's fire doth assuage:
But when the heart's attorney once is mute,
The client breaks, as desperate in his suit.

He sees her coming, and begins to glow,
Even as a dying coal revives with wind,
And with his bonnet hides his angry brow;
Look's on the dull earth with disturbed mind,
Taking no notice that she is so nigh,
For all askance he holds her in his eye.

O! what a sight it was, wistly to view
How she came stealing to the wayward boy;
To note the fighting conflict of her hue,
How white and red each other did destroy:
But now her check was pale, and by and by
It flash'd forth fire, as lightning from the sky.

Now was she just before him as he sat,
And like a lowly lover down she knelt;
With one fair hand she heaveth up his hat,
Her other tender hand his fair cheek feels:
His tenderer cheek receives her soft hand's print
As apt as now-fall'n snow takes any dint.

O, what a war of looks was then between them!
Her eyes, petitioners, to his eyes suing;
His eyes saw her eyes as they had not seen them;
Her eyes wo'd still, his eyes disdain'd the wooring
And all this dumb play had his acts made plain
With tears, which, chorus-like, her eyes did rain

Full gently now she takes him by the hand,
A lily prison'd in a jail of snow;
Or ivory in an alabaster band;
So white a friend, so white a foe:
This beauteous combat, willful and unwilling,
Shew'd like two silver doves that sit a billing.

Once more the engine of her thoughts began:
O fairest mover on this mortal round,
Would thou were I am, and I a man,
My heart all whole as thine, thy heart my wound
For one sweet look thy help I would assure thee
Though nothing but my body's bane would cure thee.

1 A race, or game of prison-bare, or prison-bare. 2 chasing: in ed. 1600.
Give me my hand, saith he, why dost thou feel it?
Give me my heart, saith she, and thou shalt have it;
O! gave it me, lest thy hard heart do steel it.

And being steel'd, soft sighs can never grave it:
Then, love's deep groans I never can regard.

Because Adonis' heart hath made mine hard.

For shame! he cries, let go, and let me go;
My day's delight is past, my horse is gone,
And 'tis your fault I am bereft him so:
I pray you hence, and leave me here alone.

For all my mind, my thought, my busy care,
Is how to get my palfrey from the mare.

Thus she replies: thy palfrey, as he should,
Welcomes the warm approach of sweet desire:
Affection is a coal that must be cool'd;
Else, suffer'd, it will set the heart on fire.

The sea hath bounds, but deep desire hath none.
Therefore, no marvel though thy horse be gone.

How like a jade he stood, tied to the tree,
Servilely mastered with a leathern rein;
But when he saw his love, his youth's fair fee,
He held such petty bondage in disdain:
Throwing the base thong from his bending crest,
Enfranchising his mouth, his back, his breast.

Who sees his true-love in her naked bed,
Teaching the sheets a whiter hue than white,
But, when his guitten eye so full hath fed,
His other agents aim at like delight?

Who is so faint, that dare not be so bold
To touch the fire, the weather being cold?

Let me excuse thy courser, gentle boy,
And learn of him, I heartily beseech thee,
To take advantage on presented joy:
Though I were dumb, yet his proceedings teach thee:
O! learn to love; the lesson is but plain,
And once made perfect, never lost again.

I know not love, quoth he, nor will not know it:
Unless it be a bear, and then I chase it;
'T is much to borrow, and I will not owe it;
My love to love is love but to disgrace it;
For I have heard it is a life in death,
That laughs, and weeps, and all but with a breath.

Who wears a garment shapeless and unfinished?
Who plucks the bud before one leaf put forth?
If springing things be any jot diminish'd,
They wither in their prime, prove nothing worth:
The colt that's back'd and burden'd being young,
Losest his pride, and never waxeth strong.

You hurt my hand with wring'ing; let us part,
And leave this idle theme, this bootless chat:
Remove your siege from my unyielding heart,
To lovo's alarms it will not ope the gate;
Dismiss your vows, your feigned tears, your flattery,
For where a heart is hard, they make no battery.

What! canst thou talk? (quoth she,) hast thou a tongue?
O, would thou hadst not, or I had no hearing!
Thy mermaid's voice hath done me double wrong!
I had my load before, now press'd with hearing:
Melodious discord, heavenly tune harsh-sounding,
Ear's deep sweet music, and heart's deep sore wounding.

Had I no eyes, but ears, my ears would love
That inward beauty and invisible;
Or, were I deaf, thy outward parts would move
Each part in me that were but sensible:
Though neither eyes nor ears, to hear nor see,
Yet should I be in love by touching thee.

Say, that the sense of feeling were bereft me,
And that I could not see, nor hear, nor touch,
And nothing but the very smell were left me,
Yet would my love to thee be still as much:
For from the stillitory of thy face excelling
Comes breath perfume'd, that breatheth love by smell.

But O! what banquet worth thou to the taste,
Being nurse and feeder of the other four:
Would they not wish the feast might ever last,
And bid suspicion double lock the door,
Lest jealousy, that sour unwelcome guest,
Should by his stealing in disturb the feast?

Once more the ruby-colour'd portal opened,
Which to his speech did honey-passage yield;
Like a red morn, that ever yet betoken'd
Wreck to the sea-man, tempest to the field,
Sorrow to shepherds, woe unto the birds:
Gusts and foul flaws to herdsmen and to herds.

This ill presage advisedly she marketh:
Even as the wind is hush'd before it raineth;
Or as the wolf doth grin before he barketh,
Or as the berry breaks before it staineth;
Or like the deadly bullet of a gun,
His meaning struck her ere his words begun.

And at his look she flatly falleth down,
For looks kill love, and love by looks reviveth:
A smile recures the wounding of a frown;
But blessed bankrupt that by love so thriveth!
The silly boy, believing she is dead,
Claps her pale cheek, till clapping makes it red.

And all amaz'd brake off his late intent,
For sharply he did think to reprehend her,
Which cunning love did wittily prevent:
Fair fell the wit that can so well defend her!
For on the grass she lies, as she were slain,
Till his breath breatheth life in her again.

He wrings her nose, he strikes her on the cheeks,
He bends her fingers, holds her pulses hard,
He chafes her lips; a thousand ways he seeks
To mend the hurt that his unkindness marr'd:
He kisses her; and she, by her good will,
Will never rise, so he will kiss her still.

The night of sorrow now is turn'd to day:
Her two blue windows faintly she up-heaveth,
Like the fair sun, when in his fresh array
He cheers the morn, and all the earth's reliefeth:
And as the bright sun glorifies the sky,
So is her face illumin'd with her eye;

Whose beams upon his hairless face are fix'd,
As if from hence they borrow'd all their shine:
Were never four such lamps together mix'd,
Had not his clouded with his brow's repine:
But hers, which through the crystal tears gave light
Shone like the moon in water seen by night.

* world : in ed. 1594.
O! where am I? quoth she, in earth or heaven,
Or in the ocean drench'd, or in the fire?
What hour is this? or morn or weary even?
Do I delight to die, or life desire?
But now I liv'd, and life was death's annoy;
But now I died, and death was lively joy.

O! thou didst kill me; kill me once again:
Thy eye's shrewd tutor, that hard heart of thine,
Hath taught them scornful tricks, and such disdain,
That they have murder'd this poor heart of mine;
And these mine eyes, true leaders to their queen,
But for thy pitious lips no more had seen.

Long may they kiss each other for this cure!
O! never let their crimson livories wear,
And as they last, their verdure still endure,
To drive infection from the dangerous year!
That the star-gazers, having writ on death,
May say, the plague is banish'd by thy breath.

Pure lips, sweet seals in my soft lips imprinted,
What bargains may I make, still to be sealing?
To sell myself I can be well contented,
So thou wilt buy, and pay, and use good dealing;
Which purchase if you make, for fear of slips
Set thy seal-manual on my wax-red lips.

A thousand kisses buys my heart from me,
And pay them at thy leisure, one by one.
What is ten hundred touches unto thee?
Are they not quickly told, and quickly gone?
Say, for non-payment that the debt should double,
Is twenty hundred kisses such a trouble?

Fair queen, quoth he, if any love you owe me,
Measure my strangeness with my unripe years:
Before I know myself, seek not to know me;
No fisher but the ungraw fry forbears:
The mellow plum doth fall, the green sticks fast,
Or being early pluck'd is sour to taste.

Look, the world's comforter, with weary gait,
His day's hot task hath ended in the west:
The owl, night's herald, shrieks, 'tis very late;
The sheep are gone to fold, birds to their nest,
And cool-black clouds that shadow heaven's light,
Do summon us to part, and bid good night.

Now let me say good night; and so say you:
If you will say so, you shall have a kiss.
Good night, quoth she; and, ere he says adieu,
The honey-fee of parting tender'd is:
Her arms do lend his neck a sweet embrace;
Incorporate then they seem, face grows to face.

Till breathless he disjoint'd, and backward drew
The heavenly moisture, that sweet coral mouth,
Whose precious taste her thirsty lips well knew,
Whereon they surfet, yet complain on drought:
He with her plenty press'd, she faint with dearth;
Their lips together glued, fall to the earth.

Now quick desire hath caught the yielding prey,
And glutton-like she feeds, yet never filth:
Her lips are conquerors, his lips obey:
Paying what ransom the insultor will:
Whose vuiture thought doth pitch the price so high,
That she will draw his lips' rich treasure dry.

And having felt the sweetness of the spoil,
With blindfold fury she begins to forge;
Her face doth rock and smoke, her blood doth boil,
And careless lust stirs up a desperate courage;
Planting oblivion, beating reason back,
Forgetting shame's pure blush, and honour's wrack.

Hot, faint, and weary, with her hard embracing,
Like a wild bird being tam'd with too much handling,
Or as the fleet-foot roe that's tir'd with chasing,
Or like the froward infant still'd with dandling,
He now obeys, and now no more resisteth,
While she takes all she can, not all she listeth.

What wax so frozen but dissolves with tempering,
And yields at last to every light impression?
Things out of hope are compass'd oft with venturing.
Churlish in love, whose leave exceeds commission:
Affection faints not like a pale-faced coward,
But then was best, when most his choice is froward.

When he did frown, O! had she then gave over;
Such nectar from his lips she had not suck'd.
Foul words and frowns must not repel a lover;
What though the rose have prickers, yet 'tis pluck'd
Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast,
Yet love breaks through, and picks them all at last.

For pity now she can no more detain him;
The poor fool prays her that he may depart;
She is resolv'd no longer to restrain him,
Bids him farewell, and look well to her heart,
The which, by Cupid's bow she doth protest,
He carries hence incaged in his breast.

Sweet boy, she says, this night I'll waste in sorrow
For my sick heart commands mine eyes to watch;
Tell me, love's master, shall we meet to-morrow?
Say, shall we? shall we? will thou make the match?
He tells her, no; to-morrow he intends
To hunt the boar with certain of his friends.

The boar! (quoth she) whereat a sudden pale,
Like lawn being spread upon the blushing rose,
Usurps her cheek: she trembles at his tale,
And on his neck her yoking arms she throws;
She sinketh down, still hanging by his neck,
He on her belly falls, she of her back.

Now is she in the very lists of love,
Her champion mounted for the hot encounter:
All is imaginary she doth prove,
He will not manage her, although he mount her;
That worse than Tantahs is her annoy,
To clip Elysium, and to lack her joy.

Even as poor birds, deceiv'd with painted grapes,
Do surfet by the eye, and pine the maw,
Even so she languisheth in her mishaps,
As those poor birds that helpless herries saw.
The warm effects which she in him finds missing
She seeks to kindle with continual kissing:

But all in vain; good queen, it will not be:
She hath assay'd as much as may be prov'd:
Her pleading hath deserv'd a greater fee:
She's love, she loves, and yet she is not lov'd.
Fie, fie! he says, you crush me; let me go:
You have no reason to withhold me so.

Fragrant herbs were supposed to possess this power
Embrace
Thou hast been gone, quoth she, sweet boy, ere this,
But that thou toldst me, thou wouldst hunt the boar.
O! be advis’d; thou know’st not what it is
With javelin’s point a churlish swine to gore,
Whose tusks never sheath’d he whetteth still,
Like to a mortal butcher, bent to kill.

On his bow-back he hath a battle set
Of bristly pikes, that ever threat his foes;
His eyes like glow-worms shine when he doth fret,
His snout dugs sepulchres where’er he goes;
Being mov’d, he strikes whate’er is in his way,
And whom he strikes his cruel tusks slay.

His brawny sides, with hairy bristles armed,
Are better proof than thy spear’s point can enter;
His short thick neck cannot be easily harmed;
Being treuil on the lion he will venture.
The thorny brambles and embracing bushes,
As fearless of him, part; through whom he rushes.

Alas! he sought esteems that face of thine,
To which love’s eyes pay tributary gazes:
Nor thy soft hands, sweet lips, and crystal eye,
Whose full perfection all the world amazes;
But having thee at vantage, (wondrous dread!)
Would root these beauties, as he roots the mead.

O! let him keep his loathsome cabin still;
Beauty hath nought to do with such foul fiends:
Come not within his danger by thy will;
They that thrive well take counsel of their friends.
When thou didst name the boar, not to dissemble,
I fear’d thy fortune, and my joints did tremble.

Didst thou not mark my face? Was it not white?
Saw’st thou not signs of fear lurk in mine eye?
Grew I not faint? and fell I not downright?
Within my bosom, whereon thou dost lie,
My boding heart pants, beats, and takes no rest,
But like an earthquake shakes thee on my breast.

For where love reigns, disturbing jealousy
Doth call himself affection’s sentinel;
Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny,
And in a peaceful hour doth cry, “kill, kill!”
Distempering gentle love in his desire,
As air and water do abate the fire.

This sour informer, this bate-breeding spy,
This canker that eats up love’s tender spring,
This erry-tale, dissentious jealousy,
That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring,
Knocks at my heart, and whispers in mine ear,
That if I love thee, thy death should fear:

And more than so, presenteth to mine eye
The picture of an angry chafing boar,
Under whose sharp fangs on his back doth lie
An image like thyself, all stain’d with gore:
Whose blood upon the fresh flowers being shed,
Doth make them droop with grief, and hang the head.

What should I do, seeing thee so indeed,
That tremble at thy imagination?
The thought of it doth make my faint heart bleed,
And fear doth teach it divination:
I prophesy thy death, my living sorrow,
If thou encounter with the boar to-morrow.

But if thou needs wilt hunt, be rul’d by me;
Uncouple at the timorous flying hare,
Or at the fox, which lives by subtility,
Or at the roe, which no encounter dare:
Pursue these fearful creatures o’er the downs,
And on thy well-breath’d horse keep with thy hounds.

And when thou hast on foot the purblind hare,
Mark the poor wretch, to overshut his troubles,
How he out-runs the wind, and with what care
He cranks and crosses with a thousand doubles:
The many muskets through the which he goes,
Are like a labyrinth to amaze his foes.

Sometimes he runs among a flock of sheep,
To make the cunning hounds mistake their smell;
And sometime where earth-delving conies keep,
To stop the loud pursuers in their yell:
And sometime sorteth with a herd of deer.
Danger deviseth shifts; wit waits on fear.

For there his smell, with others being mingled,
The hot scent-smelling hounds are driven to doubt,
Ceasing their clamorous cry, till they have singled
With much ado the cold fault cleanly out;
Then do they spend their mouths: echo replies.
As if another chase were in the skies.

By this, poor Wat, far off upon a hill,
Stands on his hinder legs with listening ear,
To harken if his foes pursue him still:
Anon their loud alarmus he doth hear;
And now his grief may be compared well
To one sore sick, that hears the passing bell.

Then shalt thou see the dew-bedabbed wretch
Turn, and return, indexting with the way;
Each envious brier his weary legs doth scratch;
Each shadow makes him stop, each murmur stay
For misery is trodden on by many,
And being low, never reliev’d by any.

Lie quietly, and hear a little more;
Nay, do not struggle, for thou shalt not rise:
To make thee hate the hunting of the boar,
Unlike myself thou hear’st me moralize,
Applying this to that, and so to so;
For love can comment upon every woe.

Where did I leave?—No matter where, quoth he;
Leave me, and then the story aptly ends:
The night is spent. Why, what of that? quoth she
I am, quoth he, expected of my friends;
And now it is dark, and going I shall fall.
In night, quoth she, desire sees best of all.

But if thou fall, O! then imagine thus,
The earth, in love with thee, thy footings trip,
And all is but to rob thee of a kiss.
Rich preys make true-men thieves; so do thy lips
Make modest Dian cloud and forlorn,
Lest she should steal a kiss, and die forsworn.

Now, of this dark night I perceive the reason:
 Cynthia for shame obscureth her silver shine,
Till forging Nature be condemn’d of treason.
For stealing moulds from heaven that were divine,
Wherin she fram’d thee, in high heaven’s despite,
To shame the sun by day, and her by night.

1 In his power. 2 Contention. 3 Steevens reads: overshoot. 4 Winds. 5 The aperture in a hedge made by the hare in its frequent passage.
And therefore hath she brib'd the Destinies,
To cross the curious workmanship of nature;
To mingle beauty with inimities,
And pure perfection with impure defeature;
Making it subject to the tyranny
Of mad mischances, and much misery;
As burning fevers, agues pale and faint,
life-poisoning pestilence, and frenzies wood;
The marrow-eating sickness, whose attain
Disorder breeds by heating of the blood:
Surfeits, impostumes, grief,' and damn'd despair,
Swear nature's death for framing thee so fair.

And not the least of all these maladies
But in one minute's flight brings beauty under:
Both favour, savour, hue, and qualities,
Whereat th' impartial gazer late did wonder,
Are on the sudden wasted, shaw'd, and done,
As mountain snow melts with the midday sun.

Therefore, despite of fruitless chastity,
Love-lacking vestals, and self-loving nuns,
That on the earth would breed a scarcity,
And barren earth of daughters and of sons,
Be prodigal: the lamp that burns by night,
Dries up his oil to lend the world his light.

What is thy body but a swallowing grave,
Seeming to bury that posterity
Which by the rights of time thou needs must have,
If thou destroy them not in dark obscurity?
If so, the world will hold thee in disdain,
Sith in thy pride so fair a hope is slain.

So in thyself thyself art made away,
A mischief worse than civil home-bred strife;
Or theirs whose desperate hands themselves do slay,
Or butcher sire that reaves his son of life.
Foul cankerous rust the hidden treasure frets,
But gold that's put to use more gold begets.

Nay then, quoth Adon, you will fall again
Into your idle over-handled theme:
The kiss I gave you is bestow'd in vain,
And all in vain you strive against the stream;
For by this black-fac'd night, desire's foul nurse,
Your treatise makes me like you worse and worse.

If love have lent you twenty thousand tongues,
And every tongue more moving than your own,
Bewitching like the wanton mermaid's songs,
Yet in mine ear the tempting tune is blown;
For know, my heart stands armed in mine ear,
And will not let a false sound enter there;

Lest the deceiving harmony should run
Into the quiet closure of my breast,
And then my little heart were quite undone,
in his bedehamber to be bard of rest.
No, lady, no; my heart longs not to groan,
But soundly sleeps, while now it sleeps alone.

What have you urg'd that I cannot reprove?
The path is smooth that leadeth on to danger;
I hate not love, but your device in love,
That lends embraces unto every stranger.
You do it for increase: O strange excuse!
When reason is the bawd to lust's abuse:

Call it not love, for love to heaven is fled,
Since sweating lust on earth usurp'd his name;
Under whose simple semblance he hath fed
Upon fresh beauty, blotting it with blame;
Which the hot tyrant stains, and soon bereaves,
As caterpillars do the tender leaves.

Love comforteth like sunshine after rain,
But lust's effect is tempest after sun;
Love's gentle spring doth always fresh remain,
Lust's winter comes ere summer half be done:
Love surfeits not, lust like a glutton dies;
Love is all truth, lust full of forged lies.

More I could tell, but mere I dare not say;
The text is old, the orator too green.
Therefore, in sadness, now I will away;
My face is full of shame, my heart of teen.
Mine ears, that to your wanton talk attended,
Do burn themselves for having so offended.

With this he breaketh from the sweet embrace
Of those fair arms which bound him to her breast
And homeward through the dark lawn runs apace,
Leaves Love upon her back deeply distress'd.
Look, how a bright star shooteth from the sky,
So glides he in the night from Venus' eye

Which after him she darts, as one on shore
Gazing upon a late-embarked friend,
Till the wild waves will have him seen no more,
Whose ridges with the meeting clouds contend:
So did the merciless and pitchy night
Fold in the object that did feed her sight.

Whereat amaz'd, as one that узнавает
Hath dropp'd a precious jewel in the flood,
Or 'stonish'd as night wanderers often are,
Their light blown out in some mistrustful wood;
Even so confounded in the dark she lay,
Having lost the fair discovery of her way.

And now she beats her heart, whereby she groans,
That all the neighbour-caves, as seeming troubled,
Make verbal repetition of her moans:
Passion on passion deeply is redoubled.
Ah me! she cries, and twenty times, woe, woe!
And twenty echoes twenty times cry so.

She marking them, begins a wailing note,
And sings extemporally a woeful ditty;
How love makes young men thrall, and old men dote,
How love is wise in folly, foolish witty:
Her heavy anthem still concludes in woe,
And still the choir of echoes answer so.

Her song was tedious, and outwore the night,
For lovers' hours are long, though seeming short.
If pleas'd themselves, others, they think, delight
In such like circumstance, with such like sport: Their copious stories, oftentimes begun,
End without audience, and are never done.

For who hath she to spend the night within,
But idle sounds resembling parasites?
ike shrill-tongu'd tapsters answering every call,
Soothed the humour of fantastic wise?
She says, 'tis so: they answer all, 'tis so;
And would say after her, if she said no.
Venus salutes him with this fair good-morrow.

And wakes the morning, from whose silver breast

The sun ariseth in his majesty;

Who doth the world so graciously behold,

That cedar-tops and hills seem burnish'd gold.

Venus salutes him with this fair good-morrow.

O thou clear god, and patron of all light,

From whom each lamp and shining star doth borrow

The beauteous influence that makes him bright,

There lives a son that suck'd an earthly mother,

May lend thee light, as thou dost lend to other.

This said, she hasteth to a myrtle grove,

Musing the morning is so much o'er-worn;

And yet she hears no tidings of her love:

She hearkens, for his hounds, and for his horn:

Anon she hears them chaunt it lustily.

And all in haste she coehest to the cry.

And as she runs, the bushes in the way

Some catch her by the neck, some kiss her face,

Some twin'd about her thigh to make her stay.

She wildly breaketh from their strict embrace,

Like a milch doe, whose swelling dugs do ache,

Hasting to feed her fawn hid in some brake.

By this she hears the hounds are at a bay,

Whereat she starts, like one that spies an adder

Wreath'd up in fatal folds, just in his way,

The fear whereof doth make him shake and shudder:

Even so the timorous yelping of the hounds

Appalls her senses, and her spirit confounds.

For now she knows it is no gentle chase,

But the blunt boar, rough bear, or lion proud,

Because the cry remaineth in one place,

Where fearfully the dogs exclaim aloud;

Finding their enemy to be so curst,

They all strain courtesy who shall cope him first.

This dismal cry rings sadly in her ear,

Through which it enters to surprise her heart;

Who, overcome by doubt and bloodless fear,

With cold-pale weakness numbeth each feeling part:

Like soldiers, when their captain once doth yield,

They basely fly, and dare not stay the field.

Thus stands she in a trembling exaty,

Till cheering up her senses all dismay'd,

She tells them, 'tis a causeless fantasy,

And childish error that they are afraid;

Bids them leave quaking, bids them fear no more

And with that word she spied the hunted boar;

Whose frothy mouth bepainted all with red,

Like milk and blood being mingled both together,

A second fear through all her sinews spread,

Which madly hurries her she knows not whither:

This way she runs, and now she will no further,

But back retires to rate the boar for mutter.

A thousand spleens bear her a thousand ways;

She treads the path that she untreads again:

Her more than haste is mated with delays,

Like the proceedings of a drunken brain;

Full of respect, yet nought at all respecting,

In hand with all things, nought at all affecting.

Here kennel'd in a brake she finds a hound,

And asks the weary catiff for his master;

And there another licking of his wound,

'Gainst venon'd sores the only sovereign plaster;

And here she meets another sadly howling.

To whom she speaks, and he replies with bowing.

When he hath ceased his ill-resounding noise,

Another slip-mouth'd mourner, black and grim,

Against the welkin vollies out his voice;

Another and another answer him,

Clapping their proud tails to the ground below,

Shaking their scratch'd ears, bleeding as they go.

Look, how the world's poor people are amazed

At apparitions, signs, and prodigies,

Whereon with fearful eyes they long have gazed,

Infusing them with dreadfull prophecies;

So she at these sad signs draws up her breath,

And, sighing it again, exclaims on death.

Hard-favour'd tyrant, ugly, meagre, lean.

Hateful divorce of love, (thus chides she death)

Grinning grinning ghost, earth's worm, what dost thou mean.

To stifle beauty, and to steal his breath.

Who when he liv'd, his breath and beauty set

Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet?

If he be dead.—O no! it cannot be,

Seeing his beauty, thou should'st strike at it.

O yes! it may; thou hast no eyes to see,

But hatefully at random dost thou hit.

Thy mark is feeble age; but thy false dart

Mistakes that aim, and cleaves an infant's heart.

Hadst thou but bid beware, then he had spoke,

And hearing him thy power had lost his power.

The destinies will curse thee for this stroke;

They bid thee crop a weed, thou pluck at a flower.

Love's golden arrow at him should have fled,

And not death's ebon dart, to strike him dead.

Dost thou drink tears, that thou provok'st such weeping?

What may a heavy groan advantage thee?

Why hast thou cast into eternal sleeping

Those eyes that taught all other eyes to see?

Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigour,

Since her best work is ruin'd with thy rigour.

Here overcome, as one full of despair.

She vail'd her eye-lids, who, like sluces, stopped

The crystal tide that from her two cheeks fair

In the sweet channel of her bosom dropped;

But through the flood-gates breaks the silver rain,

And with his strong course opens them again.

O, how her eyes and tears did lend and borrow!

Her eyes seen in the tears, tears in her eye;

Both crystals, where they view'd each other's sorrow.

Sorrow that friendly sights sought still to dry:

But like a stormy day, now wind, now rain.

Signs dry her cheeks, tears make them wet again.

Variable passions through her constant woe,

As striving who should best become her grief;

All entertain'd, each passion labours so,

That every present sorrow seemeth chief

But none is best; then, join they all together,

Like many clouds consulting for foul weather

\[1\) Approaches \[2\) vers: in ed. 1596. \[3\) Confounded. \[4\) respects: ed. 1596]
By this far off she hears some huntsman hollow;
A nurse's song ne'er pleas'd her babe so well:
The dire imagination she did follow
This sound of hope doth labour to expel;
For now reviving joy bids her rejoice,
And flatters her it is Adonis' voice.

Whereat her tears began to turn their tide,
Being prison'd in her eye, like pearls in glass;
Yet sometimes falls an orient drop beside,
Which her cheek melts, as scorning it should pass
To wash the foul face of the sluttish ground,
Who is but drunk'en, when she seemeth drown'd.

O hard-believing love, how strange it seems
Not to believe, and yet too credulous!
Thy weal and woe are both of them extremes;
Despair and hope make thee ridiculous:
The one doth flatter thee in thoughts unlikely,
in likely thoughts the other kills thee quickly.

Now she unveaves the web that she hath wrought;
Adonis lives, and Death is not to blame:
It was not she that call'd him all to nought;
Now she adds honours to his hateful name;
She eleps him king of graves, and grave for kings,
Imperious supreme of all mortal things.

No, no, quoth she, sweet Death, I did but jest;
Yet pardon me, I felt a kind of fear,
When as I met the boar, that bloody beast;
Which knows no pity, but is still severe;
Then, gentle shadow, (truth I must confess)
I rai'd on thee, fearing my love's decease.

'Tis not my fault: the boar provok'd my tongue;
Be wreak'd on him, invisible commander;
'Tis he, foul creature, that hath done thee wrong;
did but act, he's author of thy slander.
Grief hath two tongues, and never woman yet
Could rule them both, without ten women's wit.

Thus hoping that Adonis is alive,
Her rash suspect she doth extenuate;
And that his beauty may the better thrive,
With death she humbly doth insinuate:
'Tells him of trophies, statues, tombs, and stories,
His victories, his triumphs, and his glories.

O love! quoth she, how much a fool was I,
To be of such a weak and silly mind,
To wail his death, who lives, and must not die,
Till mutual overthrow of mortal kind:
For he being dead, with him is beauty slain,
And, beauty dead, black chaos comes again.

Fie, fie, foul love! thou art so full of fear,
As one with treasure laden, hemm'd with thieves:
Trifles, unwitnessed with eye or ear,
Thy coward heart with false bethinking grieves.
Even at this word she hears a merry horn,
Whereat she leaps that was but late forlorn.

As falcons to the lure, away she flies:
The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light;
And in her haste unfortunately slips
The foul boar's conquest on her fair delight:
Which seen, her eyes, as murder'd with the view,
Like stars asham'd of day, themselves withdrew.

Or, as the snail, whose tender horns being hit,
Shrinks backward in his shelly cave with pain,
And there all smoother'd up in shade doth sit,
Long after fearing to creep forth again:
So, at his bloody view, her eyes are fled
Into the deep-dark cabins of her head:

Where they resign their office and their light
To the disposing of her troubled brain;
Who bids them still consort with ugly night,
And never wound the heart with looks again;
Who, like a king perplexed in his throne,
By their suggestion gives a deadly groan.

Whereat each tributary subject quakes;
As when the wind, imprison'd in the ground,
Struggling for passage, earth's foundation shakes,
Which with cold terror doth men's minds confound.
This mutiny each part doth so surprise,
That from their dark beds once more leap her eyes.

And, being open'd, threw unwilling light
Upon the wide wound that the boar had trench'd
In his soft flank; whose wonted lily white
With purple tears, that his wound wept, was drench'd
No flower was nigh, no grass, herb, leaf, or weed.
But stole his blood, and seem'd with him to bleed.

This solemn sympathy poor Venus beheld;
Over one shoulder doth she hang her head,
Dumbly she passions, frantically she doteth;
She thinks he could not die, he is not dead:
Her voice is stopp'd, her joints forget to bow,
Her eyes are mad that they have wept till now.

Upon his hurt she looks so stedfastly,
That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem three
And then she reprehends her mangling eye,
That makes more gashes where no breach should be:
His face seems twain, each several limb is doubled
For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being troubled.

My tongue cannot express my grief for one,
And yet, quoth she, behold two Adonis dead!
My sighs are blown away, my salt tears gone,
Mine eyes are turn'd to fire; my heart to lead:
Heavy heart's lead, melt at mine eyes' red fire!
So shall I die by drops of hot desire.

Alas, poor world, what treasure hast thou lost!
What face remains alive that's worth the viewing?
Whose tongue is music now? what canst thou boast
Of things long since, or any thing ensuing?
The flowers are sweet, their colours fresh and trim,
But true sweet beauty liv'd and died with him.

Bonnet nor veil henceforth no creature wear:
Nor sun nor wind will ever strive to kiss you:
Having no fair to lose, you need not fear:
The sun doth scorn you, and the wind doth pass you:
But when Adonis liv'd, sun and sharp air
Lurk'd like two thieves, to rob him of his fair:

And therefore would he put his bonnet on.
Under whose brim the gaudy sun would peep,
The wind would blow it off, and, being gone.
Play with his locks; then, would Adonis weep,
And straight in pity of his tender years,
They both would strive who first should dry his tears,
To see his face, the lion walk'd along
Behind some hedge, because he would not fear him;
To recreate himself when he hath sung,
The tiger would be tame, and gently hear him;
If he had spoke, the wolf would leave his prey,
And never fright the silly lamb that day.

When he beheld his shadow in the brook,
The fishes spread on it their golden gills:
When he was by, the birds such pleasure took,
That some would sing, some other in their bills
Would bring him mulberries, and ripe red cherries;
He fed them with his sight, they him with berries.

But this foul, grim, and urchin-sounted boar,
Whose downward eye still looketh for a grave,
Ne'er saw the beauteous livery that he wore;
Witness the entertainment that he gave:
If he did see his face, why then, I know,
He thought to kiss him, and hath kill'd him so.

'Tis true, 'tis true: thus was Adonis slain.
He ran upon the boar with his sharp spear,
Who did not wet his teeth at him again,
But by a kiss thought to persuade him there;
And muzzling in his flank, the loving swine
Sheath'd, unaware, the tusk in his soft groin.

Had I been too bold like him, I must confess,
With kissing him I should have kill'd him first:
But he is dead, and never did he bless
My youth with his, the more am I accurst.
With this she falleth in the place she stood,
And stains her face with his congealed blood.

She looks upon his lips, and they are pale;
She takes him by the hand, and that is cold;
She whispers in his ears a heavy tale,
As if they heard the woful words she told:
She lifts the coffer-lids that close his eyes,
Where lo! two lamps, burnt out, in darkness lies:

Two glasses, where herself herself beheld
A thousand times, and now no more reflect;
Their virtue lost, wherein they late excelled,
And every beauty rob'd of his effect:
Wonder of time, quoth she, this is my spite,
That, thou being dead, the day should yet be light.

Since thou art dead, lo! here I prophesy,
Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend:
It shall be waited on with jealousy,
Find sweet beginning, but unsavoury end;
Ne'er settled equally, but high or low,
That all love's pleasure shall not match his woe.

It shall be fickle, false, and full of fraud;
Bud and be blasted in a breathing-while;
The bottom poison, and the top o'er-straw'd
With sweets, that shall the truest sight beguil'd.
The strongest body shall it make most weak,
Strike the wise dumb, and teach the fool to speak
It shall be sparing, and too full of riot,
Teaching decrepit age to tread the measures;
The staring ruffian shall it keep in quiet.
Puick down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures
It shall be raging mad, and silly mild,
Make the young old, the old become a child.

It shall suspect, where is no cause of fear;
It shall not fear, where it should most mistrust;
It shall be merciful, and too severe,
And most deceiving, when it seems most just;
Perverse it shall be, where it shows most toward;
Put fear to valour, courage to the coward.

It shall be cause of war, and dire events,
And set dissension 'twixt the son and sire;
Subject and servile to all discontent,
As dry combustious matter is to fire:
Sith in his prime death doth my love destroy,
They that love best, their loves shall not enjoy.

By this the boy, that by her side lay kill'd,
Was melted like a vapour from her sight,
And in his blood, that on the ground spill'd,
A purple flower sprung up, chequer'd with white;
Resembling well his pale cheeks, and the blood
Which in round drops upon their whiteness stood.

She bows her head the new-sprung flower to smell,
Comparing it to her Adonis' breath;
And says, within her bosom it shall dwell,
Since he himself is rest from her by death:
She crops the stalk, and in the breach appears
Green dropping sap, which she compares to tears.

Poor flower, quoth she, this was thy father's guise,
Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire,
For every little grief to wet his eyes:
To grow unto himself was his desire,
And so 'tis thine; but know, it is as good
To wither in my breast, as in his blood.

Here was thy father's bed, here in my breast;
Thou art the next of blood, and 'tis thy right;
Lo! in this hollow cradle take thy rest,
My throbbing heart shall rock thee day and night
There shall not be one minute in an hour,
Wherein I will not kiss my sweet love's flower.

Thus weary of the world, away she hies,
And yokes her silver doves; by whose swift aid
Their mistress mounted through the empty skies
In her light chariot quickly is convey'd;
Holding their course to Paphos, where their queen.
Means to immure herself and not be seen.

INTRODUCTION.

"Lucrece. London. Printed by Richard Field, for John Harrison, and are to be sold at the signe of the white Greenhound in Paules Church-yard. 1594." 4to. 47 leaves.

"Lucrece." as it is merely called in the earlier impressions, came out in the year following "Venus and Adonis," and it was printed for John Harrison, the publisher of the edition of "Venus and Adonis," in 1593. It had been previously, and under a more explanatory title, in the Stationers' Registers:

9 May 1594.

Mr. Harrison, sen. A book intituled the Ravyshement of Like, "Venus and Adonis," it was dedicated to the Earl of Southampton, but in a more confident and assured spirit.

This second production was, probably, not quite so popular as the first, and it was not reprinted until 1598, when forth a third edition of it in 1600; the fourth edition was issued in 1607: these are not so marked, and Malone tells us that he had heard of impressions in 1596 and 1602, but they have not since come to light; and our compiler is that "Lucrece," which was printed in three times between 1594 and 1607. An edition in 1616 purports to have been "newly revised and corrected;" but, as Malone truly states, it is the most inaccurate and corrupt of the ancient copies; and he adds that "most of the alterations seem to have been made, because the reviser did not understand the poet's meaning." That Shakespeare had nothing to do with the revision and correction of this edition requires no proof; and so little was it esteemed, that it was not followed in its changes in the edition of 1623, which also professes to have been "newly revised." This last is accompanied by marginal notes, prosically explanatory of the incidents poetically narrated.

The earliest mention of "Lucrece" occurs in the year in which it made its first appearance. Michael Drayton published his "Matilda," (a poem in seven-line stanzas, like "Lucrece") in 1594, and we meet with the following passage:

"Lucrece, of whom proud Rome hath boasted long, Late of 100 000 to live another age."

And here are told of Tarquin's wrong,

Her chaste denial, and the tyrant's rage,

Acting her passions on our stately stage:

She is remembered, all forgetting me,

Yet I am fair and chaste as ever she was.

A difficulty here may arise out of the fifth line, as if Drayton were referring to a play upon the story of Lucrece, and it is very possible that one was then in existence. Thomas Heywood's tragedy, "The Rape of Lucrece," did not appear in print until 1608, and he could hardly have been old enough to have been the author of such a drama in 1594: nor, nevertheless, have availed himself of an elder play, and, according to the practice of the time, he may have felt warranted in publishing it as his own. It is likely, however, that Drayton's expressions are not to be taken literally, and that his meaning merely was, that the story of Lucrece had lately been revived, and brought upon the stage of the world: if this opinion be correct, the stanza we have above quoted contains a clear allusion to Shakespeare's "Lucrece;" and a question then presents itself, why Drayton entirely omitted it in the after impressions of his "Matilda?" He was a poet who, as we have shown in the Introduction to "Julius Cæsar," was in the habit of making extensive alterations in his productions, as they were severely reprinted, and the suppression of this stanza may have proceeded from many other causes than repentance of the praise he had bestowed upon a rival.

The edition of "Lucrece" we have taken as our text is the first, like "Venus and Adonis," was printed by Richard Field, though not on his own account. It may be stated on the whole to be an extremely creditable specimen of his typography: as the sheets were going through the press, some material errors were, however, observed in them, and they are therefore in several places corrected. This fact has hitherto escaped remark, but the variations are explained in our notes.

Modern editors have performed their task without due care, but of their want of attention we shall only here adduce two specimens. In one of the speeches in which Lucrece endeavours to dissuade Tarquin from his purpose, she tells him,

"Thou back'st reproach against long-living land."

Which every modern editor misprints,

"Thou back'st reproach against long-lived land."

Our second proof is from a later portion of the poem, just after Collatine has returned home, and meets his dishonoured wife: the true text, speaking of Collatine and Lucreta, is,

"Both stood like old acquaintance in a trance."

Met far from home, wondering each other's chance."

Malone, and all editors after him, make nonsense of the couplet, by printing,

"But stood like old acquaintance in a trance," &c.

depriving the verb of its nominative, and destroying the whole force of the figure. It would be easy to add other instances of the same kind, but we refer for them to our own notes.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE
HENRY Wriothesley, EARL OF SOUTHWAMPTON, AND BARON OF TICHFIELD.

The love I dedicate to your lordship is without end; whereof this pamphlet, without beginning, is but a superfluous moiety. The warrant I have of your honourable disposition, not by the worth of my untutored lines, makes it assured of acceptance. What I have done is yours; what I have to do is yours; being part in all I have, devoted yours. Were my worth greater, my duty would show greater; means finite, as it is, it is bound to your lordship, to whom I wish long life, still lengthened with all happiness.

Your lordship's in all duty,
William Shakespeare.

THE ARGUMENT.

Lucius Tarquinus (for his excessive pride surauned Superbus) after he had caused his own father-in-law, Servius Tullius, to be cruelly murdered, and, contrary to the Roman laws and customs, not requiring or staying for the people's suffrages, had possessed himself of the kingdom, went, accompanied with his sons and other noblemen of Rome, to besiege Ardea: during which siege, the principal men of the army meeting one evening at the tent of Sextus Tarquinus, the king's son, in their discourses after supper every one commended the virtues of his own wife: among whom, Collatius extolled the incomparable chastity of his Lucreta, in an agreeable manner they all posted to Rome; and intending by their acost and sudden arrival to make trial of that which every one had before avouched, only Collatines finds his wife (though it were late in the night) spinning amongst her maids; the other ladies were all found dancing and reveling, or in several diversions; when upon the noblemen yielded Collatines the victory, and his wife the fame. At that time Sextus Tarquinius, being famed with Lucrece' beauty, yet so flattering his passions for the present, departed with the rest back to the camp; from whence he shortly after privately withdrew himself, and was (according to his estate) royally entertained and lodged by Lucrece at Collatine. The same night he treacherously stealthed into her chamber, violently ravished her, and early in the morning speedeth away. Lucrece, in this lamentable plight, hastily dispatched a messenger, one to Rome for her father, another to the camp for Collatine. They came, the one accompanied with Junius Brutus, the other with Publius Valerius; and finding Lucrece attire her mourning habit, demanded the cause of her sorrow. She, first taking an oath of them for her revenge, revealed the actor, and whole manner of his dealing, and withal suddenly stabbed herself; which deed, with one consent they all vowed to put out the whole hated family of the Tarquins, and bearing the dead body to Rome, Brutus acquainted the people with the deed, and manner of the vile deed, with a bitter invective against the tyranny of the king; whereas the people were so moved, that, with one consent and a general acclamation, the Tarquins were all exiled, and the state government changed from kings to consuls.

From the besieged Ardea all in pest,
Borne by the trustless wings of also desire,
Lust-breathed Tarquin leaves the Roman host,
And to Collatine bears the lightless fire
Which, in pale embers hid, lurks to aspire,
And girdle with embracing flames the waist
Of Collatines fair love, Lucrece the chaste.

Haply that name of chaste unhappily set
The bateless edge on his keen appetite;
When Collatine unwisely did not let
To praise the clear unmatched red and white,
Which triumph'd in that sky of his delight;
Where mortal stars, as bright as heaven's beauties,
With pure aspects did him peculiar duties.

For he the night before, in Tarquin's tent,
Unloek'd the treasure of his happy state;
What priceless wealth the heavens had him lent
In the possession of his beautions mate;
Reckoning his fortune at such high proud rate,
That kings might be espoused to more fame,
But king nor peer to such a peerless dame.

O happiness! enjoy'd but of a few;
And, if possess'd, as soon decay'd and done,
As is the morning's silver-melting dew
Against the golden splendour of the sun:
An expir'd date, cancel'd ere well begun;
Honour and beauty, in the owner's arms,
Are weakly fortress'd from a world of harms.

Beauty itself doth of itself persuade
The eyes of men without an orator;
What needeth, then, apologies be made
To set forth that which is so singular?
Or why is Collatine the publisher
Of that rich jewel he should keep unknown
From thisievish ears, because it is his own?

Perchance his boast of Lucrece's sovereignty
Suggested this proud issue of a king:
For by our cars our hearts oft tainted be:
Perchance that envy of so rich a thing,
Braving compare, disdainfully did sting
A want!
His high-pitch'd thoughts, that meaner men should
That golden hop which their superiors want.

But some untimely thought did instigate
His all too timelss speed, if none of those;
His honour, his affairs, his friends, his state,
Neglected all, with swift intent he goes
To quench the coal which in his liver glows.
O rash, false heat! I wrapt in repentant cold,
Thy hasty spring still blasts, and ne'er grows old.

When at Collatium this false lord arrived,
Well was he welcom'd by the Roman dame,
Within whose face beauty and virtue arrived
Which of them both should underprop her fame.
When virtue brag'd, beauty would blush for shame
When beauty boasted blushes, in despite
Virtue would stain that o'er with silver white.

But beauty, in that white intituled,
From Venus' doves doth challenge that fair field;
Then, virtue claims from beauty beauty's red,
Which virtue gave the golden age to gild
Their silver cheeks, and call'd it then their shield;
Teaching them thus to use it in the fight,
When shame assai'd, the red should fence the white.

This heraldry in Lucrece' face was seen,
Argued by beauty's red, and virtue's white:
Of either's colour was the other qm,
Proving from world's minority their right,
Yet their ambition makes them still to fight,
The sovereignty of either being so great,
That oft they interchange each other's sent.

This silent war of lilies and of roses,
Which Tarquin view'd in her fair face's field,
In their pure ranks his traitor eye encloses;
Where, lest between them both it should be kill'd,
The coward captive vanquished doth yield
To those two armies, that would let him go,
Rather than triumph in so false a foe.

Now thinks he, that his husband's shallow tongue,
The niggard prodigal that prais'd her so,
In that high task hath done her beauty wrong,
Which far exceds his barren skil to show:
Therefore, that praise which Collatine doth owe
Enchanted Tarquin answers with surmise
In silent wonder of still gazing eyes.

This earthly saint, adored by this devil,
Little suspecteth the false worshipper,
For unstain'd thoughts do seldom dream on evil;
Birds never lim'd no secret bushes fear.
So guiltless she securely gives good cheer,
And reverend welcome to her princely guest,
Whose inward ill no outward harm express'd

For that he colour'd with his high estate,
Hiding base sin in plaits of majesty;
That nothing in him seem'd inordinate,
Save sometime too much wonder of his eye,
Which, having all, all could not satisfy;
But, poorly rich, so wanteth in his store,
That eloy'd with much, he pineth still for more.

But she, that never cop'd with stranger eyes,
Could pick no meaning from their parted looks,
Nor read the subtle shining secrets
Writ in the glassy margents of such books:
She touch'd no unknown baits, nor fear'd no hooks.
Nor could she moralize his wanton sight,
More than his eyes were open'd to the light.

Yet stories to her ears her husband's fame,
Won in the fields of fruitful Italy;
And decks with praises Collatine's high name,
Made glorious by his manly chivalry,
With bruised arms and wreaths of victory:
Her joy with head'd-up hand she doth express,
And wordless so greets heaven for his success.

Far from the purpose of his coming thither,
He makes excuses for his being there:
No cloudy show of stormy blustering weather
Doth yet in his fair welkin once appear;
Till sable night, mother of dread and fear,
Upon the world dim darkness doth display,
And in her vaulty prison stows the day.

For then is Tarquin brought unto his bed,
Intending' weariness with heavy sprite;
For after supper long he questioned
With modest Lucrece, and wore out the night:
Now laden slumber with life's strength doth fight,
And every one to rest themselves betake, I wak'ne
Save thieves, and cares, and troubled minds, that
As one of which doth Tarquin lie revolving
The sundry dangers of his will's obtaining;
Yet ever to obtain his will resolving,
Though weak-built hopes persuade him to abstaining:
Despair to gain doth traffic for gaining;
And when great treasure is the meed proposed,
Though death be adjure, there's no death supposed.

Those that much covet are with gain so fond,
That what they have not, that which they possess,
They scatter and unloose it from their bond,
And so, by hoping more, they have but less;
Or, gaining more, the profit of excess
Is but to surfeit, and such griefs sustain,
That they prove bankrupt in this poor rich gain.

The aim of all is but to nurse the life
With honour, wealth, and ease, in waning age;
And in this aim there is such thwarting strife,
That one for all, or all for one we gage;
As life for honour in fell battles' rage;
Honour for wealth, and oft that wealth doth cost
The death of all, and all together lost.

So that in venturing ill, we leave to be
The things we are for that which we expect;
And this ambitious foul infirmity
In having much, torment us with defect
Of that we have: so then we do neglect
The thing we have; and, all for want of wit,
Make something nothing by augmenting it.

Such hazard now must doting Tarquin make,
Pawing his honour to obtain his lust,
And for himself himself he must forsake:
Then, where is truth, if there be no self-trust?
When shall he think to find a stranger just,
When he himself himself confounds, betrays
To slanderous tongues, and wretched hateful days?

Now stol upon the time the dead of night,
When heavy sleep had clos'd up mortal eyes;

No comfortable star did lend his light,
No noise but owls' and wolves' death-boding cries:
Now serves the season that they may surprise
The silly lambs. Pure thoughts are dead and still,
While lust and murder wake, to stain and kill

And now this lustful lord leapt' from his bed
Throwing his mantle rudely o'er his arm,
Is madly toss'd between desire and dread:
Th' one sweetly flatters, th' other soreth harm,
But honest fear, bewitch'd with lust's soul charm
Doth too too oft betake him to retire,
Beaten away by brain-sick rude desire.

His falchion on a flint he softly smiteh,
That from the cold stone sparks of fire do fly,
Whereat a waxen torch forthwith he lighteth,
Which must be lode-star to his lustful eye;
And to the flame thus speaks advisedly:
As from this cold flint I enforc'd this fire,
So Lucrece must I force to my desire.

Here, pale with fear, he doth premeditate
The dangers of his loathsome enterprise,
And in his inward mind he doth debate
What following sorrow may on this arise:
Then, looking scornfully, he doth despise
His naked armour of still slaughtered lust,
And justly thus controls his thoughts unjust.

Fair torch, burn out thy light, and lend it not
To darken her whose light excelleth thine;
And die, unhallow'd thoughts, before you blot
With your uncleanness that which is divine:
Offer pure incense to so pure a shrine:
Let fair humanity abhor the deed,
That spots and stains love's modest snow-white wreath.

O shame to knighthood, and to shining arms!
O foul dishonour to my household's grave!
O impious act, including all foul harms!
A martial man to be soft fancy's slave!
True valour still a true respect should have;
Then, my digression is so vile, so base,
That it will live engraven in my face.

Yea, though I die, the scandal will survive,
And be an eye-sore in my golden coat;
Some loathsome dash the herald will contrive,
To cipher me how fondly I did dote;
That my posterity, sham'd with the note,
Shall curse my bones, and hold it for no sin
To wish that I their father had not been.

What win I, if I gain the thing I seek?
A dream, a breath, a froth of fleeting joy.
Who buys a minute's mirth to wait a week,
Or sells eternity to get a toy?
For one sweet grape who will the vine destroy?
Or what fond beggar, but to touch the crown?
Would with the sceptre straight be stricken down?

If Collatine dream of my intent,
Will he not wake, and in a desperate rage
Post hither, this vile purpose to prevent?
This siege that hath engirt his marriage,
This blurt to youth, this sorrow to the sage,
This dying virtue, this surviving shame,
Whose crime will bear an ever-during blame.
THE RAPE OF LUCRECE.

O! what expense can my invention make,
When thou shalt charge me with so black a deed?
Will not my tongue be mute, my frail joints shake,
Mine eyes forego their light, my false heart bleed?
The guilt being great, the fear doth still exceed;
And extreme fear can neither fight nor fly,
But coward-like with trembling terror die.

Had Collatinus kill'd my son or sire,
Or lain in ambush to betray my life,
Or were he not my dear friend, this desire
Might have excuse to work upon his wife,
As in revenge or quital of such strife;
But as he is my kinsman, my dear friend,
The shame and fault finds no excuse nor end.

Shameful it is,—ay, if the fact be known;
Hateful it is;—there is no hate in loving:
I'll beg her love—but she is not her own;
The worst is but denial, and reproving,
My will is strong, past reason's weak removing:
Who fears a sentence, or an old man's saw,
Shall by a painted cloth be kept in awe.

Thus, graceless, holds he disputation
'Tween frozen conscience and hot burning will;
And with good thoughts makes dispensation,
Urging the worser sense for vantage still;
Which in a moment doth confound and kill
All pure effects, and doth so far proceed,
That what is vile shows like a virtuous deed.

Quoth he, she took me kindly by the hand,
And gazed'd for tidings in my eager eyes,
Fearing some hard news from the warlike band,
Where her beloved Collatinus lies.
O, how her fear did make her colour rise!
First red as roses that on lawn we lay,
Then, white as lawn, the roses took away.

And how her hand, in my hand being lock'd,
Fare't doth to tremble with her loyal fear!
Which struck her sad, and then it faster rock'd,
Until her husband's welfare she did hear;
Whereat she smiled, with so sweet a cheer,
That had Narcissus seen her as she stood,
Self-love had never drov'd him in the flood.

Why hunt I, then, for colour or excuses?
All orators are dumb when beauty pleatheth;
Poor wretches have remorse in poor abuses;
Love thrives not in the heart that shadows dreadeth:
Affection is my captain, and he leadeth;
And when his gaudy banner is display'd,
The coward fights, and will not be dismay'd.

Then, childish fear, avaunt! debating, die!
Respect and reason, wait on wrinkled age!
My heart shall never countermand mine eye:
Sad pause and deep regard bereav'd the sage;
My part is youth, and beats these from the stage.
Desire my pilot is, beauty my prize;
Then, who fears sinking where such treasure lies?

As corn o'er-grown by weeds, so heedful fear
Is almost check'd by unresisted lust.
Away he steals with open listening ear,
Full of soul hope, and full of fond mistrust;
Both which, as servitors to the unjust,

So cross him with their opposite persuasion,
That now he vows a league, and now invasion.

Within his thought her heavenly image sits,
And in the selfsame seat sits Collatinus:
That eye which looks on her confounds his wits;
That eye which him beholds, as more divine,
Unto a view so false will not incline:
But with a pure appeal seeks to the heart,
Which, once corrupted, takes the worser part;

And therein heartens up his servile powers,
Who, flatter'd by her leader's jovial show,
Stuff up his lust, as minutes fill up hours;
And as their captain, so their pride doth grow,
Paying more slavish tribute than they owe.

By reprobate desire thus madly led,
The Roman lord marcheth to Lucrece' bed.

The locks between her chamber and his will,
each one by him enforce'd retires his ward;
But as they open they all rate his ill,
Which drives the creeping thief to some regard;
The threshold grates the door to have him heard:
Night-wandering wretches shriek, to see him there;
They fright him, yet he still pursues his fear.

As each unwilling portal yields him way,
Through little vents and crannies of the place
The wind wars with his torch to make him stay,
And blows the smoke of it into his face,
Extinguishing his conduct in this case;
But his hot heart, with fond desire doth seach,
Puffs forth another wind that fires the torch:

And being lighted, by the light he spies
Lucetia's glove, wherein her needle sticks:
He takes it from the rushes where it lies,
And gripping it, the needle his finger pricks:
As who should say, this glove to wanton tricks
Is not in use; return again in haste:
Thou seest our mistress' ornaments are chaste.

But all these poor forbiddings could not stay him,
He in the worst sense construes their denial;
The doors, the wind, the glove, that did delay him,
He takes for accidental things of trial,
Or as those bars which stop the hourly dial;
Who with a ling'ring stay his course doth let,
Till every minute pays the hour his debt.

So, so, quoth he; these lets attend the time,
Like little frosts that sometime threat the spring,
To add a more rejoicing to the prime,
And give the snaped' birds more cause to sing,
Pain pays the income of each precious thing;
Huge rocks, high winds, strong pirates, shelves and
The merchant fears, ere rich at home he lands.

Now is he come unto the chamber-door,
That shuts him from the heaven of his thought,
Which with a yielding latch, and with so more,
Hath barr'd him from the blessed thing he sought.
So from himself impiety hath wrought,
That for his prey to pray he doth begin,
As if the heavens should countenance his sin.

But in the midst of his unfruitful prayer,
Having solicited th' eternal power

1 Niup'd by the frost.
That his foul thoughts might compass his fair fair,
And they would stain auspicious to the hour,
Even there he starts: —quoth he, I must delover:
The powers to whom I pray abhor this fact,
How can they, then, assist me in the act?

Then Love and Fortune be my gods, my guide!
My will is back'd with resolution:
Thoughts are but dreams, till their effects be tried;
The blackest sin is clear'd with absolution;
Against love's fire fears frost hath dissolution.
The eye of heaven is out, and misty night
Covers the shame that follows sweet delight.

This said, his guilty hand pluck'd up the latch,
And with his knee the door he opens wide.
The dove sleeps fast that this night-owl will catch:
Thus treason works ere traitors be espied.
Who sees the lurking serpent steps aside;
But she, sound sleeping, fearing no such thing,
Lies a' the mercy of his mortal sting.

Into the chamber wickedly he stalks,
And gazeth on her yet-unstained bed.
The curtains being close, about he walks,
Rolling his greedy eye-balls in his head:
By their high treason is his heart misled;
Which gives the watch-word to his hand full soon,
To draw the cloud that hides the silver moon.

Look, as the fair and fiery pointed sun,
Rushing from forth a cloud, berares our sight;
Even so, the curtain drawn, his eyes began
To wink, being blinded with a greater light:
Whether it is, that she reflects so bright,
That dazzlieth them, or else some shame supposed,
But blind they are, and keep themselves enclosed.

O! had they in that darksome prison died,
Then had they seen the period of their ill:
Then Collatine again, by Lucrece's side,
In his clear bed might have reposèd still;
But they must ope, this blessed league to kill,
And holy-thoughted Lucrece to their sight
Must sell her joy, her life, her world's delight.

Her lily hand her rosy cheek lies under,
Cozening the pillow of a lawful kiss,
Who, therefore angry, seems to part in sunder,
Swelling on either side to want his bliss,
Between whose bills her head intomb'd is;
Where, like a virtuous monument, she lies,
To be admir'd of Lewd unthankful eyes.

Without the bed her other fair hand was,
On the green coverlet; whose perfect white
Show'd like an April daisy on the grass,
With pearly sweat, resembling dew of night.
Her eyes, like marigolds, had sheath'd their light,
And canopied in darkness sweetly lay,
Till they might open to adorn the day.

Her hair, like golden threads, play'd with her breath;
O modest wantons! wanton modesty!
Showing life's triumph in the map of death,
And death's dim look in life's mortality:
Each in her sleep themselves so beautify,
As if between them twain there were no strife,
But that life liv'd in death, and death in life.

Her breasts, like ivory globes circled with blue,
A pair of maiden worlds unconquered;
Save of their lord, no bearing yoke they knew,
And him by oath they truly honoureth.
These worlds in Tarquin's new ambition bred;
Who, like a foul usurper, went about
From this fair throne to heave the owner out.

What could he see, but nightly he noted?
What did he note, but strongly he desired
What he beheld, on that he firmly doted,
And in his will his wilful eye he tired.
With more than admiration he admired
Her azure veins, her alabaster skin,
Her coral lips, her snow-white dimpled chin.

As the grim lion fawneth o'er his prey,
Sharp hunger by the conquest satisfied,
So o'er this sleeping soul doth Tarquin stay;
His rage of lust by gazinge qualified.
Sick'd, not suppress'd; for standing by her side
His eye, which late this mutiny restrains,
Unto a greater uproar tempts his veins:
And they, like straggling slaves for pillage fighting,
Obdurate vassals fell exploits effecting.
In bloody death and ravishment delightful,
Nor children's tears, nor mothers' groans respecting,
Swell in their pride, the onset still expecting.
Anon his beating heart, alarum striking,
Gives the hot charge, and bids them do their liking.

His drumming heart cheers up his burning eye,
His eye commends the leading to his hand;
His hand, as proud of such a dignity,
Smoking with pride, march'd on to make his stand
On her bare breast, the heart of all her land,
Whose ranks of blue veins, as his hand did soale,
Left their round turrets destitute and pale.

They, mustering to the quiet cabinet
Where their dear governor and lady lies,
Do tell her she is dreadfully beset,
And fright her with confusion of their cries:
She, much amaz'd, breaks ope her lock'd-up eyes,
Who, peeping forth this tumult to behold,
Are by his flaming torch dimm'd and control'd.

Imagine her as one in dead night
From forth dull sleep by dreadful fancy waking,
That thinks she hath beheld some ghastly sprite,
Whose grim aspect sets every joint a shaking;
What terror 'tis! but she, in worse taking,
From sleep disturbed, heedfully doth view
The sight which makes supposed terror true.

Wrap'd and confounded in a thousand fears,
Like to a new-kill'd bird she trembling lies;
She dares not look; yet, winking, there appears
Quick-shifting antics, ugly in her eyes:
Such shadows are the weak brain's forgeries;
Who, angry that the eyes fly from their lights,
In darkness daunts them with more dreadful sights.

His hand, that yet remains upon her breast,
(Rude ram to batter such an ivory wall)
May feel her heart (poor citizen!) distress'd,
Wounding itself to death, rise up and fall,
Beating her bulk, that his hand shakes withal

1 Fed, as a falcon on his prey.
This moves in him more rage, and lesser pity,
To make the breach, and enter this sweet city.

First, like a trumpet, doth his tongue begin
To sound a parley to his heartless foe:
Who o'er the white sheet peers her white chin,
The reason of this rash alarm to know,
Which he by dumb demanour seeks to show;
But she with vehement prayers urgeth still,
Under what colour he commits this ill.

Thus he replies: The colour in thy face
That even for anger makes the lily pale,
And the red rose blush at her own disgrace,
Shall plead for me, and tell my loving tale;
Under that colour am I come to scale
Thy never conquer'd fort: the fault is thine,
For those thine eyes betray thee unto mine.

Thus I forestall thee, if thou mean to chide:
Thy beauty hath ensu'd thee to this night,
Where thou with patience must my will abide,
My will, that marks thee for my earth's delight,
Which I to conquer sought with all my might;
But as reproof and reason beat it dead,
By thy bright beauty was it newly bred.

I see what crosses my attempt will bring,
I know what thorns the growing rose defends,
I think the honey guarded with a sting:
All this beforehand counsel comprehends,
But will is deaf, and hears no heedful friends:
Only he hath an eye to gaze on beauty,
And dotes on what he looks, 'gainst law or duty.

I have debated, even in my soul,
What wrong, what shame, what sorrow I shall breed;
But nothing can affection's course control,
Or stop the headlong fury of his speed.
I know repentant tears ensue the deed,
Reproach, disdain, and deadly enmity,
Yet strive I to embrace mine infancy.

This said, he shakes aloft his Roman blade,
Which, like a falcon towering in the skies,
Coucheth the fowl below with his wings' shade,
Whose crooked beak threats, if he mount he dies:
So under his insulting falcon's blows
Harmless Lucretia, marking what he tells,
With trembling fear, as fowl hear falcon's bells

Lucretia, quoth he, this night I must enjoy thee:
If thou deny, then force must work my way,
For in thy bed I purpose to destroy thee.
That done, some worthless slave of thine I'll slay
To kill thine honour with thy life's decay:
And in thy dead arms do I mean to place him,
Swearing I slew him, seeing thee embrace him.

So thy surviving husband shall remain
The scornful mark of every open eye:
Thy kinsmen hang their heads at this disdain,
Thy issue blurr'd with nameless bastardy:
And thou, the author of their chagery,
Shalt have thy trespass cited up in rhymes,
And sung by children in succeeding times.

But if thou yield, I rest thy secret friend:
The fault unknown is as a thought unacted:

A little harm, done to a great good end,
For lawful policy remains enacted.
The poisonous simple sometimes is compa sed
In a pure compound; being so applied,
His venom in effect is purified.

Then, for thy husband and thy children's sake,
Tender my suit: bequest not to their lot
The shame that from them no device can take,
The blemish that will never be forgot;
Worse than a slavish wipe, or birth-hour's blot;
For marks descried in men's nativity
Are nature's faults, not their own infancy.

Here, with a cockatrice' dead-killing eye,
He rouseth up himself, and makes a pause;
While she, the picture of pure piety,
Like a white hind under the grasp'd sharp claws
Pleads in a wilderness, where are no laws,
To the rough beast that knows no gentle right,
Nor aught eleves but his foul appetite.

But when a black-faced cloud the world doth threat,
In his dim mist th' aspiring mountains hiding.
From earth's dark womb some gentle gust doth get,
Which blows these pitchy vapours from their biting,
Hindering their present fall by this dividing;
So his unhalloved haste her words delays,
And moody Pluto winks, while Orpheus plays.

Yet, foul night-waking cat, he doth but daily,
While in his hold-fast foot the weak mouse panteth:
Her sad behaviour teeds his vulture's folly,
A swallowing gulf that even in plenty wanteth.
His car her prayers admits, but his heart granteath
No penetrable entrance to her pleading:
Tears harden last, though marble wears with raining

Her pity-pleading eyes are sadly fixed
In the remorseless wrinkles of his face;
Her modest eloquence with sighs is mixed,
Which to her oratory adds more grace.
She puts the period often from his place;
And 'midst the sentence so her accent breaks,
That twice she doth begin, ere once she speaks.

She conjures him by high almighty Jove,
By knighthood, gentry, and sweet friendship's oath,
By her untimely tears, her husband's love,
By holy human law, and common troth,
By heaven and earth, and all the power of both,
That to his borrow'd bed he make retire,
And stoop to honour, not to foul desire.

Quoth she, reward not hospitality:
With such black payment as thou hast pretended?
Mind not the fountain that gave drink to thee;
Mar not the thing that cannot be amended;
End thy ill aim before thine shot be ended:
He is no wood-man, that doth bend his bow
To strike a poor unreasonable doe.

My husband is thy friend, for his sake spare me;
Thyself art mighty, for thine own sake leave me:
Myself a weakling, do not then ensnare me:
Thou look'st not like deceit, do not deceive me:
My sighs, like whirlwinds, labour hence to heave thee:
If ever man were mov'd with woman's moans,
Be moved with my tears, my sighs, my groans.
All which together, like a troubled ocean,
Beast at thy rocky and wreck-threatening heart,
To soften it with their continual motion;
For stones dissolve'd to water do convert.
O, if no harder than a stone thou art,
Melt at my tears and be compassionate!
Soft pity enters at an iron gate.

In Tarquin's likeness I did entertain thee;
Hast thou put on his shape to do him shame?
To all the host of heaven I complain me,
 Thou wrong'st his honour, wound'st his princely name:
Thou art not what thou seem'st; and if the same,
Thou seem'st not what thou art, a god, a king;
For kings like gods should govern every thing.

How will thy shame be seeded in thine age,
When thus thy vices bud before thy spring?
If in thy hope thou darst do such outrage,
What dar'st thou not, when once thou art a king?
O, be remember'd! no outrageous thing
From vassal actors can be wip'd away;
Then, kings' misdeeds cannot be hid in clay

This deed will make thee only lov'd for fear;
But happy monarchs still are fear'd for love
With foul offenders thou perforce must bear,
When in thee the like offenses prove:
If but for fear of this, thy will remove;
For princes are the glass, the school, the book,
Where subjects' eyes do learn, do read, do look.

And wilt thou be the school where just shall learn?
Must he in thee read lectures of such shame?
Wilt thou be glass, wherein it shall discern
Authority for sin, warrant for blame,
To privilege dishonour in thy name?
Thou baek'st reproach against long-living laud,
And mak'st fair reputation but a bawd.

Hast thou command? by him that gave it thee,
From a pure heart command thy rebel will:
Draw not thy sword to guard iniquity,
For it was lent thee all that brood to kill.
Thy princely office how canst thou fulfill,
When, pattern'd by thy fault, foul sin may say,
He learn'd to sin, and thou didst teach the way?

Think but how vile a spectacle it were,
To view thy present trespass in another.
Men's faults do seldom to themselves appear;
Their own transgressions partially they smother:
This guilt would seem death-worthy in thy brother.
O, how are they wrap'd in with infamies,
That from their own misdeeds askance their eyes!

To their salt sovereign with their fresh falls' haste
Add to his flow, but alter not his taste.
Thou art, quoth she, a sea, a sovereign king;
And lo! there falls into thy boundless flood
Black lust, dishonour, shame, misgoverning,
Who seek to stain the ocean of thy blood.
If all these petty ills shall chance thy good,
Thy sea within a paddle's womb is herded.
And not the paddle in thy sea dispersed.

So shall these slaves be king, and thou their slave,
Thou nobly base, they basely dignified;
Thou their fair life, and thy thy fouler grave:
Thou loathed in their shame, they in thy pride:
The lesser thing should not the greater hide;
The cedar stoops not to the base shrub's foot,
But low shrubs wither at the cedar's root.

So let thy thoughts, low vassals to thy state—
No more, quoth he; by heaven, I will not hear thee
Yield to my love: if not, enforced hate,
Instead of love's coy touch, shall rudely bear thee;
That done, despitefully I mean to bear thee
Unto the base bed of some rascal groom,
To be thy partner in this shamefull doom.

This said, he sets his foot upon the light,
For light and lust are deadly enemies:
Shame, folded up in blind concealing night,
When most unseen, and most doth tyrannize.
The wolf hath seiz'd his prey, the poor lamb cries:
Till with her own white fleece her voice controll'd
Entombs her outery in her lips' sweet fold:

For with the nightly linen that she wears,
He pens her piteous clamours in her head,
Cooling his hot face in the chastest tears
That ever modest eyes with sorrow shed.
O, that prone lust should stain so pure a bed!
The spots whereof could weeping purify,
Her tears should drop on them perpetually.

But she hath lost a dearer thing than life,
And he hath won what he would lose again;
This forced league doth force a further strife,
This momentary joy breeds months of pain;
This hot desire converts to cold disdain.
Pure chastity is ridded of her store,
And lust, the thief, far poorer than before.

Look, as the full-fed hound, or gorged hawk,
Unapt for tender smell, or speedy flight
Make slow pursuit, or altogether balk
The prey wherein by nature they delight:
So surfeit-taking Tarquin fares this night:
His taste delicious, in digestion souring,
Devours his will, that liv'd by foul devouring.

O deeper sin, than bottomless conceit
Can comprehend in still imagination!
Drunken desire must vomit his receipt,
Ere he can see his own abomination.
While lust is in his pride, no exclamation
Can curb his heat, or rein his rach desire,
Till, like a jade, self-will himself doth tire.

And then, with lank and lean discoul'rd cheek,
With heavy eye, knit brow, and strengthless pace,
Feeble desire, all recreant, poor, and meek,
Like to a bankrupt beggar wails his case;
The flesh being proud, desire doth fight with grace,
For there it revels; and when that decays,
The guilty rebel for remission prays.

So fares it with this faithful lord of Rome,
Who this accomplishment so hotly chased;
For now against himself he sounds this doom,
That through the length of times he stands disgraced;
Besides, his soul's fair temple is defaced;
To whose weak ruins must her troops of cares,
To ask the spotted princess how she fares.

She says, her subjects with foul insurrection
Have batter'd down her consecrated wall,
And by their mortal fault brought in subjection
Her immortality, and made her thrall
To living death, and pain perpetual;
Which in her presence she controlled still,
But her foresight could not fore-stall their will.

Even in this thought through the dark night he stealtheth,
A captive victor that hath lost in gain;
Bearing away the wound that nothing healeth,
The scar that will despite of e'er remain;
Leaving his spoil perplex'd in greater pain.
She bears the load of lust he left behind,
And he the burden of a guilty mind.

He, like a thievish dog, creeps sadly thence,
She like a wearied lamb lies panting there;
He seowls, and hates himself for his offence,
She desperate with her nails her flesh doth tear;
He faintly flies, sweating with guilty fear;
She stays, exclaiming on the direful night;
He runs, and chides his vanish'd, loath'd delight.

He thence departs a heavy convertite,
She there remains a hopeless cast-away;
He in his speed looks for the morning light,
She prays she never may behold the day;
For day, quoth she, night's scopes doth open lay,
And my true eyes have never practis'd how
To cloke offences with a cunning brow.

They think not but that every eye can see
The same disgrace which they themselves behold,
And therefore would they still in darkness be,
To have their unseen sin remain untold;
For they their guilt with weeping will unfold,
And grave, like water that doth eat in steel,
Upon my cheeks what helpless shame I feel.

Here she exclaims against repose and rest,
And bids her eyes hereafter still be blind.
She wakes her heart by beating on her breast,
And bids it leap from thence, where it may find
Some purer chest to close so pure a mind.
Frantic with grief thus breathes she forth her spite
Against the unseen secrecy of night.

O, hateful, vaporous, and foamy night!
Since thou art guilty of my eareless crime,
Muster thy misis to meet the eastern light,
Make war against proportion'd course of time;
Or if thou wilt permit the sun to climb
His wonted height, yet ere he go to bed,
Knit poisonous clouds about his golden head

With rotten damp's ravish the morning air
Let their exhal'd unwholesome breaths make sick
The life of purity, the supreme fair,
Ere he arrive his weary noon-tide prick;
And let thy musty vapours march so thick,
That in their smoky ranks his smoother d light
May set at noon, and make perpetual night.

Wore Tarquin night, as he is but night's child,
The silver-shining queen he would distain,
Her twinkling handmaids too, by him defil'd,
Through night's black bosom should not peep again.
So should I have copartners in my pain;
And fellowship in woe doth woe assuage,
As palmers' chat makes short their pilgrimage.

Where, now, I have no one to blush with me,
To cross their arms, and hang their heads with mine.
To mask their brows, and hide their infamy;
But I alone, alone must sit and pine.
Seasoning the earth with showers of silver brine,
Mingling my talk with tears, my grief with groans,
Poor wasting monuments of lasting moans.

O night! thou furnace of foul-reeking smoke,
Let not the jealous day behold that face
Which underneath thy black all-hiding cloak
Immodestly lies martyr'd with disgrace:
Keep still possession of thy gloomy place,
That all the faults which in thy reign are made,
May likewise be sepulcher'd in thy shade.

Make me not object to the tell-tale day!
The light will show, character'd in my brow,
The story of sweet chastity's decay,
The impious breach of holy wedlock vow:
Yea, the illiterate, that know not how
To cipher what is writ in learned books,
Will quote! my loathsome trespass in my looks.

The nurse to still her child will tell my story,
And fright her crying babe with Tarquin's name.
The orator to deck his oratory
Will couple my reproach to Tarquin's shame;
Feast-finding minstrels, tuning my defiance,
Will tie the hangers to attend each line,
How Tarquin wronged me, I Collatine.

Let my good name, that senseless reputation,
For Collatine's dear love be kept unspotted
If that be made a theme for disputation,
The branches of another root are rotted,
And undeserv'd reproach to him allotted,
That is as clear from this attainment of mine,
As I ere this was pure to Collatine.

O unseen shame! invisible disgrace!
O unfelt sore! crest-wounding, private scar!
Reproach is stamp'd in Collatine's face,
And Tarquin's eye may read the mat'\^a far,
How he in peace is wounded, not in war.

* Note, observe.  * Word, motto.

Alas! how many bear such shameful blows,
Which not themselves, but he that gives them, knows.
If, Collatine, thine honour lay in me,
From me by strong assault it is bereft.
My honey lost, and I, a drone-like bee,
Have no perfection of my summer left,
But robb'd and ransack'd by injurious theft:
In thy weak hive a wandering wasp hath crept,
And suck'd the honey which thy chaste bee kept.

Yet am I guilty of thy honour's wreck;
Yet for thine honour did I entertain him;
Coming from thee, I could not put him back,
For it had been dishonour to disdain him:
Besides, of weariness he did complain him,
And talk'd of virtue.—O, unlook'd for evil,
When virtue is profan'd in such a devil!

Why should the worm intrude the maiden bud,
Or hateful eneekos hatch in sparrows' nests?
Or toad infect fair fountains with venom mud?
Or tyrant folly lurk in gentle breasts?
Or kings be breakers of their own behests?
But no perfection is so absolute,
That some impurity doth not pollute.

The aged man that coifers up his gold,
Is plagu'd with cramps, and gouts, and painful fits,
And scarce hath eyes his treasure to behold,
But like still-pining Tantalus he sits,
And useless barns the harvest of his wits,
Having no other pleasure of his gain.
But torment that it cannot cure his pain.

So, then he hath it, when he cannot use it,
And leaves it to be master'd by his young;
Who in their pride do presently abuse it:
Their father was too weak, and they too strong,
To hold their cursed-blessed fortune long.
The sweets we wish for turn to loathed sours,
Even in the moment that we call them ours.

Unwholesome blasts wait on the tender spring,
Unwholesome weeds take root with precious flowers,
Theadder hisseth where the sweet birds sing,
What virtue breeds, iniquity devours;
We have no good that we can say is ours,
But ill annexed opportunity
Or kills his life, or else his quality.

O, Opportunity! thy guilt is great:
'T is thou that execut'st the traitor's treason;
Thou sett'st the wolf where he the lamb may get;
Whoever plots the sin, thou 'point'st the season:
'T is thou that spurn'st at right, at law, at reason.
And in thy shady cell, where none may spy him,
Sits sin to seize the souls that wander by him.

Thou mak'st the vestal violate her oath;
Thou blow'st the fire, when temperance is thay'd;
Thou smoother'st honestly, thou murder'st truth;
Thou foul abetter! thou notorious bawd!
Thou plantest scandal, and displaceth land;
Thou ravisher, thou traitor, thou false thief,
Thy honey turns to gall, thy joy to grief!

Thy secret pleasure turns to open shame,
Thy private feasting to a public fast;

Thy smoothing titles to a ragged name,
Thy sugar'd tongue to bitter wormwood taste.
Thy violent vanities can never last.
How comes it then, vile Opportunity,
Being so bad, such numbers seek for thee?

When wilt thou be the humble suppliant's friend,
And bring him where his suit may be obtained?
When wilt thou sort an hour great strife to end,
Or free that soul which wretchedness hath chained?
Give physic to the sick, ease to the pain'd.
The poor, lame, blind, halt, creep, cry out for thee.
But they ne'er meet with Opportunity.

The patient dies while the physician sleeps;
The orphan pines while the oppressor feeds;
Justice is feasting while the widow weeps;
Advice is sporting while infection broods:
Thou grant'st no time for charitable deeds.
Wrath, envy, treason, rape, and murders rage
Thy heinous hours wait on them as their pages

When truth and virtue have to do with thee,
A thousand crosses keep them from thy aid:
They buy thy help; but sin ne'er gives a fee:
He gratis comes, and thou art well appay'd.
As well to hear, as grant what he hath said.
My Collatine would else have come to me,
When Tarquin did; but he was stay'd by thee.

Guilty thou art of murder and of theft;
Guilty of perjury and subornation;
Guilty of treason, forgery, and shift;
Guilty of incest, that abomination:
An accessory by thine inclination
To all sins past, and all that are to come,
From the creation to the general doom.

Mis-shapen Time, copesmate of ugly night,
Swift summary post, carrier of grisly care;
Eater of youth, false slave to false delight;
Base watch of woe, sin's pack-horse, virtue's snare:
Thou nurtur'st all, and murder'st all that are:
O hear me, then, injurious, shifting Time!
Be guilty of my death, since of my crime.

Why hath thy servant, Opportunity,
Betray'd the hours thou gav'st me to repose?
Cancell'd my fortunes, and enchain'd me
To endless date of never-ending woes?
Time's office is to fine the hate of foes;
To eat up errors by opinion bred,
Not spend the dowry of a lawful bed.

Time's glory is to calm contending kings,
To unmask falsehood, and bring truth to light,
To stamp the seal of time in aged things,
To wake the morn, and sentinel the night,
To wrong the wronger till he render right;
To ruinate proud buildings with thy hours,
And smear with dust their glittering golden tower.

To fill with worm-holes stately monuments,
To feed oblivion with decay of things,
To blot old books, and alter their contents,
To pluck the quills from ancient ravens' wings,
To dry the old oak's sap, and cherish springs;
To spoil antiquities of hammer'd steel,
And turn the giddy round of Fortune's wheel.
To show the beldame daughters of her daughter,
To make the child a man, the man a child,
To slay the tiger that doth live by slaughter,
To tame the unicorn and lion wild:
To mock the subtle, in themselves beguil'd;
To cheer the ploughman with increaseful crops,
And waste huge stones with little water-drops;

Why work'st thou mischief in thy pilgrimage,
Unless thou couldst return to make amends?
One poor retiring 4 minute in an age
Would purchase thee a thousand thousand friends,
Lending him wit that to bad debtor lends:
O! this dread night, wouldest thou one hour come back,
I could prevent this storm, and shun thy wreck.

Thou ceaseless lackey to eternity,
With some mischance cross Tarquin in his flight:
Devise extremes beyond extremity
To make him endure this cursed crimeful night:
Let ghastly shadows his level eyes affright,
And the dire thought of his committed evil
Shape every bush a hideous shapeless devil.

Disturb his hours of rest with restless trances,
Afflict him in his bed with bedrid groans;
Let there bechance him pitiful mischances,
To make him moan, but pity not his moans:
Stone him with harden'd hearts, harder than stones;
And let mild women to him lose their mildness,
Wild to him than tigers in their wildness.

Let him have time to tear his curled hair,
Let him have time against himself to rave,
Let him have time of time's help to despair,
Let him have time to live a loathed slave;
Let him have time a beggar's orts to crave,
And time to see one that by arms doth live,
Diedain to him disdain'd scraps to give.

Let him have time to see his friends his foes,
And merry fools to mock at him resort;
Let him have time to mark how slow time goes
In time of sorrow, and how swift and short
His time of folly, and his time of sport:
And ever let his unreckling crime
Have time to wait th' abusing of his time.

O Time, thou tutor both to good and bad,
Teach me to curse him that thou taught'st this ill!
At his own shadow let the thief run mad,
Himself himself seek every hour to kill!
Such wretched hands such wretched blood should spill;
For who so base should such an office have
As slanderous death's-man to so base a slave?

The baster is he, coming from a king,
To shame his hope with deeds degenerate:
The mighty man, the mightier is the thing
That makes him honour'd, or begats him hate;
For greatest scandal waits on greatest state.
The moon being clouded presently is miss'd,
But little stars may hide them when they list.

The crow may bathe his coal-black wings in mire,
And unperev'd 4 fly with the filth away;
But if the like the snow-white swan desire,
The stain upon his silver down will stay,
Poor grooms are sightless night, kings glorious day:

Grants are unnoticed where soever they fly,
But eagles gaz'd upon with every eye.

Out, idle words! servante to shallow fools,
Unprofitable sounds, weak arbitrators!
Busy yourselves in skill-contending schools,
 Debate where leisure serves with dull debaters,
To trembling clients be you mediators:
For me, I force 4 not argument a straw,
Since that my case is past the help of law.

In vain I rail at Opportunity.
At Time, at Tarquin, and uncheerful night;
In vain I cavil with mine infamy,
In vain I spurn at my confir'm'd despite:
This helpless smoke of words doth me no right.
The remedy, indeed, to do me good.
Is to let forth my soul, defiled blood.

Poor hand, why quiver'st thou at this decree?
Honour thyself to rid me of this shame;
For if I die, my honour lives in thee,
But if I live, thou livest in my defiance.
Since thou couldst not defend thy loyal dame,
And wast afeard to scratch her wicked toe,
Kill both thyself and her for yielding so.

This said, from her be-tumbled couch she starteth.
To find some desperate instrument of death;
But this no slaughter-house no tool imparteth,
To make more vent for passage of her breath,
Which, thronging through her lips, so vanisheth
As smoke from Ætna, that in air consumes,
Or that which from discharged cannon funes.

In vain, quoth she, I live; and seek in vain
Some happy mean to end a hapless life;
I fear'd by Tarquin's falchion to be slain,
Yet for the self-same purpose seek a knife;
But when I fear'd, I was a loyal wife.
So am I now.—O no! that cannot be;
Of that true type hath Tarquin rifled me.

O! that is gone, for which I sought to live,
And therefore now I need not fear to die.
To clear this spot by death, at least, I give
A badge of fame to slander's livery;
A dying life to living infamy.
Poor helpless help, the treasure stolen away,
To burn the guiltless casket where it lay!

Well, well, dear Collatine, thou shalt not know
The stained taste of violated truth;
I will not wrong thy true affection so,
To flatter thee with an infringed oath;
This bastard graff shall never come to growth:
He shall not boast, who did thy stock pollute,
That thou art doting father of his fruit.

Nor shall he smile at thee in secret thought,
Nor laugh with his companions at thy state;
But thou shalt know thy interest was not bought
Basely with gold, but stolen from forth thy gate.
For me, I am the mistress of my fate,
And with my trespass never will dispense,
Till life to death acquit my forc'd offence.

I will not poison thee with my attain't,
Nor fold my fault in cleanly coin'd excuses
My sadle ground of sin I will not paint,
To hide the truth of this false night's abuses;
My tongue shall utter all; mine eyes, like sluices,
As from a mountain spring that feeds a dale,
Shall gush pure streams to purge my impure tale.

By this, lamenting Philomel had ended
The well-turn'd warble of her nightly sorrow,
And solemn night with slow, sad gait descended
To ugly hell; when lo! the blushing morrow
Leads light to all fair eyes that light will borrow:
But cloudy Lucrece shames herself to see.
And therefore still in night would cloister'd be.

Revealing day through every cranny spies,
And seems to point her out where she sits weeping;
To whom she sobbing speaks: O eye of eyes!
Why pry'st thou through my window? leave thy peeping;
Mock with thy tickling beams eyes that are sleeping:
Brand not my forehead with thy piercing light,
For day hath nought to do what's done by night.

Thus caviles she with every thing she sees.
True grief is fond and testy as a child,
Who wayward once, his mood with nought agrees:
Old woes, not infant sorrows, bear them mild;
Continuance tames the one; the other wild,
Like an unpractis'd swimmer plunging still,
With too much labour drowns for want of skill.

So she, deep drenched in a sea of care,
Holds disputation with each thing she views;
And to herself all sorrow doth compare:
No object but her passion's strength recnews,
And as one shifts, another straight ensues:
Sometime her grief is dumb, and hath no words;
Sometime 't is mad, and too much talk affords.

The little birds that tune their morning's joy,
Make her moans mad with their sweet melody;
For mirth doth search the bottom of annoy:
Sad souls are slain in merry company;
Grief best is pleas'd with grief's society:
True sorrow then is feelingly suffice'd,
When with like semblance it is sympathiz'd.

'T is double death to drown in ken of shore;
He ten times pines, that pines beholding food;
To see the salve doth make the wound ache more;
Great grief grieves most at that which would do good:
Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood;
Who, being stopp'd, the bounding banks o'erflow:
Grief dali'd with nor law nor limit knows.

You mocking birds, quoth she, your tunes entomb
Within your hollow swelling feather'd breasts,
And in my hearing be you mute and dumb:
My restless discord loves no stops nor rests;
A woful hostess brooks not merry guests.
Relish your nimble notes to pleasing ears;
Distress likes dumps, when time is kept with tears.

Come, Philomel, that sing'st of ravishment,
Make thy sad grave in my dishevel'd hair.
As the dank earth weeps at thy languishment,
So I at each sad strain will strain a tear,
And with deep groans the diapason bear:
For burden-wise I'll hum on Tarquin still,
While thou on Terence desist, better skill.

And whiles against a thorn thou bear'st thy part,
To keep thy sharp woes waking, wretched I,
To imitate thee well, against my heart
Will fix a sharp knife, to affright mine ear,
Who, if it wink, shall thereon fall and die.
These means, as frets upon an instrument,
Shall tune our heart-strings to true languishment.

And for, poor bird, thou sing'st not in the day,
As shaming any eye should thee behold,
Some dark deep desert, seated from the way,
That knows not parching heat nor freezing cold,
Will we find out; and there we will unfold
To creatures stern sad tunes to change their kinds.
Since men prove beasts, let beasts bear gentile minds.

As the poor frightened deer, that stands at gaze,
Wildly determining which way to fly,
Or one encompass'd with a winding maze,
That cannot tread the way out readily;
So with herself is she in mutiny;
To live or die which of the twain were better,
When life is sham'd, and death reproach'd debtor.

To kill myself, quoth she, alack! what were it,
But with my body my poor soul's pollution?
They that lose half, with greater patience bear it,
Than they whose whole is swallowed in confusion.
That mother tries a more endless conclusion,
Who having two sweet babes, when death takes one
Will slay the other, and be nurse to none.

My body or my soul, which was the dearer,
When the one pure, the other made divine?
Whose love of either to myself was nearer,
When both were kept for heaven and Collatine?
Ah me! the bark peal'd from the lofty pine,
His love will wither, and his sap decay:
So must my soul, her bark being peal'd away.

Her house is sack'd, her quiet interrupted,
Her mansion batter'd by the enemy;
Her sacred temple spotted, spoil'd, corrupted,
Grossly engirt with daring infamy:
Then, let it not be call'd impity,
If in this blemish'd fort I make some hole,
Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

Yet die I will not, till my Collatine
Have heard the cause of my untimely death.
That he may vow, in that sad hour of mine,
Revenge on him that made me stop my breath.
My stained blood to Tarquin I'll bequeath,
Which by him tainted shall for him be spent,
And as his due writ in my testament.

My honour I'll bequeath unto the knife
That wounds my body so dishonoured.
'T is honour to deprive dishonour'd life;
The one will live, the other being dead:
So of shame's ashes shall my fame be bred:
For in my death I murder shameful scorn:
My shame so dead, mine honour is new-born.

Dear lord of that dear jewel I have lost,
What legacy shall I bequeath to thee?
My resolution, love, shall be thy boast,
By whose example thou reveng'd may' st be.
How Tarquin must be us'd, read it in me:

* Terms in music.  1 Melancholy music.  2 i.e. with better skill; "descent" seems to have meant what we now call variation.
M fortnight, thy friend, will kill myself, thy foe,
And for my sake serv'st thou false Tarquin so.

This brief abridgment of my will I make:

My soul and body to the skies and ground;
My resolution, husband, do thou take;
Mine honour be the knife's that makes my wound,
My shame be his that did my fame confound;
And all my fame that lives disburseth be
To those that live, and think no shame of me.

Thou, Collatine, shalt oversee this will:—
How was I overseen that thou shalt see it!
My blood shall wash the slander of mine ill;
My life's foul deed my life's fair end shall free it.
Pain not, faint heart, but stoutly say, "So be it."
Yield to my hand, my hand shall conquer thee:
Thou dead, both die, and both shall victors be.

This plot of death when sadly she had laid,
And wip'd the bristly pearl from her bright eyes,
With untam'd tongue she hoarsely calls' her maid,
Whose swift obedience to her mistress lies;
For fleet-wing'd duty with thought's feathers flies.
Poor Lucrece' cheeks unto her maid seem so,
As winter meats when sun doth melt their snow.

Her mistress she doth give demure good-morrow,
With soft slow tongue, true mark of modesty,
And sorts a sad look to her lady's sorrow,
For why, her face wore sorrow's livery;
But durst not ask of her audaciously
Why her two suns were cloud-eclipsed so,
Nor why her fair cheeks over-wash'd with woe.

But as the earth doth weep, the sun being set,
Each flower moisten'd like a melting eye,
Even so the maid with swelling drops gan wet
Her circled eye, enforc'd by sympathy
Of those fair suns set in her mistress' sky,
Who in a salt-wav'd ocean quench their light,
Which makes the maid weep like the dewy night.

A pretty while these pretty creatures stand,
Like ivory conduits coral eisern filling:
One justly weep's, the other takes in hand
No cause but company of her drops spilling:
Their gentle sex to weep are often willing,
Grieving themselves to guess at others' smarts,
And then they drown their eyes, or break their hearts:

For men have marble, women waxen, minds,
And therefore are they form'd as marble will;
The weak oppress'd, th'o' impression of strange kinds
Is form'd in them by force, by fraud, or skill:
Then call them not the authors of their ill,
No more than wax shall be accounted evil,
Wherein is stamp'd the semblance of a devil.

Their smoothness, like a goodly champaign plain,
Lays open all the little worms that creep:
In men, as in a rough-grown grove, remain
Cave-keeping evils that obscurely sleep.
Through crystal walls each little mote will peep:
Though men can cover crimes with bold stern looks,
Poor women's faces are their own faults' books.

No man inveigh against the withered flower,
But chide rough winter that the flower hath kill'd.
Besides, the life and feeling of her passion
She heard, to spend when he is by to hear her;
When sighs and groans and tears may grace the fashion
Of her disgrace, the better so to clear her
From that suspicion which the world might bear her.
To shun this blot she would not blot the letter
With words, till action might become them better.

To see sad sights moves more than hear them told,
For then the eye interprets to the ear
The heavy motion that it doth behold.
When every part a part of woe doth bear:
T is but a part of sorrow that we hear;
Deep sounds make lesser noise than shallow fords,
And sorrow ebbs, being blown with wind of words.

Her letter now is seal'd, and on it writ,
"At Ardea to my lord, with more than haste?"
The post attends, and she delivers it,
Charging the sour-face'd groom to hie as fast
As lagging fowls before the northern blast:
Speed more than speed but dullest slow she deems;
Extremity still urges such extremities.
The homely villain court'sies to her low,
And, blushing on her, with a steadfast eye
Receives the scroll, without or yea or no,
And forth with bashful innocence doth hie:
But they whose guilt within their bosoms lie,
Imagine every eye beholds their blame,
For Lucrece thought he blush'd to see her shame;

When, silly groom! God wot, it was defect
Of spirit, life, and bold audacity.
Such harmless creatures have a true respect
To talk in deeds, while others saucily
Promise more speed, but do it leisurely:
Even so this pattern of a worn-out age
Paw'd honest looks, but lay'd no words to gage.

His kindled duty kindled her mistrust,
That two red fires in both their faces blazed;
She thought he blush'd, as knowing Tarquin's lust,
And, blushing with him, wistly on him gazed;
Her earnest eye did make him more amazed:
The more she saw the blood his cheeks replenish,
The more she thought he spied in her some blemish.

But long she thinks till he return again,
And yet the duteous vassal scarce is gone.
The weary time she cannot entertain,
For now't is stale to sigh, to weep, and groan;
So woe hath wearied woe, moan tired moan,
That she her plants a little while doth stay,
Pausing for means to mourn some newer way.

At last she calls to mind where hangs a piece
Of skilful painting, made for Priam's Troy;
Before which is drawn the power of Greece,
For Helen's rape the city to destroy,
Threatening cloud kissing lion with annoy:
Which the conceited painter drew so proud,
As heaven it seem'd to kiss the turrets bow'd.

A thousand lamentable objects there,
In scorn of nature, art gave lifeless life.
Many a dry drop seem'd a weeping tear,
Shed for the slaughter'd husband by the wife;
The red blood reek'd to show the painter's strife;

And dying eyes gleam'd forth their ashy lights
Like dying coals burnt out in tedious nights.

There might you see the labouring pioneer
Begrin'd with sweat, and smeared all with dust;
And from the towers of Troy there would appear
The very eyes of men through loop-holes thrust,
Gazing upon the Greeks with little lust:
Such sweet observance in this work was had,
That one might see those far-off eyes look sad,

In great commanders grace and majesty
You might behold, triumphing in their faces;
In youth quick bearing and dexterity;
And here and there the painter interfaces
Pale cowards, marching on with trembling paces:
Which heartless peasants did so well resemble; [sic]
That one would swear he saw them quake and trem

In Ajax and Ulysses, O, what art
Of physiognomy might one behold!
The face of either cipher'd either's heart;
Their face their manners most expressly told.
In Ajax' eyes blunt rage and rigour roll'd;
But the mild glance that sly Ulysses lent,
Show'd deep regard and smiling government.

There pleading might you see grave Nestor stand,
As't were encouraging the Greeks to fight:
Making such sober action with his hand,
That it beguill'd attention, charm'd the sight.
In speech, it seem'd, his beard, all silver white,
Wagg'd up and down, and from his lips did fly
Thin winding breath, which pur'd up to the sky.

About him were a press of gaping faces,
Which seem'd to swallow up his sound advice
AllJoinly listening, but with several graces,
As if some mermaid did their ears entice:
Some high, some low; the painter was so wise,
The scalps of many, almost hid behind,
To jump up higher seem'd, to mock the mind.

Here one man's hand lean'd on another's head,
His nose being shadow'd by his neighbour's ear;
Here one, being thro' d, bears back, all bol'n red
Another, smother'd, seems to pelt and swear;
And in their rage such signs of rage they bear,
As, but for loss of Nestor's golden words,
It seem'd they would debate with angry swords.

For much imaginary work was there;
Conceit deceitful, so compact, so kind,
That for Achilles' image stood his spear,
Grip'd in an armed hand: himself behind
Was left unseen, save to the eye of mind.
A hand, a foot, a face, a leg, a head.
Stood for the whole to be imagined.

And from the walls of strong besieged Troy
When their brave hope, bold Hector, march'd to field
Stood many Trojan mothers, sharing joy
To see their youthful sons bright weapons wield;
And to their hope they such odd action yield,
That through their light joy seemed to appear
(Like bright things stain'd) a kind of heavy fear.

And from the strond of Dardan, where they fought
To Simois' reedy banks the red blood ran,
Whose waves to imitate the battle sought
With swelling rages; and their ranks began
To break upon the galled shore, and then
Retire again, till meeting greater ranks,
They join, and shoot their foam at Simois' banks.

To this well-painted piece is Lucrece come,
To find a face where all distress is stild. 3
Many she sees, where cares have carved some,
But none where all distress and delour dwell'd,
Till she despairing Hecuba beheld
Staring on Priam's wounds with her old eyes,
Which bleeding under Pyrrhus' proud foot lies.

In her the painter had anatomiz'd
Time's ruin, beauty's wreck, and grim care's reign;
Her cheeks with chaps and wrinkles were dignis'd,
Of what she was no semblance did remain;
Here blue blood chang'd to black in every vein,
Wanting the spring that those shrunk pipes had fed,
Show'd life imprison'd in a body dead.

On this sad shadow Lucrece spends her eyes,
And shapes her sorrow to the beldam's woes,
Who nothing wants to answer but her cries,
And bitter words to ban her cruel foes:
The painter was no God to lend her those;
And therefore Lucrece swears he did her wrong;
To give her so much grief, and not a tongue.

Poor instrument, quoth she, without a sound,
I'll tuned thy woes with my lamenting tongue,
And drop sweet balm in Priam's painted wound,
And rail on Pyrrhus that hath done him wrong,
And with my tears quench Troy, that burns so long,
And with my knife scratch out the angry eyes
Of all the Greeks that are thine enemies.

Show me the trumpeter that began this stir,
That with my nails her beauty I may tear.
Thy heat of lust, fond Paris, did incur
This load of wrath that burning Troy doth bear:
Thine eye kindled the fire that burneth here;
And here, in Troy, for trespass of thine eye,
The sire, the son, the dame, and daughter die.

Why should the private pleasure of some one
Become the public plague of many more? 4
Let sin, alone committed, light alone.
Upon his head that hath transgressed so;
Let guiltless souls be freed from guilty woe.
For one's offence why should so many fall,
To plague a private sin in general?

Lo! here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies,
Here manly Hector faints, here Troilus swoond;
Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies,
And friend to friend gives unadvised wounds,
And one man's lust these many lives confounds.
Had doting Priam check'd his son's desire,
Troy had been bright with fame: and not with fire.

Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted woes;
For sorrow, like a heavy hanging bell,
Ones set on ringing, with his own weight goes;
Then little strength rings out the doleful knell:
So Lucrece set a-work; sad tales doth tell
To pencill'd pensiveness and colour'd sorrow; [row.
She lends them words, and she their looks doth bore,
She throws her eyes about the painting, round,
And whom she finds forlorn she doth lament.
At last she sees a wretched image bound,
That piteous looks to Phrygian shepherds lent:
His face, though full of cares, yet show'd content.
Onward to Troy with the blunt swains he goes,
So mild, that patience seem'd to scorn his woes.

In him the painter labour'd with his skill
To hide deceit, and give the harmless show;
An humble gait, calm looks, eyes waiting still,
A brow unblemish'd, that seem'd to welcome woe;
Checks neither red nor pale, but mingled so
That blushing red no guilty instance gave,
Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts have.

But, like a constant and confirmed devil,
He entertain'd a show so seeming just,
And therein so ensconc'd his secret evil,
That jealousy itself could not mistrust,
False-creeping craft and perjury should thrust
Into so bright a day such black-fae'd storms,
Or blot with hell-born sin such saint-like forms.

The well-skil'd workman this mild image drew
For perjur'd Simon, whose enchanting story
The credulous old Priam after slew;
Whose words like wild-fire burnt the shining glory
Of rich-built Ilium, that the skies were sorry,
And little stars shot from their fixed places,
When their glass fell wherein they view'd their faces.

This picture she advisedly perused,
And chid the painter for his wondrous skill,
Saying, some shape in Simon's was abused;
So fair a form lodg'd not a mind so ill:
And still on him she gaz'd: and gazing still,
Such signs of truth in his plain face she spied,
That she concludes the picture was belied.

It cannot be, quoth she, that so much guile—
(She would have said) can lurk in such a look;
But Tarquin's shape came in her mind the while,
And from her tongue, "can lurk" from "cannot" took
"It cannot be" she in that sense forsook,
And turned it thus; it cannot be, I find,
But such a face should bear a wicked mind—

For even as subtle Simon here is painted,
So sober-sad, so weary, and so mild,
(As if with grief or travail he had fainted)
To me came Tarquin armed; too begin'd? 5
With outward honesty, but yet de'il'd
With inward vice: as Priam him did cherish,
So did I Tarquin; so my Troy did perish.

Look, look! how listening Priam wets his eyes,
To see those borrowed tears that Simon sheds.
Priam, why art thou old, and yet not wise?
For every tear he falls a Trojan bleeds:
His eye drops fire, no water thence proceeds:
Those round clear pearls of his, that move thy pity
Are balls of quenchless fire to burn thy e'y.

Such deviles steal effects from lightless hell,
For Simon in his fire doth quake with cold,
And in that cold, hot-burning fire doth dwell;
These contrarieties so unity do hold,
Only to flattering faws and make them bold:

1 Often used, as here, for "then."
2 No other instance is known of the use of this word. In Serton XXIV we have steel'd used in similar sense.
3 More = in mod. eda.
4 Masked, or in the guise of.
THE RAPE OF LUCRECE.

So Priam's trust false Simon's tears doth flatter,
That he finds means to burn his Troy with water.

Here, all enrag'd, such passion her assaults,
That patience is quite beaten from her breast.
She tears the senseless Simon with her nails,
Comparing him to that unhappy guest.
Whose deed hath made herself herself detest:
At last she smilingly with this gives o'er;
Fool! fool! quoth she, his wounds will not be sore.

Thus ebbs and flows the current of her sorrow,
And time doth weary time with her complaining.
She looks for night, and then she longs for morrow,
And both she thinks too long with her remaining.
Short time seems long in sorrow's sharp sustaining:
Though woe be heavy, yet it seldom sleeps;
And they that watch see time how slow it creeps.

Which all this time hath overslip'd her thought,
That she with painted images hath spent,
Being from the feeling of her own grief brought
By deep surmise of others' detriment;
Losing her woe in shows of discontent.
It easeth some, though none it ever cured,
To think their colour others have endured.

But now the mindful messenger, come back;
Brings home his lord and other company.
Who finds his Lucrece clad in mourning black;
And round about her tear-distained eye
Blue circles stream'd, like rainbows in the sky:
These water-galls in her dim element
Foretell new storms to those already spent.

Which when her sad-beholding husband saw,
Amazedly in her sad face he stares:
Her eyes, though sod in tears, look'd red and raw;
Her lively colour kill'd with deadly cares.
He hath no power to ask her how she fares;
Both stood like old acquaintance in a trance,
Met far from home, wondering each other's chance.

At last he takes her by the bloodless hand,
And thus begins: What uncouth ill event
Hath thee befall'n, that thou dost trembling stand?
Sweet love, what spite hath thy fair colour spent?
Why art thou thus attir'd in discontent?
Unmask, dear dear, this moody heaviness,
And tell thy grief that we may give redress.

Three times with sighs she gives her sorrow fire,
Ere once she can discharge one word of woe:
At length, address'd to answer his desire,
She modestly prepares to let them know
Her honour is ta'en prisoner by the foe;
While Collatine and his consorted lords
With sad attention long to hear her words.

And now this pale swain in her watery nest
Begins the sad dirge of her certain ending.
Few words, quoth she, shall fit the trespass best,
Where n o excuse can give the fault amendment:
In me mere woes than words are now depending;
And my laments would be drawn out too long,
To tell them all with one poor tired tongue.

Then, be thus all the task it hath to say:
Dear husband, in the interest of thy bed
A stranger came, and on that pillow lay
Where thou wast wont to rest thy weary head:
And what wrong else may be imagined
By foul enforcement might be done to me,
From that, alas! thy Lucrece is not free.

For in the dreadful dead of dark midnight,
With shining falchion in my chamber came
A creeping creature, with a flaming light,
And softly cried, Awake, thou Roman dame,
And entertain my love; else lasting shame
On thee and thine this night I will inflict,
If thou my love's desire do contradict.

For some hard-favour'd groom of thine, quoth he,
Unless thou yoke thy liking to my will,
I'll murder straight, and then I'll slaughter thee.
And swear I found you where you did fulfill
The loathsome act of lust, and so did kill
The lechers in their deed: this act will be
My fame, and thy perpetual infamy.

With this I did begin to start and cry,
And then against my heart he set his sword,
Swearing, unless I took all patiently,
I should not live to speak another word;
So should my shame still rest upon record,
And never be forgot in mighty Rome.
Th' adulterate death of Lucrece and her groom.

Mine enemy was strong, my poor self weak,
And far the weaker with so strong a fear:
My bloody judge forbade my tongue to speak;
No rightful plea might plead for justice there:
His scarlet lust came evidence to swear
That my poor beauty had purl'd his eyes,
And when the judge is rob'd, the prisoner dies.

O! teach me how to make mine own excuse,
Or, at the least, this refuge let me find:
Though my gross blood be stain'd with this abuse,
Immaculate and spotless is my mind;
That was not fore'd; that never was inclin'd
To accessory yieldings, but still pure
Doth in her poison'd closet yet endure.

Lo! here the hopeless merchant of this loss,
With head declin'd, and voice damn'd up with woe
With sad set eyes, and wretched arms across,
From lips new waxen pale begins to blow
The grief away, that stops his answer so;
But wretched as he is, he strives in vain,
What he breathes out, his breath drinks up again
As through an arch the violent roaring side
Out-runs the eye that doth behold his haste,
Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride
Back to the strain that fore'd him on so fast,
In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being past;
Even so his sighs, his sorrows, make a saw,
To push grief on, and back the same grief draw

Which speechless woe of his poor she attendeth,
And his untimely frenzy thus awaketh:
Dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow lendeth
Another power; no flood by raining slaketh.
My woe, too sensible, thy passion maketh
More feeling painful: let it, then, suffice
To drown one woe, one pair of weeping eyes.
And for my sake, when I might charm thee so,
For she that was thy Lucrece, now attend me:
Be suddenly revenged on my foe.
Thine, mine, his own: suppose thou dost defend me
From what is past, the help that thou shalt lend me
Comes all too late, yet let the traitor die;
For sparing justice feeds iniquity.

But ere I name him, you fair lords, quoth she,
(Speaking to those that came with Collatine)
Shall plight your honourable faiths to me,
With swift pursuit to venge this wrong of mine;
For 'tis a meritorious fair design.
To chase injustice with revengeful arms: [harms,'s
Knights, by their oaths, should right poor ladies.'s

At this request, with noble disposition
Each present lord began to promise aid,
As bound in knighthood to her imposition,
Longing to hear the hateful foe bewray'd;
But she, that yet her sad task hath not said,
The protestation stops. O! speak, quoth she,
How may this forced stain be wip'd from me?
What is the quality of mine offence,
Being constrain'd with dreadful circumstance?
May my pure mind with the foul act dispense,
My low-declin'd honour to advance?
May any terms acquit me from this chace?
The poison'd fountain clears itself again,
And why not I from this compell'd stain?
With this, they all at once began to say,
Her body's stain her mind untainted clears;
While with a joyless smile she turns away
The face, that map which deep impression bears
Of hard misfortune, car'v'd in it with tears.
No, no, quoth she: no dame, hereafter living,
By my excuse shall claim excuse's giving.

Here, with a sigh as if her heart would break,
She throws forth Tarquin's name: "he, he," she says,
But more than "he"! her poor tongue could not speak;
Till after many accents and delays,
Untimely breathings, sick and short essays,
She utters this: he, he; fair lords, 'tis he,
That guides this hand to give this wound to me.

Even here she sheathed in her harmless breast
A harmful knife, that thence her soul unsheathed:
That blow did hail it from the deep unrest
Of that polluted prison where it breathed:
Her contrite sighs unto the clouds bequeathed
Her winged sprite, and through her wounds doth fly
Life's lasting date from cancel'd destiny.

Stone-still, astonish'd with this deadly deed,
Stood Collatine and all his lordly crew;
Till Lucrece's father, that beholds her blood,
Himself on her self-slaughter'd body throw'd:
And from the purple fountain Brutus drew
The murderous knife, and as it left the place,
Her blood, in poor revenge, held it in chase;
And bubbling from her breast, it doth divide
In two slow rivers, that the crimson blood
Circles her body in on every side,
Who like a late-sack'd island vastly stood,
Bare and unpeopled, in this fearful flood.

Some of her blood still pure and red remain'd,
And some look'd black, and that false Tarquin stain'd
About the mourning and congealed face
Of that black blood a watery rigol goes,
Which seems to weep upon the tainted place:
And ever since, as pitying Lucrece's woes,
Corrupted blood some watery token shows;
And blood untainted still doth red abide;
Blushing at that which is so putrify'd.

Daughter, dear daughter! old Lucretius cries,
That life was mine, which thou hast here deprived
If in the child the father's image lies.
Where shall I live, now Lucrece is unlived?
Thou wast not to this end from me derived.
If children pre-decease progenitors.
We are their offspring, and they none of ours.

Poor broken glass, I often did behold
In thy sweet semblance my old age new-born;
But now that fair fresh mirror, dim and old
Shows me a base-born'd death by time out-worn.
O! from thy cheek's my image thou hast torn,
And shiver'd all the beauty of my glass.
That I no more can see what once I was.

O time! cease thou thy course, and last no longer
If they succeed to be that should survive.
Shall rotten death make conquest of the stronger,
And leave the faltering feeble souls alive?
The old bees die, the young possess their hive:
Then, live sweet Lucrece; live again, and see
Thy father die, and not thy father thee!

By this starts Collatine as from a dream,
And bids Lucretius give his sorrow place:
And then in key-cold Lucrece's bleeding stream
He falls, and bathes the pale fear in his face.
And counterfeits to die with her a space;
Till manly shame bids him possess his breath,
And live to be revenged on her death.

The deep vexation of his inward soul
Hath serv'd a dumb arrest upon his tongue;
Who, mad that sorrow should his use control,
Or keep him from heart-easing words so long.
Begins to talk, but through his lips do throng
Weak words, so thick come in his poor heart's end
That no man could distinguish what he said.

Yet sometime Tarquin was pronounced plain,
But through his teeth, as if the name he tore.
This windy tempest, till it blow up rain,
Held back his sorrow's tide to make it more;
At last it rains, and busy winds give o'er:
Then, son and father weep with equal strife,
Who should weep most, for daughter or for wife.

The one doth call her his, the other his,
Yet neither may possess the claim they lay.
The father says, She's mine: O! mine she is Replies her husband: Do not take away
My sorrow's interest; let no mourner say
He weeps for her, for she was only mine,
And only must be wail'd by Collatine.

O! quoth Lucretius, I did give that life,
Which she too early and too late hath spil'd.
Woe, woe! quoth Collatine, she was my wife,
I ow'd her, and 'tis mine that she hath kill'd,
"My daughter" and "my wife" with clamours fill'd,
The dispers'd air, who holding Lucrece' life,
Answer'd their cries, "my daughter and my wife."

Brutus, who pluck'd the knife from Lucrece' side,
Seeing such emulation in their woe,
Began to clothe his wit in state and pride,
Burying in Lucrece' wound his folly's show.
He with the Romans was esteemed so
As silly jeering idiots are with kings,
For sportive words, and uttering foolish things:

But now he throws that shallow habit by,
Wherein deep policy did him disguise,
And arm'd his long-hid wits advisedly,
To check the tears in Collatinus' eyes.
Thou wrong'd lord of Rome, quoth he, arise .
Let my unsounded self, suppos'd a fool,
Now set thy long-experienced wit to school.

Why, Collatine, is woe the cure for woes?
Do wounds help wounds, or grief help grievous deeds?
Is it revenge to give thyself a blow,
For his foul act by whom thy fair wife bleeds?
Such childish humour from weak minds proceeds;
Thy wretched humour from weak minds proceeds;
Thy wretched wife mistook the matter so,
To slay herself that should have slain her foe.

Courageous Roman, do not steep thy heart
In such relenting dew of lamentations,
But kneel with me, and help to bear thy part,
To rouse our Roman gods with invocations,
That they will suffer these abominations,
Since Rome herself in them doth stand disgraced,
By our strong arms from forth her fair streets chased.

Now, by the Capitol that we adore,
And by this chaste blood so unjustly stafned,
By heaven's fair sun that breeds the fat earth's stores,
By all our country rights in Rome maintained,
And by chaste Lucrece' soul, that late complained
Her wrongs to us, and by this bloody knife,
We will revenge the death of this true wife.

This said, he struck his hand upon his breast,
And kiss'd the fatal knife to end his vow;
And to his protestation urg'd the rest,
Who, wondering at him, did his words allow;
Then, jointly to the ground their knees they bow.
And that deep vow which Brutus made before,
He doth again repeat, and that they swore.

When they had sworn to this advised doom
They did conclude to bear dead Lucrece thence
To show her bleeding body thorough Rome,
And so to publish Tarquin's foul offence:
Which being done with speedy diligence,
The Romans plausibly' did give consent
To Tarquin's everlasting banishment.
SONNETS.

INTRODUCTION.

Shakespeare's Sonnets. Neuer before Imprinted. At London By G. Eld for T. T. and are to be solde by William Aspley. 1609. 4to. 40 leaves.

A Lover's Complaint. By William Shake-speare, occupies eleven pages at the end of this volume. The late Mr. Caldecot presented a copy of "Shakespeare's Sonnets" to the Bodleian Library, with the following imprint: "At London for T. T. and are to be sold by John Wright, dwelling at Christ Church gate." It is not doubt the same edition as that "to be sold by William Aspley," for in other respects they agree exactly, excepting that the copy bearing the name of John Wright has no date at the bottom of the title-page: it was very possibly cut off by the binder.

"Shakespeare's Sonnets" were printed under that title, and with the name of the poet in unusually large capital letters, in 1609. No Christian name is to be found until we arrive at "A Lover's Complaint," but "Shakespeare's Sonnets" is repeated at the head of the first of the series. Hence we may possibly be warranted in assuming that they were productions well known to have been for some time floating about among the lovers and admirers of poetry, and then collected into a volume. The celebrity of the author seems proved, if any proof of the kind were wanting, by the manner in which his "Sonnets" were put forth to the world.

There is one fact connected with the original publication of "Shakespeare's Sonnets" which has hitherto escaped remark, none of the commentators, apparently, being aware of it; viz. that although there were not two editions of them in 1609, there is an important difference in the title-pages of some copies of the impression of that year, which shows that a book-seller, not hitherto connected with the publication of any of our poet's works, was in some way concerned in the first edition of his "Sonnets." The usual imprint informs us, that they were printed by G. Eld, for T. T. and were to be sold by William Aspley (without any address); but the late Mr. Caldecot had a copy which stated that they were to be sold, not by William Aspley, (who had been one of the partners in "Much Ado about Nothing," 1608, 4to., and "Henry IV."
p. 1600, 4to.) but by "John Wright, dwelling at Christ Church Gate." No other copy with which we are acquainted has this variation in the title-page, and possibly T. T. had some reason for having it cancelled, and for substituting the name of Aspley for that of Wright: the former, it might be better known to the ordinary buyers of such books, and to the two quarto plays in which he was interested, he, perhaps, did not think it necessary to append the place where his business was carried on.

The application of the initials T. T., on the title-page, is ascertained from the Registers of the Stationers' Company, where the subsequent entry is found:—

"So May 1609.
Tho. T." A booke called Shakespeare's Sonnets.

Thope was a book-seller of considerable eminence, whom usually put his name at full length upon his title-pages, and why he did not do so in this instance, and also subscribed only T. T. to the dedication of the Sonnets, is a matter we should consider of little or no consequence, if it related to the productions of perhaps any other author but Shakespeare. It sometimes happened of old, that if it were suspected that a work might contain anything publicly or personally objectionable, the printer or the stationer only allowed their initials to appear in connection with it. That such was the case here, there is no sufficient ground for believing; and Eld avowed himself the printer, and Aspley the seller of "Shakespeare's Sonnets."

A question has arisen, and has been much disputed of late years, who was the individual to whom Thope dedicated these sonnets, and whom, in a very unprecedented and peculiar form, he addresses as "Mr. W. H." That form is precisely as follows, on a separate leaf immediately succeeding the title-page:—

TO THE ONLY INFORMER OF THESE INSIGNI. SONSETS.

Mr. W. H. ALL HAPINESS.

AND THAT ETERNITY PROMISED.

BY THE WELL-WISHING, ADVENTURER, IN SETTING.

T. T.

We are not aware that there is another instance in our language, at that period, of a dedication of a similar kind, and in a similar style. It was not at all uncommon for booksellers to subscribe dedications; but it more frequently happened after the death of an author than during his life, and never, that we recollect, in a manner so remarkable. The conclusion has been carried on with some pertinacity on the question, what person was addressed as "Mr. W. H.$" and various replies have been made to it. Farmer conjectured wildly that he might be William Hart, the poet's nephew, who was only born in 1600: Tyrwhitt guessed from a line in one of the sonnets (Son. XX.) that the name was W. Hughes, or Hewes:

"A man in hue, all hue in his controlling,

which is thus printed in the 4to, 1609:

"A man to hue all hue in his controlling,"

Although the word "hue" is repeatedly spelt here in the old edition, this is the only instance in which it is printed in italic type, and with a capital letter, exactly the same as W.H., in Sonnets XXXV., XXXVI., and XLIII., where the author plays upon his own name. Dr. Drake imagined that W. H. were the initials of Henry Wriothesley, Earl of Southampton, inverted ("Shakespeare and his Times," vol. ii. p. 62); and of late years Bowden, with great innacuracy, has contended that W. H. meant William Herbert, Earl of Pembroke. This last notion seems too much taken for granted by Mr. C. Armitage Brown, in his very clever and, in many respects, original work, "Shakespeare's Autobiographical Poems," 8vo., 1858; but we own that we cannot accord in that, or in any other theory that has yet been advanced upon the point. We have no suggestion of our own to offer, and acquiescence in one opinion or in another in no way affects any position regarding them which we might be disposed to take up; but it seems to us the very height of improbability that a bookseller in the year 1609, when peculiar respect was paid to nobility and station, would venture to address an Earl and a Knight of the Garter merely as "Mr. W. H.$" How-

* A small pamphlet, entitled "On the Sonnets of Shakespeare, Identifying the Person to whom they were addressed, and elucidating several points in the Poet's History." By James Bonden. 8vo. 1833. The whole substance of the tract had been published in 1832 in a pamphlet by Mr. A. Cunningham: the publication of Bonden's pamphlet, therefore, was a work of supererogation, because it appears that his notion was supported by the opinion of Mr. B. Heywood Bright, well known for his conscientious and learned work on Shakespeare, and who, in "Tennyson's Shakespear: a study," page 19, had fallen upon the same conjecture before it was breached by Bonden.

* Upon this particular point we concur with Mr. Peter Cunningham, in a note to his excellent edition of Mr. T. Campbell's "Specimens of British Poets." (Essay, p. lxxi.) but we can by no means follow him in thinking that Shakespeare's Sonnets have been a "vergerated," or that the Earl of Pembroke could not have been addressed in them, because he was only nine years old in 1609. Shakespeare had written sonnets at that date, according to the undoubted testimony of Meres, but those in which the Earl has been supposed to be addressed may have been produced at a considerably later period. Still, at the ear.

age of eighteen or nineteen, which the Earl reached in 1609, it does not seem likely that Shakespeare would have thought it necessary, with so much vehemence, to urge him to marry.
aver, notwithstanding the pains taken to settle the dispute, we hold it to be one of comparatively little importance, and it is certainly one upon which we are not likely to arrive at a final and satisfactory decision. To the desperate speculations of Chalmers, that not a few of the Sonnets were addressed to Queen Elizabeth, though maintained with considerable ability and in good faith entertained by many scholars, we cannot subscribe. It is evident that the Sonnets were written at very different periods of Shakespeare's life, and under very different circumstances—some in youth, some in more advanced age; and though the M.D. date has been inferred and resorted to when he was desponding and afflicted at his own condition in life, and place in society. In many there are to be found most remarkable indications of self-confidence, and of assurance in the immortality of his verses, and in this respect the author's opinion of himself is confirmed. No better way can there be to express it, and perhaps there is no writer of ancient or of modern times who, for the quantity of such writings left behind him, has so frequently or so strongly declared his firm belief of his own superior merit, in this his pleasant way of saying, "the world would not willingly let die." This conviction seems hardly reconcilable with the carelessness he appears to have displayed for the preservation of his dramatic writings. We know from Francis Meres that Shakespeare's Sonnets were scattered among his friends in 1609, and no doubt he continued to add to them from year to year; but it was left to a bookseller in 1669, perhaps, to cause them to be collected, and to be printed in a separate volume.

It is with reference to this circumstance that we understand Thorpe to address "Mr. W. H.," in the dedication, as "the only begetter of these ensuing sonnets." Boswell quoted a passage from Dekker's "Satromastick," 1629, (and many other instances might be adduced) to prove that "begetter" only means father or procreator; and as Thorpe had been under some obligation to W. H., for collecting Shakespeare's scattered sonnets from various parties, for this reason, perhaps, he inscribed them to him. There is no doubt that "begetter" is Shakespeare's old word for author. Thiho is his own sonnet, "On the first opening of a Book," and we have seen the same word used by other English writers of the time. The "begetter" of the sonnets in any other sense, for it is indisputable that many of them are addressed to a woman; and though a sole object might have been the cause of some of them, and particularly of the first twenty-six, he could not have been the cause of the last twenty-seven sonnets.

We have already mentioned Mr. Brown's work, "Shakespeare's Autobiographical Poems," which, with a few errors and inconsistencies of little moment, contains the best solution of the various diffticulties arising out of these Sonnets. The sonnet as Spenser and many others employed stanzas of various descriptions, and that 152 of the 154 sonnets are divided into quatrains and couplets is the following; and we think with him, that if they be read with this key, much will be intelligible which upon any other supposition must remain obscure:—

First Poem. Sonnets 1 to 26. To his friend, persuading him to make a Second Poem. Sonnets 27 to 65. To his friend, forgiving him for having robbed him of his mistress.

Third Poem. Sonnets 66 to 77. To his friend, complaining of his not being the author of life's disaster. Fourth Poem. Sonnets 78 to 101. To his friend, complaining that he prefers another poet's praises, and reproving him for faults that may injure his character.

Fifth Poem. Sonnets 102 to 126. To his friend, excusing himself for having been some time silent, and disclaiming the charge of inconstancy.

I.
From fairest creatures we desire increase,
That thereby beauty's rose might never die,
But as the riper should by time decease,
His tender heir might bear his memory:
But thou, contrived to trine to time decease,
Feed'st thy light's flame with self-substantial fuel,
II.
Sixth Poem. Sonnets 127 to 152. To his mistress, on her infidelity.

Mr. Brown asserts, and goes far to prove, that the sonnets in the first five of these divisions are consecutive, following up the same thought, and working out the same purpose. With regard to the "sixth poem," as he terms it, he concludes that the sonnets "are not, like the others, to be read in the order in which they were printed in the edition of 1609. He rejects the last two sonnets as not part of any of the six poems, and they are unquestionably some of his very best.

Many years ago, long before the appearance of Mr. Brown's volume, it had occurred to us, as a mode merely of removing some of the difficulties attending this portion of the works of Shakespeare, that it was possible that he had conceived to write some of them, not in his own person, but for individuals who asked his assistance. We entirely abandon that supposition, notwithstanding we are aware that such was not an uncommon practice in Shakespeare's age. Gascoigne, who died in 1597, mentions that he had been frequently solicited to write the "Forest of Fanny," 1579, tells us that he had written many of the poems it contains for persons "who had occasion to crave his help in that behalf," and Sir John Harington, in his Epigrams, written probably about 1591, states expressly,

"Verses are grown such merchantable wares,
That now for Sonnets sellers are and buyers."

Marston, in his Satires, 1598, accuses "Roscius the tragedian" of having written some love-verses for Mutio, and he adds elsewhere that "absolute Castello" did himself in a similar manner, in order that he might pay acceptable parting to his mistresses. Shakespeare had now and then consigned to supply the wants of his friends in this way, who thus became possessed of his "sungred sonnets," as Meres calls them, it would, at events, have been without precedent.

Thorpe's edition of 1674 of Shakespeare's Sonnets is a well printed volume, although not perhaps so good a specimen of the typography of that time, as Field's impressions of "Venus and Adonis" and "Locrine." It is remarkable that while all the other Shakespeare's plays came from the press in four editions in so slovenly and uncorrected a state, his minor poems have been handed down to us, perhaps, more accurately printed than those of any of the poets of the time, with the exception of Daniel and Drayton, who seem generally to have bestowed great pains upon their productions. At the end of the "Sonets" is a poem, called "A Lover's Complaint," and here, although it has no fresh title-page, we are assured that it is "by William Shakespeare." There could in fact be no doubt respecting the authorship of it; but on what occasion, or for what purpose it was written, we have no information.

The ensuing sonnets, with other poems, were reprinted in 1649, 6vo, with a frontispiece engraved by Seller. It is an edition of no authority: it repeats and multiplies the errors of the previous separate impressions, and includes productions with which Shakespeare had no concern.

The text is that of the 4to, 1609, in every case where a reason is not assigned for deviating from it. In all modern reprints various errors have been committed in consequence of carelessness of collation, or because one editor copied the mistakes of another: of these our notes will contain a sufficient indication.

Making a famine where abundance lies,
Thyself thy foe, to thy sweet self too cruel.
Thou that art now the world's fresh ornament,
And only herald to the gaudy spring,
Within thine own bud burstiest thy content,
And, tender churl, mak'st waste iniggardize.

Pity the world, or else this glutton be,
To eat the world's due, by the grave and thee.

"So it is not with me, as with that muse,
Soured by a painted beauty to her own despair.
Who heavens itself for ornament doth use,
And every fair with his fair doth revenge," &c.

It may be doubted whether in these, and the succeeding lines, Shakespeare and any individual of modern times has been congraced by "Idea," or rather "Imagination." "Idea" has only been discovered of late years; and it seems not improbable that, like his "Endymion and Phoebe," (see the Snugwater Catalogue, p. 106) he, for some reason, supposed it. Only a single copy of each has been preserved.
II.
When forty winters shall besiege thy brow,
And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field,
Thy youth's proud livery, so gazed on now,
Will be a tatter'd weed, of small worth held:
Then, being ask'd where all thy beauty lies,
Where all the treasure of thy lusty days,
To say, within thine own deep-sunken eyes,
Were an all-eating shame, and thriftless praise.
How much more praise deserv'd thy beauty's use,
If thou couldst answer—' This fair child of mine,
Shall sum my count, and make my old excuse,'—
Proving his beauty by succession thine.
This was to be new made, when thou art old,
And see thy blood warm, when thou feel'st it cold.

III.
Look in thy glass, and tell the face thou viewest,
Now is the time that face should form another:
Whose fresh repair if now thou not renewest,
Thou dost beguile the world, unless some mother.
For where is she so fair, whose un-cared'rd womb
Disdains the tillage of thy husbandry?
Or who is he so fond, will be the tomb
Of his self-love, to stop posterity?
Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee
Calls back the lovely April of her prime:
So then through windows of thine age shalt see,
Despite of wrinkles, this thy golden time.
But if thou live, remember'd not to be,
Die single, and thine image dies with thee.

IV.
Unthrifty loveliness, why dost thou spend
Upon thyself thy beauty's legacy?
Nature's bequest gives nothing, but doth lend;
And being frank, she lends to those are free.
Then, beautieous niggard, why dost thou abuse
The bounteous largess given thee to give?
Profitless usurer, why dost thou use
So great a sum of sums, yet canst not live?
For, having traffic with thyself alone,
Thou of thyself thy sweet self dost deceive.
Then how, when nature calls thee to be gone,
What acceptable audit canst thou leave?
Thy un-look'd beauty must be tomb'd with thee,
Which, used, lives till th' executor be.

V.
Those hours, that with gentle work did frame
The lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell,
Will play the tyrants to the very same,
And that unfair, which fairly doth excel:
For never-resting time leads summer on
To hideous winter, and confounds him there;
Sap check'd with frost, and lusty leaves quite gone,
Beauty o'er-snow'd and barren every where:
Then, were not summer's distillation left,
A liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass,
Beauty's effect with beauty were bereft,
Nor it, nor no remembrance what it was:
But flowers distill'd, though they with winter meet,
Leese's but their show; their substance still lives sweet.

VI.
Then, let not winter's ragged hand deface
In thee thy summer, ere thou be distill'd:
Make sweet some phial: treasure thou some place

With beauty's treasure, ere it be self-kill'd:
That use is not forbidden usuury,
Which happies those that pay the willing loan;
That 's for thyself to breed another thee,
Or ten times happier, be it ten for one:
Ten times thyself were happier than thou art,
If ten of thine ten times refus'd thee.
Then what could death do if thou shouldst depart,
Leaving thee living in posterity?
Be not self-will'd, for thou art much too fair
To be death's conquest, and make worms thine he.

VII.
Lo! in the orient when the gracious light
Lifts up his burning head, each under eye
Doth homage to his new-appearing sight,
Serving with looks his sacred majesty;
And having climb'd the steep-up heavenly hill,
Resembling strong youth in his middle age,
Yet mortal looks adore his beauty still,
Attending on his golden pilgrimage:
But when from high-est pitch with weary ear
Like feeble age, he reclineth from the day,
The eyes, 'fore duteous, now converted are
From his low tract, and look another way
So thou, thyself out-going in thy noon.
Unlook'd on diest, unless thou get a son.

VIII.
Music to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly?
Sweets with sweets war not, joy delights in joy.
Why lov'st thou that which thou receiv'st not gladly
Or else receiv'st with pleasure thine annoy?
If the true concord of well-tuned sounds,
By unison, do offend thine ear,
They do but sweetly chide thee, who confounds
In singleness the parts that thou shouldst bear.
Mark, how one string, sweet husband to another,
Strikes each in each by mutual ordering;
Resembling sire and child and happy mother,
Who all in one one pleasing note do sing:
Whose speechless song, being many, seeming one.
Sings this to thee.—thou single wilt prove none.

IX.
Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye,
That thou consum'st thyself in single life?
Ah! if thou issueless shalt hap to die,
The world will wait thee like a makeless wife,
The world will be thy widow, and still weep,
That thou no form of thee hast left behind,
When every private widow well may keep,
By children's eyes, her husband's shape in mind.
Look, what an unthrift in the world doth spend.
Shifts but his place, for still the world enjoys it;
But beauty's waste hath in the world an end,
And, kept issueless, the user so destroys it.
No love toward others in that bosom sits,
That on himself such murderous shame commits.

X.
For shame! deny that thou hear'st love to any
Who for thyself art so unprov'd.
Grant, if thou wilt, thou art belov'd of many,
But that thou none lov'st is most evident;
For thou art so possess'd with murderous hate,
That 'gainst thyself thou stick'st not to conspire;
Seeking that beauteous roof to ruinate.
Which to repair should be thy chief desire.
O, change thy thought, that I may change my mind!
Shall hate be fairer lodg’d than gentle love?
Be, as thy presence is, gracious and kind,
Or, to thyself, at least, kind-hearted prove:
Make thee another self, for love of me,
That beauty still may live in thine or thee.

XI.
As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou growest
In one of things, from that which thou departest:
And that fresh blood which youngly thou bestowest,
Thou may’st call thine, when thou from youth convertest.
Herein lives wisdom, beauty, and increase.
Without this, folly, age, and cold decay;
If all were minded so, the times should cease,
And three-score year would make the world away.
Let those whom nature hath not made for store,
Harsh, featureless, and rude, barrenly perish:
Look, whom she best endow’d, she gave the more;
Which bounteous gift thou shouldst in beauty cherish.
She carv’d thee for her seal, and meant thereby,
Thou shouldst print more, not let that copy die.

XII.
When I do count the clock that tells the time,
And see the brave day sunk in hideous night;
When I behold the violet past prime,
And sable curls all silver’d o’er with white;
When lofty trees I see barren of leaves,
Which erst from heat did canopy the herd,
And summer’s green all girded up in sheaves,
Borne on the bier with white and briskly beard;
Then, of thy beauty do I question make,
That thou among the wastes of time must go,
Since sweets and beauties do themselves forake,
And die as fast as they see others grow;
And nothing ‘gainst time’s scythe can make defence,
Save breed, to brave him, when he takes thee hence.

XIII.
O, that you were yourself! but, love, you are
No longer yours, than you yourself here live:
Against this coming end you should prepare,
And your sweet semblance to some other give:
So should that beauty which you hold in lease,
Find no determination: then, you were
Yourself again, after yourself’s decease,
When your sweet issue your sweet form should bear.
Whose lots so fair a house fall to decay,
Which husbandry in honour might uphold,
Against the stormy gusts of winter’s day,
And barren rage of death’s eternal cold?
O! none but unthrifts. Dear my love, you know,
You had a father; let your son say so.

XIV.
Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck,
And yet, methinks, I have astronomy,
But not to tell of good, or evil luck,
Of plagues, or dearths, or seasons’ quality:
Nor can I fortune to brief moments tell,
Pointing to each his thunder, rain, and wind;
Or say with princes if it shall go well,
By oft predict that I in heaven find:
But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive,
And, constant stars, in them I read such art,
As truth and beauty shall together thrive.

If from thyself to store thou wouldst convert,
Or else of thee this I prognosticate,
Thy end is truth’s and beauty’s doom and date.

XV.
When I consider every thing that grows
Holds in perfection but a little moment;
That this huge stage presenteth nought but shows.
Whereon the stars in secret influence comment,
When I perceive that men as plants increase,
Cheered and check’d even by the selfsame sky,
Vaunt in their youthful sap, at height decrease,
And wear their brave state out of memory;
Then, the conceit of this inconstant stay
Sets you most rich in youth before my sight,
Where wasteful time debateth with decay,
To change your day of youth to sullied night;
And, all in war with time, for love of you,
As he takes from you, I engraft you new

XVI.
But wherefore do not you a mightier way
Make war upon this bloody tyrant, time,
And fortify yourself in your decay
With means more blessed than my barren rhyme?
Now stand you on the top of happy hours,
And many maiden gardens, yet unseem,
With virtuous wish would bear your living flowers.
Much liker than your painted counterfeit:
So should the lines of life that life repair,
Which time, pen and paper, or your pupil pen,
Neither in inward worth, nor outward fair,
Can make you live yourself in eyes of men.
To give away yourself, keeps yourself still,
And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

XVII.
Who will believe my verse in time to come,
If it were fill’d with your most high deserts?
Though yet, heaven knows, it is but a tomb
Which hides your life, and shows not half your parts
If I could write the beauty of your eyes,
And in fresh numbers number all your graces,
The age to come would say, ‘this poet lies;
Such heavenly touches ne’er touch’d earthly faces’
So should my papers, yellow’d with their age,
Be scorn’d, like old men of less truth than tongue.
And your true rights be term’d a poet’s rage,
And stretched metre of an antique song;
But were some child of yours alive that time.
You should live twice—in it, and in my rhyme.

XVIII.
Shall I compare thee to a summer’s day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate:
Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,
And summer’s lease hath all too short a date.
Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines,
And often is his gold complexion dimm’d,
And every fair from fair sometime declines,
By chance, or nature’s changing course, untrimm’d
But thy eternal summer shall not fade,
Nor lose possession of that fair thou owest;
Nor shall death brag thou wander’st in his shade
When in eternal lines to time thou growest.
So long as men can breathe, or eyes can see,
So long lives this, and this gives life to thee.
Devolving Time, blent thou the lion's paws,
And make the earth devour her own sweet brood;
Pluck the keen teeth from the fierce tiger's jaws,
And burn the long-liv'd phenix in her blood:
Make glad and sorry seasons as thou floost,
And do whate'er thou wilt, swift-footed Time,
To the wide world, and all her fading sweets;
But I forbid thee one most heinous crime:
O! carve not with thy hours my love's fair brow,
Nor draw no lines there with thine antique pen;
Hum in thy course untainted do allow,
For beauty's pattern to succeeding men.
Yet, do thy worst, old Time: despite thy wrong,
My love shall in my verse ever live young.

A woman's face, with nature's own hand painted,
Hast thou, the master-mistress of my passion;
A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted
With shifting change, as is false women's fashion:
An eye more bright than theirs, less false in rolling,
Gilding the object whereupon it gazeth;
A man in hue, all hues in his controlling,
Which steals men's eyes, and women's souls amazeth;
And for a woman wert thou first created;
Till nature, as she wrought thee, fell a-doting,
And by addition me of thee defeated,
By adding one thing to my purpose nothing.
But since she prickt thee out for women's pleasure,
Mine be thy love, and thy love's use their treasure.

So is it not with me, as with that muse
Stirr'd by a painted beauty to his verse,
Who heaven itself for ornament doth use,
A woman's face, with nature's own hand painted,
A man in hue, all hues in his controlling,
Which steals men's eyes, and women's souls amazeth;
A man in hue, all hues in his controlling,
Which steals men's eyes, and women's souls amazeth;
And for a woman wert thou first created;
Till nature, as she wrought thee, fell a-doting,
And by addition me of thee defeated,
By adding one thing to my purpose nothing.
But since she prickt thee out for women's pleasure,
Mine be thy love, and thy love's use their treasure.

My glass shall not persuade me I am old,
So long as youth and thou are of one date;
But when in thee time's frowers I behold,
Then look I death my days should expiate;
For all that beauty that doth cover thee,
Is but the seemly raiment of my heart,
Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in me.
How can I, then, be elder than thou art?
O! therefore, love, be of thyself so wary,
As I, not for myself, but for thee will,
Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so chary
As tender nurse her babe from faring ill.
Presume not on thy heart, when mine is slain;
Thou gav'st me thine, not to give back again.

As an imperfect actor on the stage,
Who with his fear is put besides his part,
Or some fierce thing replete with too much rage,
Whose strength's abundance weakens his own heart,
So I, for fear of trust, forget to say
The perfect ceremony of love's rite,
And in mine own love's strength seem to decay,
O'er-charg'd with burden of mine own love's might.
O! let my books be, then, the eloquence
And dumb presagers of my speaking breast,
Who plead for love, and look for recompense,
More than that tongue that more hath more express'd
O! learn to read what silent love hath writ:
To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.

Let those who are in favour with their stars
Of public honour and proud titles boast,
Whilst I, whom fortune of such triumph bars,
Unlook'd for joy in that I honour most.
Great prince's favourites their fair leaves spread,
But as the marigold at the sun's eye;
And in themselves their pride lies buried,
For at a frown they in their glory die.
The painful warrior, famoused for fight,
After a thousand victories once foil'd,
Is from the book of honour razed quite,
And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd
Then, happy I, that love and am beloved,
Where I may not remove, nor be removed.

Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage
Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit,
To thee I send this written embassage,
To witness duty, not to show my wit:
Duty so great, which wit so poor as mine
May make seem bare, in wanting words to show it,
But that I hope some good conceit of thine
In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow it;
Till whatsoever star that guides my moving,
Points on me graciously with fair aspect,
And puts apparel on my tattered loving,
To show me worthy of thy sweet respect:
Then may I dare to boast how I do love thee; [me
Till then, not show my head where thou may'st prove

Weary with toil I haste me to my bed.
The dear repose for limbs with travel tired;
But then begins a journey in my head,
To work my mind, when body's work's expired
For all my thoughts (from far where I abide)
Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
And keep my drooping eyelids open wide.
Looking on darkness which the blind do see:
Save that my soul’s imaginary sight
Presents thy shadow to my sightless view,
Which, like a jewel hung in ghastly night,
Makes black night beauteous, and her old face new.
Lo! thus by day my limbs, by night my mind,
For thee, and for myself, no quiet find.

XXVIII.
How can I, then, return in nappy plight,
That am debarr’d the benefit of rest?
When day’s oppression is not cas’d by night,
But day by night, and night by day, oppress’d?
And each, though enemies to either reign,
Do in consent shake hands to torture me;
The one by toil, the other to complain
How far I toil, still farther off from thee.
I tell the day, to please him thou art bright,
And dost him grace when clouds do blot the heaven:
So flatter I the swart-complexion’d night,
When sparkling stars twire not, thou gild’st the even:
But day doth daily draw my sorrows longer;
And night doth nightly make grief’s length seem stronger.

XXIX.
When in disgrace with fortune and men’s eyes,
I all alone beweep my outcast state,
And trouble deaf heaven with my bootless cries,
And look upon myself, and curse my fate,
Wishing me like to one more rich in hope,
Fairest like him, like him with friends possess’d,
Desiring this man’s art, and that man’s scope,
With what I most enjoy contented least;
Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising,
Haply I think on thee, and then my state
(Like to the lark at break of day arising
From sullen earth) sings hymns at heaven’s gate:
For thy sweet love remember’d such wealth brings,
That then I soar to change my state with kings.

XXX.
When to the sessions of sweet silent thought
I summon up remembrance of things past,
I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
And with old woes new wail my dear time’s waste:
Then can I drown an eye, unused to flow,
For precious friends hid in death’s dateless night,
And weep anew love’s long since cancelled woe,
And moan th’ expense of many a vanish’d sight.
Then, can I grieve at grievances fore-gone,
And heavily from woe to woe tell o’er
The sad account of fore-bemooned moon,
Which I new pay, as if not paid before:
But if the while I think on thee, dear friend,
All losses are restor’d, and sorrows end.

XXXI.
Thy bosom is endear’d with all hearts,
Which I by lacking have supposed dead,
And there reigns love, and all love’s loving parts,
And all those friends which I thought buried.
How many a holy and obsequious tear
Hath dear religious love stol’n from mine eye,
As interest of the dead, which now appear
But things remov’d, that hidden in thee lie!
Thou art the grave where buried love doth live,
Hung with the trophies of my lovers gone,
Who all their parts of me to thee did give;
That due of many now is thine alone:
Their images I lov’d I view in thee,
And thou (all they) hast all the all of me.

XXXII.
If thou survive my well-contented day,
When that cloud death my bones with dust shall cover,
And shalt by fortune once more re-survey
These poor rude lines of thy deceased lover,
Compare them with the bettering of the time;
And though they be out-stripp’d by every pen,
Reserve them for my love, not for their rhyme,
Exceed to the height of happier men.
O! then vouchsafe me but this loving thought:
"Had my friend’s muse grown with this growing age
A dearer birth than this his love had brought,
To March in ranks of better equipage:
But since he died, and poets better prove,
Theirs for their style I’ll read, his for his love."

XXXIII.
Full many a glorious morning have I seen
Flatter the mountain tops with sovereign eye,
Kissing with golden face the meadows green,
Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchymy;
Anon permit the basest clouds to ride
With ugly rack on his celestial face,
And from the forlorn world his visage hide,
Stealing unseen to west with this disgrace.
Even so my sun one early morn did shine,
With all triumphant splendour on my brow;
But out, alack! he was but one hour mine,
The region cloud hath mask’d him from me now.
Yet him for this my love no whit disdaineth;
Suns of the world may stain, when heaven’s sun

XXXIV.
Why didst thou promise such a beauteous day,
And make me travel forth with my cloak,
To let base clouds o’ertake me in my way,
Hiding thy bravery in their rotten smoke?
’Tis not enough that through the cloud thou break,
To dry the rain on my storm-beaten face,
For no man well of such a salve can speak,
That heals the wound, and cures not the disgrace;
Nor can thy shame give physic to my grief;
Though thou repent, yet I have still the loss:
Th’ offender’s sorrow lends but weak relief
To him that bears the strong offence’s cross.
Ah! but those tears are pearl, which thy love sheds
And they are rich and ransom all ill deeds.

XXXV.
No more be griev’d at that which thou hast done:
Roses have thorns, and silver mountains mud;
Clouds and eclipses stain both moon and sun,
And loathsome canker lives in sweetest bud.
All men make faults, and even I in this,
Authorizing thy trespass with compare;
Myself corrupting, salving thy amiss,
Excurring thy sins more than thy sins are:
For to thy sensual fault I bring in sense,
Thy adverse party is thy advocate,
And against myself a lawful plea commence.
Such civil war is in my love and hate,
That I an necessary needs must be
To that sweet thief which sourly robs from me.
XXXVI.

Let me confess that we two must be twain,
Although our undivided loves are one:
So shall those blots that do with me remain,
Without thy help by me be borne alone.
In our two loves there is but one respect,
Though in our lives a separable spite,
Which though it alter not love's sole effect,
Yet doth it steal sweet hours from love's delight.
I may not evermore acknowledge thee,
Lest my bewailed guilt should do thine shame;
Nor thou with public kindnesse honour me,
Unless thou take that honour from thy name:
But do not so: I love thee in such sort,
As, thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

XXXVII.

As a decrepit father takes delight
To see his active child do deeds of youth,
So I, made lame by fortune's dearest spire,
Take all my comfort of thy worth and truth;
For whether beauty, birth, or wealth, or wit,
Or any of these all, or all or more,
Entitled in thy parts do crowned sit,
I make my love engrav'd to this store:
So then I am not lame, poor nor despi'd,
Whilst that this shadow doth such substance give,
That I in thy abundance am suffi'd,
And by a part of all thy glory live.

Look what is best, that best I wish in thee:
This wish I have; then, ten times happy me!

XXXVIII.

How can my muse want subject to invent,
While thou dost breathe, that pour'st into my verse
Thine own sweet argument, too excellent
For every vulgar paper to rehearse?
O! give thyself the thanks, if aught in me
Worthy perusal stand against thy sight;
For who's so dumb that cannot write to thee,
When thou thyself dost give invention light?
Be thou the truth muse, ten times more in worth
Than those old nine which rhymers invoke;
And he that calls on thee, let him bring forth
Eternal numbers to out-live long date.
If my slight muse do please these curious days.
The pain be mine, but thine shall be the praise.

XXXIX.

O! how thy worth with manners may I sing,
When thou art all the better part of me?
What can mine own praise to mine own self bring?
And what is't but mine own, when I praise thee?
Even for this let us divided live,
And our dear love lose name of single one,
That by this separation I may give
That due to thee which thou deserv'est alone.
O absence! what a torment wouldst thou prove,
Were it not thy sour leisure gave sweet leave
To entertain the time with thoughts of love,
Which time and thoughts so sweetly doth deceive,
And that thou teachest how to make one twain,
By praising him here, who doth hence remain.

XL.

Take all my loves, my love: yea, take them all:
What hast thou then more than thou hast before?
No love, my love, that thou may'st true love call:
All mine was thine before thou hadst this more.
Then, if for my love thou my love receivest,
I cannot blame thee, for my love thou usest;
But yet be blam'd, if thou thyself deceivest
By wilful taste of what thyself refusest.
I do forgive thy robbery, gentle thief,
Although thou steal thee all my poverty:
And yet love knows it is a greater grief
To bear love's wrong, than hate's known injury.
Lascivious grace, in whom all ill well shows.
Kill me with snares, yet we must not be foes.

XLI.

Those pretty wrongs that liberty commits,
When I am sometime absent from thy heart,
Thy beauty and thy years full well belittles,
For still temptation follows where thou art.
Gentle thou art, and therefore to be won,
Beauteous thou art, therefore to be assailed:
And when a woman woos, what woman's son
Will shortly leave her till she have prevailed.
Ah me! but yet thou might'st my seat forbear,
And chide thy beauty and thy straying youth,
Who lead thee in their riot even there
Where thou art forc'd to break a two-fold truth:
Hers, by thy beauty tempting her to thee;
Thine, by thy beauty being false to me.

XLII.

That thou hast her, it is not all my grief.
And yet it may be said, I lov'd her dearly;
That she hath thee, is of my wailing chief,
A loss in love that touches me more nearly.
Loving offenders, thus I will excuse ye:
Thou dost love her, because thou know'st I love her,
And for my sake even so doth she abuse me,
Suffering my friend for my sake to approve her.
If I lose thee, my loss is my love's gain,
And losing her, my friend hath found that loss;
Both find each other, and I lose both twain,
And both for my sake lay on me this cross:
But here's the joy: my friend and I are one.
Sweet flattery!—then, she loves but me alone.

XLIII.

When most I wink, then do mine eyes best see,
For all the day they view things unrespected:
But when I sleep, in dreams they look on thee,
And darkly bright are bright in dark directed.
Then thou, whose shadow shadows doth make bright,
How would thy shadow's form, form happy show
To the clear day with thy much clearer light,
When to unseeing eyes thy shade shines so?
How would I, say, mine eyes be blessed made
By looking on thee in the living day,
When in dead night thy fair imperfect shade
Through heavy sleep on sightless eyes doth stay?
All days are nights to see, till I see thee,
And nights bright days, when dreams do show thee.

XLIV.

If the dull substance of my flesh were thought,
Injuries distance should not stop my way;
For then, despite of space, I would be brought
From limits far remote where thou dost stay.
No matter then, although my foot did stand
Upon the farthest earth remov'd from thee:
For nimble thought can jump both sea and land
As soon as think the place where he would be,
But ah! thought kills me, that I am not thought,
To leap large lengths of miles when thou art gone,
But that, so much of earth and water wrought,
I must attend time's pleasure with my mean;
Receiving nought by elements so slow
But heavy tears, badges of either's woe.

XLV.

The other two, slight air and purging fire,
Are both with thee, wherever I abide;
The first my thought, the other my desire.
These present-absent with swift motion slide:
For when these quicker elements are gone
In tender embassy of love to thee,
My life, being made of four, with two alone
Sinks down to death, oppress'd with melancholy
Until life's composition be recaire
By those swift messengers return'd from thee,
Who even but now come back again, assured
Of thy fair health, recounting it to me:
This told, I joy; but then, no longer glad,
I send them back again, and straight grow sad.

XLVI.

Mine eye and heart are as a mortal war,
How to divide the conquest of thy sight;
Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight would bar,
My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.
My heart doth plead, that thou in him dost lie,
(A closet never pier'd with crystal eyes)
But the defendant doth that plea deny,
And says in him thy fair appearance lies.
To 'eide' this title is impanneld
A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the heart;
And by their verdict is determined
The clear eye's moiety, and the dear heart's part:
As thus; mine eye's due is thine outward part,
And my heart's right thine inward love of heart.

XLVII.

Betwixt mine eye and heart a league is took,
And each doth good turns now unto the other.
When that mine eye is famish'd for a look,
Or heart in love with sights himself doth smoother,
With my love's picture then my eye doth feast,
And to the painted banquet bids my heart:
Another time mine eye is my heart's guest,
And in his thoughts of love doth share a part:
So, either by thy picture or my love,
Thyself away art present still with me;
For thou not farther than my thoughts canst move,
And I am still with them, and they with thee;
Or, if they sleep, thy picture in my sight
Awakes my heart to heart's and eye's delight.

XLVIII.

How careful was I, when I took my way,
Each trifle under trust bars to thrust;
That to my use it might unused stay
From hands of falsehood, in sure wards of trust!
But thou, to whom my jewels trifles are,
Most worthy comfort, now my greatest grief,
Thou, best of dearest, and mine only care,
Art left the prey of every vulgar thief.
Thou have I not lock'd up in any chest,
Save where thou art not, though I feel thou art,
Within the gentle closure of my breast.

From whence at pleasure thou may'st come and part
And even thence thou wilt be stol'n, I fear,
For truth proves thievish for a prize so dear.

XLIX.

Against that time, if ever that time come,
When I shall see thee frown on my defects,
When as thy love hath cast his utmost sum,
Call'd to that audit by advis'1 respects;
Against that time, when thou shalt strangely pass,
And scarcely greet me with that sun, thine eve,
When love, converted from the thing it was,
Shall reasons find of settled gravity;
Against that time do I enorse me here,
Within the knowledge of mine own desert,
And this my hand against myself appear,
To guard the lawful reasons on thy part:
To leave poor me thou hast the strength of laws.
Since why to love I can allege no cause.

L.

How heavy do I journey on the way,
When what I seek (my weary travel's end)
Doth teach that ease and that repose to say,
"Thus far the miles are measur'd from thy friend";
The beast that bears me, tired with my woe,
Plods dully on to bear that weight in me,
As if by some instinct the wretch did know,
His rider lov'd not speed being made from thee.
The bloody spur cannot provoke him on
That sometimes anger thrusts into his hide,
Which heavily he answers with a groan,
More sharp to me than spurring to his side;
For that same groan doth put this in my mind,
My grief lies outward, and my joy behind.

LI.

Thus can my love excuse the slow offence
Of my dull bearer, when from thee I sped:
From where thou art why should I haste me thence?
Till I return of posting is no need.
O! what excuse will my poor beast then find,
When swift extremity can seem but slow?
Then should I spur, though mounted on the wind
In winged speed no motion shall I know:
Then can no horse with my desire keep pace;
Therefore desire, (of perfect love being made)
Shall neigh (no dull flesh) in his fiery race;
But love, for love, thus shall excuse my jade;
Since from thee going he went wilful-slow,
Towards thee I'll run, and give him leave to go.

LII.

So am I as the rich, whose bessed key
Can bring him to his sweet up-lock'd treasure,
The which he will not every hour survey,
For blunting the fine point of seldom pleasure.
Therefore, are feasts so solemn and so rare,
Since seldom coming, in the long year set
Like stones of worth, they thinly placed are,
Or captain jewels in the carenet.
So is the time that keeps you as my chest,
Or as the wardrobe which the robe doth hide,
To make some special instant special-blest,
By new unfolding his imprison'd pride.
Blessed are you, whose worthiness gives scope
Being had, to triumph, being lack'd, to hopes.
LIII.
What is your substance, whereof are you made,
That millions of strange shadows on you tend?
Since every one hath, every one, one shade,
And you, but one, can every shadow lend.
Describe Adonis, and the counterfeit
Is poorly imitated after you:
On Helen's cheek all art of beauty set,
And you in Grecian tires are painted new:
Speak of the spring, and fisson1 of the year;
The one doth shadow of your beauty show,
The other as your bounty doth appear;
And you in every blemish shape we know.
In all external grace you have some part,
But you like none, none you, for constant heart.

LIV.
O, how much more doth beauty beauteous seem,
By that sweet ornament which truth doth give!
The rose looks fair, but fairer we it deem
For that sweet odour which doth in it live.
The canker2-blooms have full as deep a dye,
As the perfumed tincture of the roses;
Hang on such thorns, and play as wantonly
When summer's breath their masked buds discloses;
But, for their virtue only is their show,
They live unwield, and unspected fade;
Die to themselves. Sweet roses do not so;
Of their sweet deaths are sweetest odours made:
And so of you, beauteous and lovely youth,
When that shall fade, my3 verse distills your truth.

LV.
Not marble, nor the gilded monuments
Of princes, shall out-live this powerful rhyme;
But you shall shine more bright in these contents
Than unswept stone, besmeared'd with sluttish time.
When wasteful war shall statues overturn,
And braids root out the work of masonry.
Nor Mars his sword, nor war's quick fire shall burn
The living record of your memory.
'Gainst death and all-oblivious enmity
Shall you pace forth: your praise shall still find room
Even in the eyes of all posterity,
That wear this world out to the ending doom.
So, till the judgment that yourself arise,
You live in this, and dwell in lovers' eyes.

LVI.
Sweet love, renew thy force, be it not said,
Thy edge should blunter be than appetite,
Which but to-day by feeding is allay'd,
To-morrow sharpe'd in his former might:
So, love, be thou; although to-day thou fill
Thy hungry eyes, even till they wink with fulness,
To-morrow see again, and do not kill
The spirit of love with a perpetual dulness.
Let this sad interim like the ocean be
Which parts the shore, where two contracted new Come daily to the banks, that when they see
Return of love more bliss may be the view;
Or call it winter, which being full of care,
Makes summer's welcome thrice more wish'd, more

LVII.
Being yourslave, what should I do but tend
Upon the hours and times of your desire?
I have no precious time at all to spend,
Nor services to do, till you require.
Nor dare I chide the world-without-end hour,
Whilst I, my sovereign, watch the clock for you,
Nor think the bitterness of absence sour,
When you have bid your servant once adieu:
Nor dare I question with my jealous thought,
But, like a sad slave, and think of nought,
Save where you are, how happy you make those
So true a love is love, that in your will (Though you do any thing) he thinks no ill.

LVIII.
That God forbid, that made me first your slave,
I should in thought control your times of pleasure,
Or at your hand th' account of hours to crave,
Being your vassal, bound to stay your leisure!
O! let me suffer (being at your beck)
Th' imprison'd absence of your liberty;
And patience, tame to suffrance, hide each check,
Without accusing you of injury.
Be where you list; your charter is so strong,
That you yourself may privilege your time:
Do what you will, to you it doth belong
Yourself to pardon of self-doing crime.
I am to wait, though waiting so be hell,
Not blame your pleasure, be it ill or well.

LIX.
If there be nothing new, but that which is Hath been before, how are our brains beguil'd,
Which, labouring for invention, bear amiss
The second burden of a former child?
Of that record could with a backward look,
Even of five hundred courses of the sun,
Show me your image in some antique book,
Since mind at first in character was done:
That I might see what the old world could say
To this composed wonder of your frame:
Whether we are mended, or where better they,
Or whether revolution be the same.
O! sure I am, the wits of former days
To subjects worse have given admiring praise.

LX.
Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore
So do our minutes hasten to their end;
Each changing place with that which goes before,
In sequent toil all forwards do contend.
Nativity, once in the main of light,
Crawls to maturity, wherewith being crown'd,
Crooked eclipses 'gainst his glory fight,
And time that gave doth now his gift confound.
Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth,
And delves the parallels in beauty's brow;
Feeds on the rarities of nature's truth,
And nothing stands but for his seythe to mow:
And yet to times in hope my verse shall stand,
Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand.

LXI.
Is it thy will, thy image should keep open
My heavy eyelids to the weary night?
Dost thou desire my slumbers should be broken,
While shadows, like to thee, do mock my sight?
Is it thy spirit that thou send'st from thee
So far from home, into my deeds to pry?
To find out shames and idle hours in me,

1 Plenty. 2 Dog-rose. 3 by : in old eds. Malone made the change.
The scope and tenour of thy jealousy?
O no! thy love, though much, is not so great:
It is my love that keeps mine eye awake;
Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat,
To play the watchman ever for thy sake:
For thee watch I, whilst thou dost wake elsewhere,
From me far off, with others all too near.

Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye,
And all my soul, and all my every part;
And for this sin there is no remedy,
It is so grounded inward in my heart.
Methinks no face so gracious is as mine,
No shape so true, no truth of such account;
And for myself mine own worth do define,
As I all other in all worths surmount.
But when my glass shows me myself indeed,
Beate and chopp'd with tann'd antiquity,
Mine own self-love quite contrary I read;
Self so self-loving were iniquity.
'Tis thee (myself) that for myself I praise,
Painting my age with beauty of thy days.

Against my love shall be, as I am now,
With time's injurious hand crush'd and o'eworn;
When hours have drain'd his blood, and fill'd his brow
With lines and wrinkles; when his youthful morn
Hath travell'd on to age's steepy night;
And all those beauties, whereof now he's king,
Are vanishing, or vanish'd out of sight,
Sealing away the treasure of his spring;
For such a time do I now forfity
Against confounding age's cruel knife,
That he shall never cut from memory
My sweet love's beauty, though my lover's life;
His beauty shall in these black lines be seen,
And they shall live, and he in them still green.

When I have seen by Time's fell hand defaced
The rich proud cost of out-worn buried age;
When sometime lotty towers I see down-raised,
And brass eternal, slave to mortal rage;
When I have seen the hungry ocean gain
Advantage on the kingdom of the shore,
And the firm soil win of the watery main,
Increasing store with loss, and loss with store:
When I have seen such interchange of state,
Or state itself confounded to decay,
Ruin hath taught me thus to ruminate—
That time will come and take my love away.
This thought is as a death, which cannot choose
But weep to have that which it fears to lose.

Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea,
But sad mortality d'er-aways their power,
How with this rage shall beauty hold a plea,
Whose action is no stronger than a flower?
O! how shall summer's honey-breath hold out
Against the wreckful siege of battering days,
When rocks impregnable are not so stout,
Nor gates of steel so strong, but time decays?
O fearful meditation! where, alas,
Shall time's best jewel from time's chest lie hid?
Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot back?

Or who his spoil of beauty can forbid?
O none! unless this miracle have might,
That in black ink my love may still shine bright.

Tir'd with all these, for restful death I cry;—
As, to behold desert a beggar born,
And needy nothing (trimm'd in jollity,
And purest faith unhappily forsworn,
And gilded honour shamefully misplac'd,
And maiden virtue rudely strumpeted,
And right perfection wrongfully disgrac'd,
And strength by limping sway disabled,
And art made tongue-tied by authority,
And folly (doctor-like) controlling skill,
The simple truth miscall'd simplicity,
And captive good attending captain ill:
Tir'd with all these, from these would I be gone.
Save that to dic I leave my love alone.

Thus is his cheek the map of days out-worn,
When beauty liv'd and died as flowers do now,
Before these bastard signs of fair were borne,
Or durst inhabit on a living brow;
Before the golden tresses of the dead,
The right of sepulchers, were shorn away,
To live a second life on second head;
Ere beauty's dead fleece made another gay.
In him those holy antique hours are seen,
Without all ornament, itself, and true,
Making no summer of another's green,
Robbing no old to dress his beauty new;
And him as for a map doth nature store,
To show false art what beauty was of yore.

Those parts of thee that the world's eye doth view,
Want nothing that the thought of hearts can mend;
All tongues (the voice of souls) give thee that due,
Uttering bare truth, even so as foes commend.
Thine outward thus with outward praise is crown'd;
But those same tongues that give thee so thine own.
In other accents do this praise confound,
By seeing farther than the eye hath shown.
They look into the beauty of thy mind,
And that, in guess, they measure by thy deeds; [and Then (churls) their thoughts, although their eyes were
To thy fair flower add the rank smell of weeds:
But why thy odour matcheth not thy show,
The solveis this;—that thou dost common grow

SONNETS.

LXX.
That thou art blam'd shall not be thy defect,
For slander's mark was ever yet the fair;
The ornament of beauty is suspect,
A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest air.
So thou be good, slander doth but approve,
Thy worth the greater, being woo'd of time;
For canker vice the sweetest buds doth love,
And thou present'st a pure unstained prime.
Thou hast past by the ambush of young days,
Either not assail'd, or victor being charged;
Yet this thy praise cannot be so thy praise,
To tie up envy, evermore enlarged:
If some suspect of ill mask'd not thy show,
Then, thou alone kingdoms of hearts shouldst owe.

LXXI.
No longer mourn for me when I am dead,
Than you shall hear the surly sullen bell
Give warning to the world that I am fled
From this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell:
Nay, if you read this line, remember not
The hand that writ it: for I love you so,
That I in your sweet thoughts would be forgot,
If thinking on me then should make you woe.
O! if (I say) you look upon this verse,
When I perhaps compounded am with clay,
Do not so much as my poor name rehearse,
But let your love even with my life decay;
Lest the wise world should look into your moan,
And mock you with me after I am gone.

LXXII.
O! lest the world should task you to recite
What merit liv'd in me, that you should love,
After my death, dear love, forget me quite,
For you in me can nothing worthy prove;
Unless you would devise some virtuous lie,
To do more for me than mine own desert,
And hang more praise upon deceased I,
Then nigard truth would willingly impart.
O! lest your true love may seem false in this,
That for your love speak well of me untrue,
My name be buried where my body is,
And live no more to shame nor me nor you.
For I am sham'd by that which I bring forth,
And so should you, to love things nothing worth.

LXXIII.
That time of year thou may'st in me behold,
When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang
Upon those boughs which shake against the cold,
Bare ruin'd choirs, where late the sweet birds sang.
In me thou seest the twilight of such day
As after sun-set fadeth in the west,
Which by and by black night doth take away,
Death's second self, that seals up all in rest:
In me thou seest the glowing of such fire,
That on the ashes of his youth doth lie,
As death's bed wherein it must expire,
Consum'd with that which it was nourish'd by. [strong,
This thou perceiv'st, which makes thy love more
To love that well which thou must leave ere long:

LXXIV.
But be contented: when that fell arrest
Without all bail shall carry me away,
My life hath in this line some interest,
Which for memorial still with thee shall stay.
When thou reviewest this, thou dost review
The very part was consecrate to thee.
The earth can have but earth, which is his due;
My spirit is thine, the better part of me:
So then thou hast but lost the dregs of life,
The prey of worms, my body being dead;
The coward conquest of a wrench's knife,
Too base of thee to be remember'd.
The worth of that is that which it contains,
And that is this, and this with thee remains

LXXV.
So are you to my thoughts, as food to life,
Or as sweet-season'd showers are to the ground,
And for the peace of you I hold such strike
As 'twixt a miser and his wealth is found:
Now proud as an enjoyer, and anon
Doubling the filing age will steal his treasure:
Now counting best to be with you alone,
Then better'd that the world may see my pleasure
Sometime all full with feasting on your sight,
And by and by clean starved for a look;
Possessing or pursuing no delight,
Save what is had or must from you be took
Thus do I pine and surfeit day by day;
Or glutting on all, or all away.

LXXVI.
Why is my verse so barren of new pride,
So far from variation or quick change?
Why, with the time, do I not glance aside
To new-found methods and to compounds strange?
Why write I still all one, ever the same,
And keep invention in a noted weed,
That every word doth almost tell my name,
Showing their birth, and where they did proceed?
O! know, sweet love, I always write of you,
And you and love are still my argument;
So, all my best is dressing old words new,
Spending again what is already spent:
For as the sun is daily new and old,
So is my love, still telling what is told.

LXXVII.
Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties weari,
Thy dial how thy precious minutes waste;
The vacant leaves thy mind's imprint will bear,
And of this book this learning may'st thou taste:
The wrinkles which thy glass will truly show,
Of mouthed graves will give thee memory;
Thou by thy dial's shady stealth may'st know
Time's thievish progress to eternity.
Look, what thy memory cannot contain,
Commit to these waste blanks, and thou shalt find
Those children nurs'd, deliver'd from thy brain,
To take a new acquaintance of thy mind.
These offices, so oft as thou wilt look,
Shall profit thee, and much enrich thy book.

LXXVIII.
So oft have I invok'd thee for my muse,
And found such fair assistance in my verse,
As every alien pen hath got my use,
And under thee their poesy disperse;
Thine eyes that taught the dumb to high to sing,
And heavy ignorance aloft to fly
Have added feathers to the learned's wing,
And given grace a double majesty.
Yet be most proud of that which I compile,
Wist, my influence is thine, and born of thee:
In others' works thou dost but mend the style,
And arts with thy sweet graces grace'd be;
But thou art all my art, and dost advance
As high as learning my rude ignorance.

LXXXIX.

Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid,
My verse alone had all thy gentle grace;
But now my gracious numbers are decay'd,
And my sick muse doth give another place.

grant, sweet love, thy lovely argument
Deserves the travail of a worthier pen;
Yet what of thee thy poet doth invent,
He robs thee of, and pays it thee again.

He lends thee virtue, and he stole that word
From thy behaviour; beauty doth he give,
And found it in thy cheek; he can afford
No praise to thee but what in thee doth live.

Then, thank him not for that which he doth say,
Since what he owes thee, thou thyself dost pay.

LXXX.

O! how I faint when I do you write,
Knowing a better spirit doth use your name,
And in the praise thereof spends all his might,
To make me tongue-tied, speaking of your fame:

But since your worth (wide as the ocean is)
The humble as the proudest sail doth bear,
My saucy bark, inferior far to his,
On your broad main doth wilfully appear.

Your shallowest help will hold me up aloft,
Whilst he upon your soundless deep doth ride;
Or, being wreck'd, I am a worthless boat,
He of tall building, and of goodly pride:

Then, if he thrive, and I be cast away,
The worst was this—my love was my decay.

LXXXI.

Or I shall live your epitaph to make,
Or you survive when I in earth am rotten:
From hence your memory death cannot take,
Although in me each part will be forgotten.

Your name from hence immortal life shall have,
Though I, once gone, to all the world must die:
The earth can yield me but a common grave,
When you entomb'd in men's eyes shall lie.

Your monument shall be my gentle verse,
Which eyes not yet created shall o'er-read;
And tongues to be your being shall rehearse,
When all the breathers of this world are dead;

You still shall live (such virtue hath my pen)
Where breath most breathes, even in the mouths of men.

After thou wert not married to my muse,
And, therefore, may'st without attain o'er-look
The dedicated words which writers use
Of their fair subject, blessing every book.

Thou art as fair in knowledge as in hue,
Finding thy worth a limit past my praise;
And therefore, art enforce'd to seek anew
Some fresher stamp of the time-bettering days.

And do so, love; yet when they have devis'd
What strained touches rhetoric can lend,
Thou truly fair, worth truly sympathiz'd
In true plain words, by thy true-telling friend;
And their gross painting might be better used
Where cheeks need blood: in thee it is abused.

LXXXIII.

I never saw that you did painting need,
And, therefore, to your fair no painting set;
I found, or thought I found, you did exceed
The barren tender of a poet's debt:

And, therefore, have I slept in your report,
That you yourself, being extant, well might show
How far a modern quill doth come too short,
Speaking of worth, what worth in you doth grow.

This silence for my sin you did impute,
Which shall be most my glory, being dumb;
For I impair not beauty being mute,
When others would give life, and bring a tomb.

There lives more life in one of your fair eyes,
Than both your poets can in praise devise.

LXXXIV.

Who is it that says most? which can say more,
Than this rich praise, that you alone are you?
In whose confines immured is the store,
Which should example where your equal grow.

Lean penury within that pen doth dwell,
That to his subject lends not some small glory:
But he that writes of you, if he can tell
That you are you, so dignifies his story,
Let him but copy what in you is writ,
Not making worse what nature made so clear,
And such a counterpart shall fame his wit,
Making his style admired every where.

You to your beautious blessings add a curse,
Being fond on praise, which makes your praises worse.

LXXXV.

My tongue-tied muse in manners holds her still,
While comments of your praise, richly compil'd,
Reserve their character with golden quilt,
And precious phrase by all the muse's skil'd.

I think good thoughts, whilst other write good words,
And, like unletter'd clerk, still cry "Amen!"
To every hymn that able spirit affords,
In polish'd form of well-refined pen.

Hearing you prais'd, I say, "'tis so, 'tis true,"
And to the most of praise add something more;
But that is in my thought, whose love to you,
Though words come hindmost, holds his rank before:
Then, others for the breath of words respect,
May for my dumb thoughts, speaking in effect.

LXXXVI.

Was it the proud full sail of his great verse,
Bound for the prize of all too precious you,
That did my ripe thoughts in my brain inhere,
Making their tomb the womb wherein they grew?
Was it his spirit, by spirits taught to write
Above a mortal pitch, that struck me dead?
No, neither he, nor his compeers by night
Giving him aid, my verse astonished:
He, nor that affable familiar ghost,
Which nightly gulls him with intelligence,
As victors of my silence cannot boast.
I was not sick of any fear from thence;
But when your countenance fill'd up his line,
Then lack'd I matter: that enfeebled mine.
LXXXVII.

Farewell: thou art too dear for my possessing,
And like enough thou know'st thy estimate:
The charter of thy worth gives thee releasing,
My bonds in these are all determinate.
For how do I hold thee, but by thy granting?
And for that riches where is my deserving?
The cause of this fair gift in me is wanting,
And so my patent back again is swerving.
Thyself thou gav'st, thy own worth then not knowing,
Or me, to whom gav'st it, else mistaking;
So thy great gift, upon misprision growing,
Comes home again, on better judgment making.
Thus have I had thee, as a dream doth flatter,
In sleep a king, but waking, no such matter.

LXXXVIII.

When thou shalt be disposed to set me light,
And place my merit in the eye of scorn,
Upon thy side against myself I'll fight,
And prove thee virtuous, though thou art forsworn:
With mine own weakness being best acquainted,
Upon thy part I can set down a story
Of faults conceal'd, wherein I am attainted,
That thou, in losing me, shalt win much glory:
And I by this will be a gainer too;
For bending all my loving thoughts on thee,
The injuries that to myself I do,
Doing thee vantage, double vantage me.
Such is my love, to thee I so belong,
That for thy right myself will bear all wrong.

LXXXIX.

Say that thou didst forsoke me for some fault,
And I will comment upon that offence:
Speak of my lameness, and I straight will halt,
Against thy reasons making no defence.
Thou canst not, love, disgrace me half so ill,
To set a form upon desired change,
As I'll myself disgrace: knowing thy will,
I will acquaintance strangle, and look strange;
Be absent from thy walks: and in my tongue
Thy sweet beloved name no more shall dwell,
Lest I (too much profane) should do it wrong,
And haply of our old acquaintance tell.
For thee, against myself I'll vow debate,
For I must ne'er love him whom thou dost hate.

XC.

Then, hate me when thou wilt; if ever, now:
Now, while the world is bent my deeds to cross,
Join with the spite of fortune, make me bow,
And do not drop in for an after loss.
Ah! do not, when my heart hath scap'd this sorrow,
Come in the rearward of a conquer'd woe;
Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,
To linger out a purpose o'erthrown.
If thou wilt leave me, do not leave me last,
When other petty griefs have done their spite,
But in the onset come: so shall I taste
At first the very worst of fortune's might;
And other strains of woe, which now seem woe,
Compar'd with loss of thee, will not seem so.

XCI.

Some glory in their birth, some in their skill,
Some in their wealth, some in their body's force:
Some in their garments, though new-fangled ill:
Some in their hawks and hounds, some in their horse
And every humour hath his adjunct pleasure,
Wherein it finds a joy above the rest:
But these particulars are not my measure:
All these I better in one general best.
Thy love is better than high birth to me,
Richer than wealth, prouder than garments' cost.
Of more delight than hawks or horses be:
And having thee, of all men's pride I boast:
Wretched in this alone, that thou may'st take
All this away, and me most wretched make.

XCI.

But do thy worst to steal thyself away,
For term of life thou art assured mine;
And life no longer than thy love will stay,
For it depends upon that love of thine:
Then, need I not to fear the worst of wrongs,
When in the least of them my life hath end.
I see a better state to me belongs
Than that which on thy humour doth depend.
Thou canst not vex me with insconstant mind;
Since that my life on thy revolt doth he.
O! what a happy title do I find,
Happy to have thy love, happy to die:
But what's so blessed fair that tears no blot?
Thou may'st be false, and yet I know it not.

XCV.

So shall I live, supposing thou art true,
Like a deceived husband; so love's face
May still seem love to me, though alter'd new:
Thy looks with me, thy heart in other place;
For there can live no hatred in thine eye;
Therefore, in that I cannot know thy change.
In many's looks the false heart's history
Is writ in moods, and frowns, and wrinkles strange;
But heaven in thy creation did decree,
That in thy face sweet love should ever dwell;
What'eer thy thoughts or thy heart's workings be,
Thy looks should nothing thence but sweetness tell.
How like Eve's apple doth thy beauty grow,
If thy sweet virtue answer not thy show!

XCVI.

They that have power to hurt, and will do none,
That do not do the thing they most do show,
Who, moving others, are themselves as stone,
Unmoved, cold, and to temptation slow;
They rightly do inherit heaven's graces,
And husband nature's riches from expense;
They are the lords and owners of their faces,
Others but stewards of their excellence.
The summer's flower is to the summer sweet,
Though to itself it only live and die;
But if that flower with base infection meet,
The basest weed outbraves his dignity.
For sweetest things turn sourest by their deeds;
Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.

XCVII.

How sweet and lovely dost thou make the shame
Which, like a canker in the fragrant rose,
Doth spot the beauty of thy budding name?
O, in what sweets dost thou thy sins enclose?
That tongue that tells the story of thy days
(Making lascivious comments on thy sport)
Cannot dispraise but in a kind of praise.
SONNETS.

Naming thy name blesses an ill report,
O! what a mansion have those vices got,
Which for their habitacion chose out thee,
Where beauty's veil doth cover every blot,
And all things turn to fair that eyes can see!
Take heed, dear heart, of this large privilege;
The hardest knife ill us'd doth lose his edge.

XCVI.

Some say, thy fault is youth, some wantonness;
Some say, thy grace is youth, and gentle sport;
Both grace and faults are lov'd of more and less:
Thou mak'st faults graces that to thee resort.
As on the finger of a throned queen
The basest jewel will be well esteem'd,
So are those errors that in thee are seen
To truths translated, and for true things deem'd.
How many lambs might the stern wolf betray,
If like a lamb he could his looks translate?
How many gazers mightst thou lead away,
If thou wouldest use the strength of all thy state?
But do not so; I love thee in such sort,
As thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

XCVII.

How like a winter hath my absence been
From thee, the pleasure of the fleeting year!
What freezings have I felt, what dark days seen,
What old Decembre's bareness every where!
And yet this time remov'd was summer's time,
The teaming autunn, big with rich increase,
Bearing the wanton burden of the prime,
Like widow'd wombs after their lords' decease:
Yet this abundant issue seem'd to me
But hope of orphans, and unfather'd fruit;
For summer and his pleasures wait on thee,
And, thou away, the very birds are mute;
Or, if they sing, 'tis with so dull a cheer,
That leaves look pale, dreading the winter's near.

XCVIII.

From you have I been absent in the spring,
When proud-pied April, dress'd in all his trim,
Hath put a spirit of youth in every thing,
That heavy Saturn laugh'd and leapt with him:
Yet nor the lays of birds, nor the sweet smell
Of different flowers in odour and in hue,
Could make me any summer's story tell,
Or from their proud lap pluck them where they grew:
Nor did I wonder at the lil'y's white,
Nor praise the deep vermilion in the rose;
They were but sweet, but figures of delight,
Drawn after you; thou pattern of all those.
Yet seem'd it winter still, and, you away,
As with your shadow I these did play:

XCIX.

The forward violet thus did I chide:—
Sweet thief, whene'er thou steal'st thy sweet that
It not from my love's breath? the purple pride [smells,
Which on thy soft cheek for complexion dwells,
In my love's veins thou hast too grossly dyed.
The lily I condemn'd for thy hand,
And buds of marjoram had stol'n thy hair:
The roses fearfully on thorns did stand,
One blushing shame, another white despair;
A third, nor red nor white, had stolen of both,
And to this robbery had annex'd thy breath;
But, for his theft, in pride of all his growth
A vengeful canker eat him up to death.
More flowers I noted, yet I none could see,
But sweet or colour it had stolen from thee.

C.

Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so long
To speak of that which gives thee all thy might?
Spend'st thou thy fury on some worthless song,
Darkening thy power to lend base subjects light?
Return, forgetful Muse, and straight redeem
In gentle numbers time so idly spent:
Sing to the ear that doth thy lays esteem,
And gives thy pen both skill and argument.
Rise, rosy Muse, my love's sweet face survey
If Time have any wrinkle graven there;
If any, be a satire to decay,
And make Time's spoils despised every where.
Give my love fame faster than Time wastes life;
So thou prevent'st his seythe, and crooked knife.

CI.

O truant Muse! what shall thy amends
For thy neglect of truth in beauty dyed?
Both truth and beauty on my love depends;
So dost thou too, and therein dignify.
Make answer, Muse: wilt thou not haply say,
"Truth needs no colour, with his colour fix'd;
Beauty no pencil, beauty's truth to lay;
But best's best, if never intermix'd."
Because he needs no praise, wilt thou be dumb?
Excuse not silence so; for 't lies in thee
To make him much out-live a gilded tomb,
And be praised of ages yet to be.
Then, do thy office, Muse: I teach thee how
To make him seem long hence as he shows now.

CII.

My love is strengthen'd, though more weak in seeming
I love not less, though less the show appear:
That love is merchandiz'd, whose rich esteeming
The owner's tongue doth publish every where.
Our love was new, and then but in the spring,
When I was wont to greet it with my lays,
As Philomel in summer's front doth sing,
And stops his pipe in growth of riper days:
Not that the summer is less pleasant now,
Than when her mournful hymns did hush the night.
But that wild music burdens every bough,
And sweet grown common lose their dear delight.
Therefore, like he I sometime hold my tongue,
Because I would not dazzle you with my song.

CIII.

Alack! what poverty my muse brings forth,
That having such a scope to show her pride,
The argument, all bare, is of more worth,
Than when it hath my added praise beside
O! blame me not, if I no more can write:
Look in your glass, and there appears a face,
That over-goes my blunt invention quite,
Dulling my lines, and doing me disgrace.
Woe it were sinful, then, straining to mend,
To mar the subject that before was well?
For to no other pass my verses tend,
Than of your graces and your gifts to tell,
And more, much more, than in my verse can sit.
Your own glass shows you, when you look in it.
SONNETS.

CIV.
To me, fair friend, you never can be old,
For as you were, when first your eye I ey'd,
Such sees your beauty still. Three winters cold
Have from the forest shook three summers' pride:
Three beauteous springs to yellow autumn turn'd,
In process of the seasons have I seen:
Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burn'd,
Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are green.
Ah! yet dothe beauty, like a dial hand,
Steal from his figure, and no pace perceived:
So your sweet hue, which methinks still doth stand,
Hath motion, and mine eye may be deceived:
For fear of which, hear this, thou age unbred.—
Ere you were born was beauty's summer dead.

CV.
Let not my love be call'd idolatry,
Nor my beloved as an idol show,
Since all alike my songs and praises be,
To one, of one, still such, and ever so.
Kind is my love to-day, to-morrow kind,
Still constant in a wondrous excellence;
Therefore, my verse to constancy confin'd,
One thing expressing, leaves out difference.
Fair, kind, and true, is all my argument,
Fair, kind, and true, varying to other words;
And in this change is my invention spent.
Three themes in one, which wondrous scope affords.
Fair, kind, and true, have often liv'd alone,
Which three, till now, never kept seat in one.

CVI.
When in the chronicle of wasted time
I see descriptions of the fairest wights,
And beauty making beautiful old rhyme,
In praise of ladies dead, and lovely knights;
Then, in the blazon of sweet beauty's best,
Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow,
I see their antique pen would have express'd
Even such a beauty as you master now.
So all their praises are but prophecies
Of this our time, all you prefiguring;
And for they look'd but with divining eyes,
They had not skill enough your worth to sing:
For we, which now behold these present days,
Have eyes to wonder, but lack tongues to praise.

CVII.
Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul
Of the wide world, dreaming on things to come,
Can yet the lease of my true love control,
Suppos'd as forfeit to a conjin'd doom.
The mortal moon hath her eclipse endur'd,
And the sad augurs mock their own presage;
Incertainties now crown themselves assur'd,
And peace proclaims olives of endless age.
Now, with the drops of this most balmie time
My love looks fresh, and death to me subscribes,
Since, spite of him, I'll live in this poor rhyme,
While he insults o'er dull and speechless tribes:
And thou in this shall find thy monument,
When tyrants' crests, and tombs of brass are spent.

CVIII.
What's in the brain that ink may character,
Which hath not figur'd to thee my true spirit?
What's new to speak, what now to register,
That may express my love, or thy dear merit?
Nothing, sweet boy; but yet, like prayers divine,
I must each day say o'er the very same,
Counting no old thing old, thou mine, I thine.
Even as when first I hallow'd thy fair name
So that eternal love, in love's fresh case,
Weighs not the dust and injury of age;
Nor gives to necessary wrinkles place,
But makes antiquity for aye his page.
Finding the first conceit of love there bred,
Where time and outward form would show it dea.

CIX.
Oh! never say that I was false of heart,
Though absence seem'd my flame to qualify.
As easy might I from myself depart,
As from my soul, which in thy breast doth lie.
That is my home of love: if I have rang'd,
Like him that travels, I return again,
Just to the time, not with the time exchang'd;
So that myself bring water for my stain.
Never believe, though in my nature reign'd
All faultiness that besiege all kinds of blood,
That it could so preposterously be stain'd,
To leave for nothing all thy sum of good;
For nothing this wide universe I call,
Save thou, my Rose; in it thou art my all.

CX.
Alas! 'tis true, I have gone here and there,
And made myself a motley to the view:
Gor'd mine own thoughts, sold cheap what is most dear
Made old offences of affections new;
Most true it is, that I have look'd on truth
Askance and strangely; but, by all above,
These blenches gave my heart another youth,
And worse essays prov'd thee my best of love.
Now all is done, save what shall have no end:
Mine appetite I never more will grind
On never proof, to try an older friend,
A god in love, to whom I am confin'd.
Then, give me welcome, next my heaven the best.
Even to thy pure, and most most loving breast.

CXI.
O! for my sake do you with fortune chide,
The guilty goddess of my harmful deeds,
That did not better for my life provide
Than public means, which public manners breeds
Thence comes it that my name receives a brand;
And almost thence my nature is subdu'd
To what it works in, like the dye's hand.
Pity me, then, and wish I were renew'd,
Whilst, like a willing patient, I will drink
Potions of ey'sel' against my strong infection;
No bitterness that I will bitter think,
Nor double penance, to correct correction.
Pity me, then, dear friend, and I assure ye,
Even that your pity is enough to cure me.

CXII.
Your love and pity doth th' impression fill
Which vulgar scandal stamp'd upon my brow;
For what care I who calls me well or ill.
So you o'er-greet my bad, my good allow?
You are my all-the-world, and I must strive
To know my shame's and praises from your tongue
None else to me, nor I to none alive,
To blest is a start from. 1 have: in old eds. Tyrwhitt made the change. 1 vinegar.
SONNETS.

That my steel'd sense or changes, right or wrong,
In so profound abyss I throw all care
Of others' voices, that my adder's sense
To critic and to flatterer stopped are.
Mark how with my neglect I do dispense —
You are so strongly in my purpose bred,
That all the world besides methinks they are dead.

CXIII.
Since I left you mine eye is in my mind,
And that which governs me to go about
Doth part his function, and is partly blind,
Seems seeing, but effectually is out;
For it no form delivers to the heart
Of bird, of flower, or shape, which it doth latch.\(^1\)
Of his quick objects hath the mind no part,
Nor his own vision holds what it doth catch;
For if it see the rudst or gentlest sight,
The most sweet favour, or deformest creature,
The mountain or the sea, the day or night,
The crow or dove, it shapes them to your feature:
Incapable of more, replete with you,
My most true mind thus maketh mine untrue.\(^2\)

CXIV.
Or whether doth my mind, being crown'd with you,
Drink up the monarch's plague, this flattery?
Or whether shall I say, my eye saith true,
And that your love taught it this alchemy,
To make, of monsters and things indigest,
Such cherubins as your sweet self resemble,
Creating every bad a perfect best,
As fast as objects to his beams assemble?
O! it is the first; 'tis flattery in my seeing,
And my great mind most kingly drinks it up;
Mine eye well knows what with his gust is greening,
And to his palate doth prepare the eup:
If it be poison'd, 't is the lesser sin
That mine eye loves it, and doth first begin.

CXV.
Those lines that I before have writ do lie,
Even those that said I could not love you dearer;
Yet then my judgment knew no reason why
My most full flame should afterwards burn clearer.
But reason's time, whose million accidents
Creep in 'twixt vows, and change decrees of kings,
Tan sacred beauty, blent the sharpst intents,
Divert strong minds 't the course of altering things;
Alas! why, fearing of time's tyranny,
Might I not then say, "now I love you best,"
When I was certain o'er incertainty,
Crowning the present, doubting of the rest?
Love is a babe; then, might I not say so,
To give full growth to that which still doth grow?

CXVI.
Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impediments: love is love not love,
Which alters when it alteration finds,
Or melts with the remover to remove:
O no! it is an ever-fix'd mark,
That looks on tempests, and is never shaken;
It is the star to every wandering bark,
Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.
Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks
Within his bending sickle compass come;
Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
But bears it out even to the edge of doom.
If this be error, and upon me proved,
I never writ, nor no man ever loved.

CXVII.
Accuse me thus: that I have reanted all
Wherein I should your great deserts repay,
Forgot upon your dearest love to call,
Whereeto all bonds do tie me day by day;
That I have frequent been with unknown minds.
And given to time your own dear-purchased right;
That I have hoisted sail to all the winds
Which should transport me farthest from your sight
Book both my wilfullness and errors down,
And on just proof surprizze accumulate;
Bring me within the level of your renown,
But shoot not at me in your wakend hate,
Since my appeal says, I did strive to prove
The constancy and virtue of your love.

CXVIII.
Like as, to make our appetites more keen,
With eager* compounds we our palate urge;
As, to prevent our maladies unseen,
We seeken to shun sickness when we purge;
Even so, being full of your ne'er-dying sweetness,
To bitter sauces did I frame my feeding;
And, sick of welfare, found a kind of ineasen
To be discas'd, ere that there was true needing.
Thus policy in love, 't anticipate
The ills that were not, grew to faults assur'd,
And brought to medicin a healthful state,
Which, rank of goodness, would by ill be cur'd;
But thence I learn, and find the lesson true,
Drugs poison him that so fell sick of you.

CXIX.
What potions have I drunk of syren tears,
Distill'd from limbeeks foul as hell within,
Applying fears to hopes, and hopes to fears,
Still losing when I saw myself to win!
What wretched errors hath my heart committed,
Whilst it hath thought itself so blessed never!
How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted
In the distraction of this madding fever!
O benefit of ill! now I find true
That better is by evil still make better;
And sin'd love, when it is built anew,
Grows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.
So I return rebuk'd to my content,
And gain by ill thrice more than I have spent.

CXX.
That you were once unkind befriended me now,
And for that sorrow, which I then did feel,
Needs must I under my transgression bow,
Unless my nerves were brass or hammer'd steel.
For if you were by my unkindness shaken,
As I by yours, you have pass'd a hell of time;
And I, a tyrant, have no leisure taken
To weigh how once I suffer'd in your crime.
O! that our night of woe might have remember'd
My deepest sense, how hard true sorrow hits;
And soon to you, as you to me, then tender'd
The humble salve which wounded bosoms fits!
But that your treaspow now becomes a fee:
Mine ransoms yours, and yours must ransom me

\(^1\) methinks y' are dead: in old cop. Dyce omits "they"
\(^2\) lack: in old eds. Malone made the change.
\(^\ast\) Used as a substantive
CXXI.

What is better to be vile, than vile esteemed,
When not to be receives reproach of being:
And the just pleasure lost, which is so deemed,
Not by our feeling, but by others' seeing:
For why should others' false adulate eyes
Give satisfaction to my sportive blood?
Or on my frailties why are trailer spies,
Which in their wills count bad what I think good?
No, I am that I am; and they that level
At my abuses, reckon up their own:
I may be straight, though they themselves be bevel.
By their rank thoughts my deeds must not be shown;
Unless this general evil they maintain,
All men are bad, and in their badness reign.

CXXII.

Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain
Full character'd with lasting memory,
Which shall above that idle rank remain,
Beyond all date, even to eternity;
Or, at the least, so long as brain and heart
Have faculty by nature to subsist;
Till each to rase'd oblivion yield his part
Of thee, thy record never can be miss'd.
That poor retention could not so much hold,
Nor need I tally thee dear love to score;
Therefore to give them from me was I bold,
To trust those tables that receive thee more:
To keep an adjunct to remember thee,
Were to import forgetfulness in me.

CXXIII.

No! Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change:
Thy pyramids, built up with newer might,
To me are nothing novel, nothing strange;
They are but dressings of a former sight.
Our dates are brief, and therefore we admire
What thou dost foist upon us that is old,
And rather make them born to our desire,
Than think that we before have heard them told.
Thy registers and thee I both defy,
Not wondering at the present, nor the past;
For thy records and what we see do lie,
Made more or less by thy continual haste.
This I do vow, and this shall ever be
I will be true, despite thy seythe and thee.

CXXIV.

If my dear love were but the child of state,
It might for fortune's bastard be unfathered,
As subject to time's love, or to time's hate,
Weeds among weeds, or flowers with flowers gathered.
No, it was builded far from accident;
It suffers not in smiling pomp, nor falls
Under the blow of thrall'd discontent;
Where'to th' inviting time our fashion calls:
It fears not policy, that heretic,
Which works on leaves of short number'd hours,
But all alone stands hugely politic,
That it nor grows with heat, nor drowsens with showers.
To this I witness call the fole of time,
Which die for goodness, who have liv'd for crime.

CXXV.

Wrote 't aught to me I bore the canopy,
With my extern the outward honouring
Or laid great bases for eternity,

Which prove more short than waste or ru'in?
Have I not seen dwellers on form and eavour
Lose all, and more, by paying too much rent,
For compound sweet for going simple savour,
Pitiful thrivers, in their gaz'ing spent?
No: let me be obsequious in thy heart,
And take thou my oblation, poor but free,
Which is not mix'd with seconds, knows no art,
But mutual render, only me for thee.
Hence, thou suborn'd informer! a true soul,
When most impeach'd, stands least in thy control

CXXVI.

O thou, my lovely boy! who in thy power
Dost hold Time's fickle glass, his sicken. hour:
Who hast by wasting grown, and therein show'st
Thy lovers withering, as thy sweet self grow'st.
If nature, sovereign mistress over wrack,
As thou goest onwards still will pluck thee back,
She keeps thee to this purpose, that her skill
May time disgrace, and wretched minutes kill.
Yet fear her, O thou minion of her pleasure!
She may detain, but not still keep her treasure:
Her audit, though delay'd, answer'd must be,
And her quietus is to render thee.

CXXVII.

In the old age black was not counted fair,
Or if it were, it bore not beauty's name;
But now is black beauty's successive heir,
And beauty slander'd with a bastard shame;
For since each hand hath put on nature's power,
Fairest the soul with art's false borrow'd face,
Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy bower,
But is profan'd, if not lives in disgrace.
Therefore, my mistress' eyes are raven black,
Her eyes so suited; and they mourners seem
At such, who, not born fair, no beauty lack,
Slandering creation with a false esteem:
Yet so they mourn, becoming of their woe,
That every tongue says, beauty should look so.

CXXVIII.

How oft, when thou, my music, music playest,
Upon that blessed wood, whose motion sounds
With thy sweet fingers, when thou gently swayest
The wiry concord that mine ear confounds,
Do I envy those jacks,\(^1\) that nimble leap
To kiss the tender inward of thy hand,
Whilst my poor lips, which should that harvest reap.
At the wood's boldness by thee blushing stand,
To be so tickled, they would change their state
And situation with those dancing chips,
O'er whom thy fingers walk with gentle gait,
Making dead wood more bless'd than living limbs;
Since saucy jacks so happy are in this.
Give them thy fingers, me thy lips to kiss.

CXXIX.

Th' expense of spirit in a waste of shame
Is lust in action; and till action, lust
Is peril'd, murderous, bloody, full of blame,
Savage, extreme, rude, cruel, not to trust;
Enjoy'd no sooner but despised straight;
Past reason hunted, and no sooner had,
Past reason hated, as a swallow'd bait,
On purpose laid to make the taker mad:
Mad in pursuit, and in possession so;
Had, having, and in quest to have extreme:

---

\(^1\) The keys of the virginal.
A bliss in proof,—and prov'd, a very woe;
Before, a joy prop'd: behind, a dream.
All this the world well knows, yet none knows well
To shun the heaven that leads men to this hell.

CXXX.
My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun;
Coral is far more red than her lips' red:
If snow be white, why then her breasts are dun;
If hairs be wires, black wires grow on her head.
I have seen roses damask'd, red and white,
But no such roses see I in her cheeks;
And in some perfumes is there more delight
Than in the breath that from my mistress reeks.
I love to hear her speak, yet well I know
That music hath a far more pleasing sound:
I grant I never saw a goddess go;
My mistress, when she walks, treads on the ground.
And yet, by heaven, I think my love as rare
As any she belied with false compare.

CXXXI.
Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art,
As those whose beauties proudly make them cruel;
For well thou know'st, to my dear doating heart
Thou art the fairest and most precious jewel.
Yet, in good faith, some say that she be hold,
Thy face hath not the power to make love groan:
To say they err I dare not be so bold,
Although I swear it to myself alone.
And, to be sure that is not false I swear,
A thousand groans, but thinking on thy face,
One on another's neck, do witness hear,
Thy black is fairest in my judgment's place.
In nothing art thou black, save in thy deeds,
And thence this slander, as I think, proceeds.

CXXXII.
Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me,
Knowing thy heart torments me with disdain,
Have put on black, and loving mourners be,
Looking with pretty ruth upon my pain.
And, truly, not the morning sun of heaven
Better becomes the grey cheek of the east,
Nor that full star that ushers in the even
Doth half that glory to the sober west,
As those two mourning eyes become thy face,
O! let it, then, as well beseech thy heart
To mourn for me, since mourning doth thee grace,
And suit thy pity like in every part;
Then will I swear, beauty herself is black,
And all they foul that thy complexion lack.

CXXXIII.
Beshrow that heart, that makes my heart to groan
For that deep wound it gives my friend and me!
Is't not enough to torture me alone,
But slave to slavery my sweet'st friend must be?
Me from myself thy cruel eye hath taken,
And my next self thou hast harder hast engrossed:
Of him, myself, and thee, I am forsaken;
A torment thrice threefold thou is to crossed.
Prison my heart in thy steel bosom's ward,
And, then, my friend's heart let my poor heart bail;
Woe, or keeps me, let my heart be his guard;
Thou canst not then use rigour in my jail:
And yet thou wilt; for I, being pent in thee,
Perforce am thine, and all that is in me.

CXXXIV.
So, now I have confess'd that he is thine,
And I myself am mortgage'd to thy will;
Myself I'll forfeit, so that other mine.
Thou wilt restore, to be my comfort still:
But thou wilt not, nor he will not be free,
For thou art covetous, and he is kind:
He learned but, surety-like, to write for me,
Under that bond that him as fast doth bind.
The statute* of thy beauty thou wilt take,
Thou usurer, that put'st forth all to use,
And sue a friend, came debtor for my sake;
So him I lose through my unkind abuse:
Him have I lost: thou hast both him and me.
He pays the whole, and yet am I not free.

CXXXV.
Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy Will,*
And Will to boot, and Will in over-plus;
More than enough am I, that vex thee still,
To thy sweet will making addition thus.
Wilt thou, whose will is large and spacious,
Not once vouchsafe to hide my will in thine?
Shall will in others seem right gracious,
And in my will no fair acceptance shine?
The sea, all water, yet receives rain still,
And in abundance addeth to his store:
So thou, being rich in Will, add to thy Will
One will of mine, to make thy large Will more
Let no unkind, no fair beseechers kill:
Think all but one, and me in that one Will.

CXXXVI.
If thy soul check thee that I come so near,
Swear to thy blind soul that I was thy Will,
And will, thy soul knows, is admitted there;
Thus far for love, my love'st, sweet, fulfill,
Will fulfill the treasure of thy love,
Ay, fill it full with wills, and my will one.
In things of great receipt with ease we prove,
Among a number one is reckoned none:
Then, in the number let me pass untold,
Though in thy stores' account I one must be;
For nothing hold me, so it please thee hold
That nothing me, a something sweet to thee:
Make but my name thy love, and love that still,
And then thou lov'st me,—for my name is Will.

CXXXVII.
Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine eyes
That they behold, and see not what they see?
They know what beauty is, see where it lies,
Yet what the best is, take the worst to be.
If eyes, corrupt by over-parzial looks,
Be anchor'd in the bay where all men ride,
Why of eyes' falsehood hast thou forged hooks,
Where to the judgment of my heart is tied?
Why should my heart think that a several plot,*
Which my heart knows the wide world's common place?
Or mine eyes seeing this, say, this is not,
To put fair truth upon so foul a face?
In things right true my heart and eyes have erred
And to this false plague are they now transferred.

1^ and proud and very woe: in old eds. Malone made the change.
2^ the Will: As there is in this and the next sonnet, as well as in 3^ a piece of ground which has been "common," or unclosed, but has 4^ s. Security.
5^ Whoever hath her wish, that
Sonnet cxliii, an obvious play upon the Christian name of the poet we have printed it exactly as it stands in the quarto, 1609, and as it probably stood in the manuscript from which it was printed.
CXXXVIII.

When my love swears that she is made of truth,
I do believe her, though I know she lies,
That she might think some untutor’d youth,
Unlearned in the world’s false subtleties.
Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
Although she knows my days are past the best,
Simly I credit her false-speaking tongue:
On both sides thus is simple truth suppress’d.
But wherefore says she not, she is unjust?
And wherefore say not I, that I am old?
O! love’s best habit is in seeming trust,
And age in love loves not to have years told:
Therefore I lie with her, and she with me.
And in our faults by lies we flatter’d be.

CXXXIX.

O! call not me to justify the wrong,
That thy unkindness lays upon my heart;
Wound me not with thine eye, but with thy tongue,
Use power with power, and slay me not by art.
Tell me thou lov’st elsewhere; but in my sight,
Dear heart, forbear to glance thine eye aside: [might
What need’st thou wound with ease of cunning, when thy
Is more than my o’er-press’d defence can bide?
Let me excuse thee: ah! my love well knows
Her pretty looks have been mine enemies,
And therefore from my face she turns her foes,
That they elsewhere might dart their injuries.
Yet do not so; but since I am near slain,
Kill me out-right with looks, and rid my pain.

CXL.

Be wise as thou art cruel; do not press
My tongue-tied patience with too much disdain;
Lost sorrow lend me words, and words express
The manner of my pity-wanting pain.
If it might teach thee wit, better it were,
Though not to love, yet, love, to tell me so;
As testy sick men, when their deaths be near,
No news but health from their physicians know:
For, if I should despair, I should grow mad,
And in my madness speak ill of thee;
Now this ill-wrestling world is grown so bad,
Mad slanderers by mad ears believed be.
That I may not be so, nor thou belied,
Bear thine eyes straight, though thy proud heart go

CXL1.

In faith I do not love thee with mine eyes,
For they in thee a thousand errors note;
But ’tis my heart that loves what they despise,
Who in despite of view is pleas’d to dot.
Nor are mine ears with thy tongue’s tune delighted;
Nor tender feeling, to base tongues prone,
Nor taste, nor smell, desire to be invited
To any sensual feast with thee alone:
But my five wits, nor my five senses can

Dissuade one foolish heart from serving thee,
Who leave unwis’d the likeliness of a man;
Thy proud heart’s slave and vassal wretched to be:
Only my plague thus far I count my gain,
That she that makes me sin awards me pain.

CXLII.

Love is my sin, and thy dear virtue hate,
Hate of my sin, grounded on sinful loving.
O! but with mine compare thou thine own state,
And thou shalt find it merits not reproving,
Or, if it do, not from those lips of thine,
That have profan’d their scarlet ornaments,
And seal’d false bonds of love as o’er as mine,
Robb’d others’ beds revenues of their rent.
Be it lawful I love thee, as thou lov’st those Whom thine eyes woo as mine importune thee:
Root pity in thy heart, that when it grows,
Thy pity may deserve to pitied be.
If thou dost seek to have what thou dost hide,
By self-example may’st thou be denied

CXLIII.

Lo! as a careful housewife runs to catch
One of her feather’d creatures broke away,
Sets down her babe, and makes all swift dispatch
In pursuit of the thing she would have stay;
Whilst her neglected child holds her in chase,
Cries to catch her whose busy care is bent
To follow that which flies before her face,
Not prizing her poor infant’s discontent:
So run’st thou after that which flies from thee,
Whilst I, thy babe, chace thee with a look behind;
But if thou catch thy hope, turn back to me,
And play the mother’s part, kiss me, be kind:
So will I pray that thou may’st have thy Will
If thou turn back, and my loud crying still.

CXLIV.

Two loves I have of comfort and despair.
Which like two spirits do suggest me still:
The better angel is a man, right fair,
The worse spirit a woman, cold’r ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempest my better angel from my side,
And would corrupt my saint to be a devil,
Wooing his purity with her soul pride.
And whether that my angel be turn’d fiend,
Suspect I may, yet not directly tell:
But being both from me, to both, each friend,
I could one angel in another’s hell:
Yet this shall I never know, but live in doubt,
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

CXLV.

Those lips that Love’s own hand did make,
Breath’d forth the sound that said, “I hate.”
To me that languish’d for her sake;
But when she saw my woeful state,
Straight in her heart did mercy come,
Chiding that tongue: that ever sweet
Was us’d in giving gentle doom,
And taught it thus anew to greet.
“I hate.” she alter’d with an end,
That follow’d it as gentle day.
Dost follow night, who, like a fiend,
From heaven to hell is thrown away:
“I hate!” from hate away she throw,
And say’d my life, saying—“not you.”

CXLVI.

Poor soul, the center of my sinful earth.
Fool’d by those rebel powers that thee array,
Why dost thou pine within, and suffer dearth,
Painting thy outward walls so costly gay?
Why so large cost, having so short a lease,
Don't thou upon thy fading mansion spend?
Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
Eat up thy charge? is this thy body's end?
Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss,
And let that pine to aggravate thy store:
Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross,
Within be fed, without be rich no more:
So shalt thou feed on death, that feeds on men,
And, death once dead, there's no more dying then.

CXLVII.
My love is as a fever, longing still
For that which longer nurseth the disease;
Feeding on that which doth preserve the ill,
Th' uncertain sickly appetite to please.
My reason, the physician to my love,
Angry that his prescrip'sions are not kept,
Hath left me, and I desperate now approve,
Desire is death, which physic did except.
Past cure I am, now reason is past care,
And frantic mad with ever-more unrest:
My thoughts and my discourse as mad men's are,
At random from the truth vainly express'd;
For I have sworn thee fair, and thought thee bright;
Who art as black as hell, as dark as night.

CXLVIII.
O me! what eyes hath love put in my head,
Which have no correspondence with true sight!
Or, if they have, where is my judgment fed,
That censureth falsely what they see aright?
If that be fair wherein my false eyes dote,
What mean the world to say it is not so?
If it be not, then love doth well desert,
Love's eye is not so true as all men's: no,
How can it? O! bow can love's eye be true,
That is so vex'd with watching and with tears?
No marvel, then, though I mistake my view;
The sun itself sees not, till heaven clears,
O cunning love! with tears thou keepest me blind,
Lest eyes well-seeing thy foul faults should find.

CXLIX.
Canst thou, O cruel! say, I love thee not.
When I, against myself, with thee partake?
Do I not think on thee, when I forget
Am of myself, all tyrant, for thy sake?
Who hateth thee that I do call my friend?
On whom frown'st thou that I do fawn upon?
Nay, if thou low'rt on me, do I not spend
Revenge upon myself with present morn?
What merit do I in myself respect,
That is so proud thy service to despise,
When all my best doth worship thy defect,
Commanded by the motion of thine eyes?
But, love, hate on, for now I know thy mind:
those that can see thou lov'st, and I am blind.

CL.
O! from what power hast thou this powerful might,
With insufficiency my heart to sway?
To make me give the lie to my true sight,
And swear that brightness doth not grace the day?
Whene'er hast thou this becoming of things ill,
That in the very refuse of thy deeds
There is such strength and warrantise of skill,
That in my mind thy worst all best exceeds?
Who taught thee how to make me love thee more,
The more I hear and see just cause of hate?

O! though I love what others do abhor,
With others thou shouldst not abhor my state:
If thy unworthiness rais'd love in me,
More worthy I to be belov'd of thee.

CLI.
Love is too young to know what conscience is;
Yet who knows not, conscience is born of love?
Then, gentle cheater, urge not my amiss,
Lest guilty of my faults thy sweet self prove:
For, thou betraying me, I do betray
My nobler part to my gross body's treason;
My soul doth tell my body that he may
Triumph in love; flesh stays no farther reason.
But rising at thy name, dost point out thee
As his triumphant prize. Proud of this pride,
He is contented thy poor drudge to be,
To stand in thy affairs: fall by thy side.
No want of conscience hold it, that I call
Her love, for whose dear love I rise and fall.

CLII.
In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn,
But thou art twice forsworn, to me love swearing;
In act thy bed-vow broke, and new faith torn,
In vowing new hate after new love bearing.
But why of two oaths' breach do I accuse thee,
When I break twenty? I am perjur'd most;
For all my vows are oaths but to misuse thee,
And all my honest faith in thee is lost:
For I have sworn deep oaths of thy deep kindness,
Oaths of thy love, thy truth, thy constancy;
And to enlighten thee, gave eyes to blindness,
Or made them swear against the thing they see;
For I have sworn thee fair: more perjur'd I,
To swear against the truth so foul a lie!

CLIII.
Cupid laid by his branch, and fell asleep:
A maid of Diana's this advantage found,
And his love-kindling fire did quickly steep
In a cold valley-fountain of that ground;
Which borrow'd from this holy fire of love
A dateless lively heat, still to endure,
And grew a seething bath, which yet men prove Against strange maladies a sovereign cure.
But at my mistress' eye love's brand new-fired,
The boy for trial needs would touch my breast;
I sick withal, the help of bath desired,
And thither hied, a sad dissembler guest,
But found no cure: the bath for my help lies
Where Cupid got new fire, my mistress' eyes.

CLIV.
The little Love-god lying once asleep,
Laid by his side his heart-inflaming brand,
Whilst many nymphs, that vow'd chaste life to keep
Came tripping by; but in her maiden hand
The fairest votary took up that fire
Which many legions of true hearts had warm'd
And so the general of hot desire
Was, sleeping, by a virgin hand disarm'd.
This brand she quenched in a cool well by,
Which from love's fire took heat perpetual.
Growing a bath, and healthful remedy
For men diseas'd; 'but I, my mistress' thrall,
Came there for cure, and this by that I prove,
Love's fire heats water, water cools not love.
A LOVER'S COMPLAINT

From off a hill whose cavern womb re-worded
A plaintful story from a sistering vale,
My spirits t' attend this double voice accorded,
And down I laid to list the sad-tune'd tale;
Ere long esp'y'd a fickle maid full pare,
Tearing of papers, breaking rings a-twine,
Storming her world with sorrow's wind and rain.

Upon her head a platted hive of straw,
Which fortified her visage from the sun,
Whereon the thought might think sometime it saw
The carcase of a beauty spent and done:
Time had not seyched all that youth begun,
Nor youth all quit: but, spite of heaven's fell rage,
Some beauty peep'd through lattice of sear'd age.

Of did she leave her napkin to her eyene,
Which on it conceived characters,
Laudering the silken figures in the brine
That season'd woe had pelleted in tears,
And often reading what contents it bears;
As often shrieking undistinguish'd woe
In clamours of all size, both high and low.

Sometimes her level'd eyes their carriage ride,
As they did battery to the spheres intend;
Sometimes, divert'd, their poor balls are tied
To the orb'd earth; sometimes they do extend
Their view right on; anon their gazes lend
To every place at once, and no where fix'd,
The mind and sight distracted commix'd.

Her hair, nor loose, nor tied in formal plat,
Proclaim'd in her a careless hand of pride;
For some, untuck'd, descend'd her sheav'd'd hat,
Hanging her pale and pined cheek beside;
Some in her threaden fillet still did bide,
And, true to bondage, would not break from thence,
Though slackly braided in loose negligence.

A thousand favours from a maund she drew
Of amber, crystal, and of bedded jet,
Which one by one she in a river throw,
Upon whose weeping margant she was set;
Like usury, applying wet to wet,
Or monarch's hands, that let not bounty fail
Where want cries "some," but where excess begs all.

Of folded schedules had she many a one,
Which she perus'd, sigh'd, tore, and gave the flood:
Crack'd many a ring of postel gold and bone,
Bidding them find their sepulchres in mud;
Found yet more letters sadly pen'd in blood,
With sleided'silk feat and affectedly
Esswath'd, and seal'd to curious secrecy.

These often bath'd she in her fluxive eyes,
And often kiss'd, and often 'gan' to tear,
Cry'd, O false blood! thou register of lies
What unapproved witness dost thou bear!
Ink would have seem'd more black and damned here
This said, in top of rage the lines she rents,
Big discontent so breaking their contents.

A reverend man that graz'd his cattle nigh,
Sometimes a blusterer, that the ruffle knew
Of court, of city, and had let go by
The swiftest hours, observed as they flew,
Towards this afflicted fancy hastily drew;
And, privileged by age, desires to know,
In brief, the grounds and motives of her woe.

So slides he down upon his grained bat,
And comely-distant sits he by her side;
When he again desires her, being sat,
Her grievance with his hearing to divide:
If that from him there may be aught applied,
Which may her suffering ecstasy assuage.
'T is promis'd in the charity of age.

Father, she says, though in me you behold
The injury of many a blazing hour,
Let it not tell your judgment I am old:
Not age, but sorrow, over me hath power:
I might as yet have been a spreading flower,
Fresh to myself, if I had self-applied
Love to myself, and to no love beside.

But woe is me! too early I attended
A youthful suit, it was to gain my grace:
O! one by nature's outwards so commended,
That maidens' eyes stuck over all his face:
Love lack'd a dwelling, and made him her place,
And when in his fair parts she did abide,
She was new lodg'd, and newly deified.

His browny locks did hang in crooked curls,
And every light occasion of the wind
Upon his lips their silken parcels hurl's;
What's sweet to do, to do will aptly find;
Each eye that saw him did enchant the mind,
For on his visage was in little drawn,
What largeness thinks in paradise was sawn.*

Small show of man was yet upon his chin:
His phoenix downs began but to appear,
Like unshorn velvet, on that termless skin.
Whose bars out-brag'd the web it seemed to wear,
Yet show'd his visage by that cost most dear,
And nice affections wavering stood in doubt
If best were as it was, or best without.

\footnotesize{1 Strane. 2 Basket. 3 Untwisted.—Bray. 4 gave: in old eds Bostell. 5 more: in old eds | Malone made the change. 6 The northern provincialism for some}
His qualities were beauteons as his form,
For maiden-tongued he was, and thereof free;
Yet, if men mov'd him, was he such a stern
As oft 'twixt May and April is to see,
When winds breathe sweet, unruly though they be,
His radeness so, with his author'd youth,
Did lively falsehood in a pride of truth.

Well could he ride, and often men would say,
"That horse his mettle from his rider takes!
Proud of subjection, noble by the sway,
[jaunes?"
What rounds, what bounds, what course, what step he
And controversy hence a question takes,
Whether the horse by him became his deed,
Or he his manage by the well-doing steed.

But quickly on this side the verdict went,
His real habitude gave life and grace
To appertaining and to ornament,
Accomplish'd in himself, not in his case:
All aids, themselves made fairer by their place,
Came for additions, yet their purpos'd trim
Piece'd not his grace, but were all grace'd by him.

So on the tip of his subbduing tongue,
All kind of arguments and question deep,
All replication prompt, and reason strong,
For his advantage still did wake and sleep:
To make the weeper laugh, the laughery weep,
He had the dialect and different skill,
Catching all passions in his craft of will:

That he did in the general bosom reign
Of young, of old: and sexes both enchanted,
To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain
In personal duty, following where he haunted:
Consents, bewitch'd, ere he desire have granted;
And dialogued for him what he would say,
Ask'd their own wills, and made their wills obey.

Many there were that did his picture get,
To serve their eyes, and in it put their mind:
Like tools that in th' imagination set
The goodly objects which abroad they find
Of lands and mansions, theirs in thought assign'd;
And labouring in more pleasures to bestow them,
Than the true gouty landlord which doth owe them.

So many have, that never touch'd his hand,
Sweetly suppos'd them mistress of his heart.
My woeful self, that did in freedom stand,
And was my own fee-simple, (not in part)
What with his art in youth, and youth in art,
Threw my affections in his charmed power,
Reserv'd the stalk, and gave him all my flower.

Yet did I not, as some my equals did,
Demand of him, nor, being desir'd, yielded;
Finding myself in honour so forbid,
With safest distance I mine honour shielded.
Experience for me many balwars builded
Of proofs new-breaking, which remain'd the foil
Of this fa'ce jewel, and his amorous spoil.

But ah! who ever shunn'd by precedent
The destin'd ill she must herself assay?
Or forc'd examples, 'gainst her own content,
To put the by-pass'd perils in her way?
Counsel may stop a while what will not stay;

For when we rage, advice is often seen
By blunting us to make our wits more keen.

Nor gives it satisfaction to our blood,
That we must curb it upon others' proof,
To be forbid the sweets that seem so good,
For fear of harms that preach in our behalf.
O appetite, from judgment stand aloof!
The one a palate hath that needs will taste,
Though reason weep, and cry, "it is thy last."

For farther I could say, "this man's untrue!"
And knew the patterns of his foul beguiling;
Heard where his plants in others' orchards grew,
Saw how deceits were gilded in his smiling;
Knew vows were ever brokers to defiling;
Thought characters, and words, merely but art,
And bastard of his foul adulterate heart.

And long upon these terms I held my city,
Till thus he 'gan beseech me: "Gentle maid,
Have of my suffering youth some feeling pity,
And be not of my holy vows afraid:
That's to you sworn, to none was ever said;
For feasts of love I have been call'd unto,
Till now did ne'er invite, nor never vow

All my offences that abroad you see,
Are errors of the blood, none of the mind:
Love made them not: with quire's they may be,
Where neither party is nor true nor kind:
They sought their shame that so their shame did find,
And so much less of shame in me remains,
By how much of me their reproach contains.

Among the many that mine eyes have seen,
Not one whose flame my heart so much as warmed.
Or my affection put to the smallest teen.4
Or any of my pleasures ever charmed:
Harm have I done to them, but ne'er was harmed;
Kep hearts in livers, but mine own was free,
And reign'd, commanding in his monarchy.

Look here, what tributes wounded fancies sent me.
Of paled pearls, and rubies red as blood;
Figuring that they their passions likewise lent me
Of grief and blushes, aptly understood
In bloodless white and the enermos'd mood;
Effects of terror and dear modesty,
Encamp'd in hearts, but fighting outwardly.

And lo! behold these talents of their hair,
With twisted metal amorously impleac'd.4
I have receiv'd from many a several fair
(Their kind acceptance weepingly beseech'd)
With the anxiom'ed of fair genius enrich'd
And deep-brain'd sonnets, that did amplify
Each stone's dear nature, worth, and quality.

The diamond; why, 't was beautiful and hard,
Whereinto his invis'd properties did tend,
The deep-green emerald, in whose fresh regard
Weak sights their sickly radiance do amend;
The heaven-hued sapphire, and the opal blend
With objects manifold: each several stone,
With wit well blazon'd, smil'd, or made some moan.

Lo! all these trophies of affections hot,
Of pensiv'd and subdued desires the tender,
Nature hath charg’d me that I heard them not,
But yield them up where I myself must render;
That is, to you, my origin and ender:
For these, of force, must your oblations be,
Since I their altar, you enpatron me.

O! then, advance of yours that phraseless hand,
Whose white weighs down the airy scale of praise,
Take all these similes to your own command.
Hallow’d with sighs that burning lungs did raise.
What me, your minister, for you obeys,
Works under you: and to your audit comes
Their distract parcels in combined sums.

Lo! this device was sent me from a nun,
Or sister sanctified, of holiest note;
Which late her noble suit in court did shun,
Whose rarest havings made the blossoms’ dote:
For she was sought by spirits of richest coat,
But kept cold distance, and did thence remove,
To spend her living in eternal love.

But O! my sweet! what labour is’t to leave
The thing we have not, mastering what not strives?
Paling* the place which did no form receive;
Playing patient sports in unconstrained eyes;
She that her fame so to herself contrives,
The scars of battle scathed by the flight.
And makes her absence valiant, not her might.

O, pardon me, in that my boast is true!
The accident which brought me to her eye,
Upon the moment did her force subdue,
And now she would the caged cloister fly;
Religious love put out religion’s eye;
To not be tempted, would she be immur’d;* and
Now and to tempt all, liberty procure’d.

How mighty then you are, O hear me tell!
The broken bosoms that to me belong,
Have emptied all their fountains in my well,
And mine I pour your ocean all among:
I strong o’er them, and you o’er the being strong,
Must for your victory us all congest.
As compound love to physic your cold breast

My parts had power to charm a sacred sun,
Who, disciplin’d, I dieted* in grace,
Believ’d her eyes, when they t’ assail begun,
All vows and consecrations giving place.
O most p[76]etial love! vow, bond, nor space,
In thee hath neither sting, knot, nor confine.
For thou art all, and all things else are thine.

When thou impressest, what are precepts worth
Of stale example? When thou wilt inflame,
How coldly those impediments stand forth
Of wealth, of filial fear, law, kindred, fame?
Love’s arms are peace, ’gainst rule, ’gainst sense, ’gainst shame;
And sweetens, in the suffering pangs it bears,
The alocos of all forces, shocks, and fears.

Now, all these hearts that do on mine depend.
Feeling it break, with bleeding groans they pine;
And supplicant their sighs to you extend,
To leave the battery that you make against mine,
Lending soft audience to my sweet design,
And credent soul to that strong-bonded oath,
That shall prefer and undertake my truth.

This said, his watery eyes he did dismount.
Whose sights till then were level’d on my face;
Each check a river running from a font;
With brinish current downward flow’d apace.
O, how the channel to the stream gave grace!
Who, glaz’d with crystal, gate the growing roses
That flame through water which their hue inclose.

O father! what a hell of witchcraft lies
In the small orb of one particular tear;
But with the inundation of the eyes
What rocky heart to water will not wear?
What breast so cold that is not warmed here?
O! cleft effect! cold modesty, hot wrath,
Both fire from hence and chill extincture hath!

For lo! his passion, but an art of craft,
Even there resolv’d my reason into tears;
There my white stole of chastity I daff’d;
Shook off my sober guards, and civil fears:
Appear to him, as he to me appears,
All melting; though our drops this difference bore
His poison’d me, and mine did him restore.

In him a plenitude of subtle matter,
Applied to cautels, all strange forms receives,
Of burning blushes, or of weeping water,
Or swooning paleness; and he takes and leaves,
In either’s aptness, as it best deceives
To blush at speeches rank, to weep at woes,
Or to turn white, and swoon in tragedy shows:

That not a heart which in his level came,
Could scape the hail of his all-burting aim,
Showing fair nature is both kind and tame.
And veil’d in them, did win whom he would maim
Against the thing he sought he would exclaim,
When he most burn’d in heart-wish’d luxury.
He preach’d pure maid, and prais’d cold chastity

Thus, merely with the garment of a grace
The naked and concealed fiend he cover’d:
That th’ unexperienced gave the temple place,
Which, like a cherubin, above them hover’d.
Who, young and simple, would not be so lover’d?
Ah me! I felt; and yet do question make,
What I should do again for such a sake.

O, that infected moisture of his eye!
O, that false fire, which in his check so glow’d!
O, that fore’d thunders from his heart did fly!
O, that sad breath his spungy lungs bestowed!
O, all that borrow’d motion, seeming owed,
Would yet again betray the for’-betray’d,
And new pervert a reconciled maid!

THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM.

INTRODUCTION.

The Passionate Pilgrim By W. Shakespeare. At London Printed for W. Jaggard and are to be sold by W. Leake, at the Greyhound in Pains Churchyard. 1599," 16mo. 30 leaves.

The title-page first given to the edition of 1612 ran thus:—

"The Passionate Pilgrim, Or Certain Amorous Sonnets, between Venus and Adonis, newly corrected and augmented, By W. Shakespeare. The Third Edition. Whereunto is newly added two Lune-Epistles, the first from Paris to Hellen, and Hellen's answer backe againe to Paris. Printed by W. Jaggard. 1612." The title-page substituted for the above differs in no other respect but in the omission of "By W. Shakespeare."

In the following pages we have reprinted "The Passionate Pilgrim," 1599, as it came from the press of W. Jaggard, with the exception only of the orthography. Malone has quoted several portions of it: some because they were substantially repetitions of poems contained elsewhere, and others because they appeared to have been improperly assigned to Shakespeare: one piece, the last in the tract, is inserted at all in Bardfield's work, as was printed it in 1780, and no reason is assigned for rejecting it. We have given the whole, and in our notes we have stated the particular circumstances belonging to each piece, as there is reason to believe that no copy of the poems has come from the press of our great dramatist.

"The Passionate Pilgrim" was reprinted by W. Jaggard, in 1612, with additions, and the facts attending the publication of the two impressions are peculiar.

In 1595, Richard Barnfield put his name to a small collection of sonnets, entitled "The Encomion of Lady Peculia," which contained more than one poem attributed to Shakespeare in "The Passionate Pilgrim," 1599: the first was printed by John, and the last by William Jaggard. Boswell suggests, that John Jaggard in 1599 might have stolen Shakespeare's verses and attributed them to Barnfield; but the answer to this supposition is two-fold:—first, that Barnfield formally, and in his own name, printed them as his in 1595; and secondly, that he reprinted them under the cover of the same volume, and among the same poets, as they had been in the mean time assigned to Shakespeare. The truth seems to be that W. Jaggard took them in 1599 from Barnfield's publication, printed by John Jaggard in 1595. In 1612 W. Jaggard went even more far in the inaccuracy of his title-page, and reprinted the same collection of sonnets under the name of W. Jaggard, in 1599. The engravings were made, with some little ambiguity, to appear in "The Passionate Pilgrim" of 1612, to have been as the work of Shakespeare. When, therefore, Heywood published his next work in 1612, he exposed the wrong that had thus been done to him, and claimed the performances as his own. (See the Reprint of "The Apology for Actors," by the Shakespeare Society, pp. 62 and 66.)

He seems also to have taken steps against W. Jaggard; for the latter cancelled the title-page of "The Passionate Pilgrim," 1612, which contained the name of Jaggard, and substituted another for discarding Shakespeare's right to any of the poems the work contained, although some were his beyond all dispute. Malone's copy in the Bodleian Library has both title-pages.

To what extent, therefore, we may accept W. Jaggard's assertion of the authorship of Shakespeare of the poems in "The Passionate Pilgrim," is a question of some difficulty. Two Sonnets, with which the little volume opens, are contained (with variations, so in account we print them with any name, and for discrediting Shakespeare's right to any of the poems the work contained, although some were his beyond all dispute. Malone's copy in the Bodleian Library has both title-pages.

When my love swears that she is made of truth
I do believe her, though I know she lies.
That she might think me some untutor'd youth
Unskillful in the world's false forgery.
Thus vainly thinking this, she thinks me young,
Although I know my years be past the best,
I smiling credit her false speaking tongue.
Out-fac'ting faults in love with love's ill rest.
But wherefore says my love that she is young?
And wherefore say not I that I am old?
O! love's best habit is a soothing tongue,
And age, in love, loves not to have years told.
Therefore I'll lie with love, and love with me,
Since that our faults in love thus smother'd be.

Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
Which like two spirits do suggest me still:
The better angel is a man, right fair,
The worshiper a woman, colour'd ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempeth my better angel from my side,
And would corrupt a saint to be a devil,
Wooing his purity with her fair pride;
And whether that my angel be turn'd fair.*
Suspect I may, but not directly tell;
For being both to me, both to each friend,
I guess one angel in another's hell.
The truth I shall not know, but live in doubt,
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

Und not the heavenly rhetorick of thine eye,
'Gainst whom the world could not hold argument,
Persuad'd my heart to this false perjury?
Vows for thee broke deserve no punishment.
A woman I forswore; but I will prove,
Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee:
My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love;
Thy grace being gain'd cures all disgrace in me.
My vow was breath, and breath a vapour is;
Then thou fair sun, that on this earth dost shine,
Exhale this vapour now; in thee it is:
If broken, then it is no fault of mine.
If by me broke, what fool is so wise
To break an oath, to win a paradise?

Robert Chester, dated 1601. — Malone preceded "The Phoenix and the Turtle," by the song "Take, O take those lips away!" this we have not thought it necessary to repeat, because we have given the whole of it exactly in the same words, in "Measure for Measure," Act IV., No. 1. The first verse only is found in Shakespeare, and the second, which is much inferior, in Beaumont and Fletcher's "Bloody Brother.

It may be doubted, therefore, whether Shakespeare wrote it, or, like Beaumont and Fletcher, only introduced part of it into his play as a popular song of the time.

Pennywax." 1592. (Shakespeare Society's reprint, pp. 38 and 59) and Thomas's "Anecdotes and Traditions," (printed for the Camden Society) p. 58. Chester Chester is several times mentioned by name in "Sketches, a collection of Epigrams and Satires," by R. Guillim, printed in 1598, as well as in "Ulysses upon Ajax," 1596.

The edition of 1599, we believe, has been preserved, and that is among Capell's books in the library of Trinity College, Cambridge. No other copy of "The Passionate Pilgrim" of 1612 has the two title-pages, with and without the name of Shakespeare, but that formerly belonging to Malone, and Sequestrated by him, with so many other valuable rarities, to the Bodleian Library.

"The Passionate Pilgrim," 1599, concludes with a piece of moral satire, "Whilst as sickle fortune smiled," &c., and we have followed it by a poem found only in a publication by London. It contains some curious variations from the text of the first edition in 1604, 4to.

It is called "Love's Martyr, or Rosaline's Complaint" Of the author or editor nothing is known; but he is not to be confounded with Charles Chester, called Carlo Buffle in Ben Jonson's "Every Man out of his Humour," and respecting whom see Nash's "Pierce Egle."
He spying her, boun'd in, whereas he stood:
O love! quoth she, why was not I a flood?

VII.
Fair is my love, but not so fair as fickle,
Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty;
Brighter than glass, and yet, as glass is, brittle.
Softer than wax, and yet as iron rusty:
A lily pale, with damask dye to grace her.
None fairer, nor none fairer to deface her.

Her lips to mine how often hath she joined,
Between each kiss her oaths of true love swearing!
How many tales to please me hath she coined,
Dreading my love, the loss whereof still fearing!
Yet in the midst of all her pure protestings,
Her faith, her oaths, her tears, and all were jestings.

She burn'd with love, as straw with fire flameth;
She burn'd out love, as soon as straw out burneth;
She fram'd the love, and yet she foil'd the framing;
She bade love last, and yet she fell a turning.
Was this a lover, or a lecher whether?
Bad in the best, though excellent in neither.

VIII.
If music and sweet poetry agree,
As they must needs, the sister and the brother,
Then, must the love be great twixt thee and me
Because thou lovest the one, and I the other.
Doulant to thee is dear, whose heavenly touch
Upon the lute doth ravish human sense:
Spenser to me, whose deep conceit is such,
As passing all conceit needs no defence.
Thou lovest to hear the sweet melodious sound
That Phoebus' lute (the queen of music) makes;
And in my deep delight am chiefly dren'd
Whenas himself to singing he betakes.
One god is god of both, as poets reign,
One knight loves both, and both in thee remain.

IX
Fair was the morn, when the fair queen of love,
* * * * * *
Paler for sorrow than her milk-white dove,
For Adon's sake, a youngster proud and wild;
Her stand she takes upon a steep up hill:
Anon Adonis comes with horn and hounds;
She silly queen, with more than love's good will,
Forbade the boy he should not pass those grounds.
Once, (quoth she) did I see a fair sweet youth
Here in these brakes deep-drowned with a roar,
Deep in the thigh, a spectacle of ruth!
See, in my thigh, (quoth she,) here was the sore.
She showed hers; she saw more wounds than one,
And blushing fled, and left her all alone.

Sweet rose, fair flower, untimely pluck'd, soon faded,
Pluck'd in the bud, and faded in the spring!
Bright orient pearl, alack! too timely snatched,
Fair creature, kill'd too soon by death's sharp sting!
Like a green plane that hangs upon a tree,
And falls, (through wind) before the fall should be.

I weep for thee, and yet no cause I have;
For why? thou left'st me nothing but thy will.
And yet thou left'st me more than I did crave;
For why? I craved nothing of thee still:
O yes. (dear friend,) I pardon crave of thee.
Thy discontent thou didst bequeath to me.

XI
Venus with Adonis sitting by her,
Under a myrtle shade, began to woo him:
She told the youngling how god Mars did try her,
And as he fell to her, she fell to him.
Even thus, (quoth she) the warlike god embrac'd me,
And then she clipp'd Adonis in her arms:
Even thus, (quoth she) the warlike god unla'ed me,
As if the boy should use like loving charms:
Even thus, (quoth she) she seiz'd on my lips,
And with her lips on his did act the seizure;
And as she fetched breath, away he skips,
And would not take her meaning, nor her pleasure
Ah! that I had my lady at this bay,
To kiss and clip me till I ran away!

XII
Crabbed age and youth
Cannot live together;
Youth is full of pleasance,
Age is full of care:
Youth like summer morn,
Age like winter weather;
Youth like summer brave,
Age like winter bare.
Youth is full of sport,
Age's breath is short;
Youth is nimble, age is lame:
Youth is hot and bold,
Age is weak and cold;
Youth is wild, and age is tame.
Age, I do abhor thee,
Youth, I do adore thee;
O, my love, my love is young!
Age, I do defy thee;
O, sweet shepherd! 'b' thee,
For me thinkest thou stay'st too long.

XIII
Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good,
A shining glass that fadeth suddenly;
A flower that dies, when first it 'gins to bud;
A brittle glass, that's broken presently:
A doubtful good, a glass, a glass, a flower,
Lost, faded, broken, dead within an hour.
And as goods lost are seld or never found,
As faded glass no rubbing will refresh;
As flowers dead lie wither'd on the ground,
As broken glass no cement can redress;
So beauty blemish'd once, for ever lost,
In spite of physic, painting, pain, and cost.

XIV
Good night, good rest. Ah! neither be my share.
She bade good night, that kept my rest away;
And daff'd me to a cabin hang'd with care,
To descant on the doubts of my decay.
Farewell, quoth she, and come again to-morrow:
Fare well I could not, for I supp'd with sorrow.

1 This poem was published in 1638, in Richard Barnfield's "Encomion of Lady Pecunia." There is little doubt that it is his property notwithstanding it appeared in the "Passionate Pilgrim," 1609; and it was reprinted as Barnfield's in the new edition of his "Encomion," 1638. The next line is lost.
2 This sonnet, with considerable variations, is inserted in a collection of seventy-two sonnets, published in 1626, under the title of "Fidesse," with the name of B. Griffin, as the author. A syllabic defect in the first line is there remedied by the insertion of "young" before "Adonis." A manuscript of the time, now before us, is without the epithe, and has the initials W.S. at the end. The lines so stand in both editions of "The Passionate Pilgrim," and in the contemporaneous manuscript; but in Griffin's "Fidesse," it is: And as he fell to her, so fell she to him.
Yet at my parting sweetly did she smile,
I, scorn or friendship, will I construe whether:
'T may be, she joy'd to jest at my exile,
'T may be, again to make me wander thither;
'Wander,' a word for shadows like thyself,
As take the pain, but cannot pluck the pelf.

XV.

Lord, how mine eyes throw gazes to the east!
My heart doth charge the watch, the morning rise
Doth cite each moving sense from idle rest.
Not daring trust the office of mine eyes,
While Philomela sits and sings, I sit and mark,
And wish her lays were tuned like the lark;
For she doth welcome day-light with her ditty,
And drives away dark dismal-dreaming night:
The night so pack'd, I post unto my pretty;
Heart hath his hope, and eyes their wished sight;
Sorrow chang'd to solace, solace mix'd with sorrow;
For why? she sigh'd, and bade me come to-morrow.

Were I with her, the night would post too soon;
But now are minutes added to the hours;
To spite me now, each minute seems a moon:¹
Yet not for me, shine sun to succour flowers!
Pack night, peep day, good day, of night now borrow:
Short, night, to-night, and length thyself to-morrow.

XVI.²

It was a lording's daughter,
The fairest one of three,
That liked of her master
As well as well might be,
Till looking on an Englishman,
The fairest that eye could see,
Her fancy fell a turning.

Long was the combat doubtful,
That love with love did fight,
To leave the master loveless,
Or kill the gallant knight;
To put in practice either,
Alas! it was a spite
Unto the silly damsel.

But one must be refused,
More mickle was the pain,
That nothing could be used,
To turn them both to gain;
For of the two the trusty knight
Was wounded with disdain:
Alas! she could not help it.

Thus art with arms contending
Was victor of the day,
Which by a gift of learning
Did bear the maid away;
Then lullaby, the learned man
Hath got the lady gay;
For now my song is ended.

XVII.

On a day (alack the day!) Love, whose mouth was ever May,
Spied a blossom passing fair,
Playing in the wanton air:
Through the velvet leaves the wind,
All unseen, 'gan passage find;
That the lover (sick to death)
Wish'd himself the heaven's breath,
Air (quoth he) thy cheeks may blow;
Air, would I might triumph so!
But, alas! my hand hath sworn
'Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn:
Vow, alack! for youth unmeet:
Youth, so apt to pluck a sweet.
Thou for whom Jove would swear
Juno but an Ethiop were;
And deny himself for Jove,
Turning mortal for thy love.

XVIII.³

My flocks feed not,
My ewes breed not,
My rams speak not,
All is amiss.
Love is dying;⁴
Faith's declining.
Heart's denying;⁵
Causer of this.
All my merry jigs are quite forgot,
All my lady's love is lost (God wot):
Where her faith was firmly fix'd in love,
There a nay is plac'd without remove.
One silly cross
Wrought all my loss:
O frowning Fortune, cursed, fickle dame
For now I see
Inconstancy
More in women than in men remain.

In black mourn I,
All fear's scorn I,
Love hath forlorn me,
Living in thrall:
Heart is bleeding,
All help need真ng,
O cruel speeding!
Fraughted with gall!
My shepherd's pipe can sound no deal,
My wether's bell rings doleful knell;
My curtail dog that wont to have play'd,
Plays not at all, but seems afraid;
My sighs so deep;⁶
Procure to weep,
In howling-wise, to see my doleful plight
How sighs resound
Through heartless ground,
Like a thousand vanquish'd men in blood fight!

¹ an hour: in old ed's. Stevens made the change; moon having the sense of month. ² This is the first piece in the division of "The Passionate Pilgrim." ³ 1909, called "Sonnets to sundry Notes of Music." As the signatures of the pages run on throughout the whole column, we have continued to mark the poems by numbers, in the order in which they were printed. ⁴ This poem, in a more complete state, and with the addition of two stanzas to the original, was published in "England's Helicon," (sign. H.), a miscellany of poetry, first published in 1609, with which W. Shakespeare's poem is appended to it. ⁵ In "England's Helicon," 1609, this poem immediately follows "On a day (alack the day!)" and it is there entitled, "The Unknown Shepherd's Complaint," and it is subscribed "Reprint." Hence, we may suppose that the compiler of that collection knew that it was set by Shakespeare although it had been attributed to him in "The Passionate Pilgrim," of the year preceding. It had appeared anonymously with the music, in 1597, in a collection of Madrigals, by Thomas Weelkes. ⁶ Love's denying: in "England's Helicon." ⁷ Heart's denying: in "England's Helicon." ⁸ Part. ⁹ Both editions of "The Passionate Pilgrim," have With for My, which last not only is necessary for the sense, but is confirmed as the true reading by Weelkes' Madrigals, 1597.
Clear wells spring not,
Sweet birds sing not,
Green plants bring not
Forth their dye;
Herds stand weeping,
Flocks all sleeping,
Nymphs back peeping
Fearfully:
All our pleasure known to us poor swains,
All our merry meetings on the plains,
All our evening sport from us is fled;
All our love is lost, for love is dead.
Farewell, sweet lass;
Thy like ne'er was
For a sweet content, the cause of all my moan.
Poor Coridon
Must live alone,
Other help for him I see that there is none.

XIX.
When as thine eye hath chose the dame,
And stall'd the deer that thou shouldst strike,
Let reason rule things worthy blame,
As well as partial fancy like:
Take counsel of some wiser head.
Neither too young, nor yet unwed.
And when thou com'st thy tale to tell,
Smooth not thy tongue with filed talk,
Lest she some subtle practice smell;
A cripple soon can find a fault:
But plainly say thou lov'st her well,
And set thy person forth to sell.

What though her frowning brows be bent,
Her cloudy looks will clear ere night;
And then too late she will repent
That thus dissembled her delight;
And twice desire, ere it be day,
That which with scorn she put away.
What though she strive to try her strength,
And ban and brawl, and say thee nay,
Her feeble force will yield at length,
When craft hath taught her thus to say,—
"Had women been so strong as men,
In faith you had not had it then."

And to her will frame all thy ways:
Spare not to spend, and chiefly there
Where thy desert may merit praise.
By ringing in thy lady's ear:
The strongest castle, tower, and town,
The golden bullet beats it down.
Serve always with assured trust,
And in thy suit be humble, true;
Unless thy lady prove unjust,
Seek never thou to choose a new.
When time shall serve, be thou not slack
To prove, though she put thee back.
The wiles and guiles that women work,
Dissembled with an outward show,
The tricks and toys that in them lurk,
The cock that treads them shall not know
Have you not heard it said full oft,
A woman's nay doth stand for nought?

Thine, women still to strive with men
To sin, and never for to saint:
There is no heaven; be holy then,
When time with age shall them attaint
Were kisses all the joys in bed,
One woman would another wed.

But soft! enough,—too much, I fear;
Lest that my mistress hear my song,
She will not stick to warm my ear;
To teach my tongue to be so long:
Yet will she blush, here be it said,
To hear her secrets so bewray'd.

XX.
Live with me and be my love,
And we will all the pleasures prove,
That hills and valleys, dales and fields,
And the craggy mountain yields.
There will we sit upon the rocks,
And see the shepherd feed his flock
By shallow rivers, to whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals.
There will I make thee a bed of roses,
With a thousand fragrant posies;
A cap of flowers, and a kirtle
Embroider'd all with leaves of myrtle.
A belt of straw and ivy buds,
With coral clasps and amber studs;
And if these pleasures may thee move,
Then, live with me and be my love.

LOVE'S ANSWER.
If that the world and love were young,
And truth in every shepherd's tongue,
These pretty pleasures might me move,
To live with thee and be thy love.

1 So both editions of "The Passionate Pilgrim," and "England's Helicon." Malone preferred the passage as it stands in Welske Madrigals.
2 "Loud belle ring not.
Neither anwise nor yet unwed." But no change from the old printed copy is here necessary. In the manuscript the whole has Shakespeare's initials at the end.
3 So the manuscript in our possession: "The Passionate Pilgrim." 1599, has it. "She will not stick to round me on the ear," This poem, like incomplete, and what is called "Love's Answer," still more imperfect, may be seen at length in "Percy's Reliques," Vol. I. They belong to Christopher Marlowe and Sir Walter Raleigh: the first is assigned by name to Marlowe, in "England's Helicon," 1600, sign A 3; and the last appears in the same collection, under the name of Ignoto, which was a signature sometimes adopted by Sir Walter Raleigh. They are, besides, assigned to both these authors in Walton's "Angler." (p. 149, ed. 1840) under the titles of "The milk-maid's song," and "The Milk-maid's Mother's answer."
XXI.

As it fell upon a day
In the merry month of May,
Sitting in a pleasant shade,
Which a grove of myrtles made,
Beasts did leap and birds did sing,
Trees did grow and plants did spring;
Every thing did banish moan,
Save the nightingale alone:
She, poor bird, as all forlorn,
Lean'd her breast up-till a thorn,
And there sung the dolefullest ditty
That to hear it was great pity,
Fie, fie! fie! now would she cry;
Tereu, Tereu! by and by;
That to hear her so complain
Scarce I could from tears refrain,
For her griefs, so lively shown,
Make me think upon mine own.
Ah! thought I, thou mourn'st in vain,
None takes pity on thy pain:
Senseless trees they cannot hear thee,
Ruthless bears they will not cheer thee.
King Pandion he is dead,
All thy friends are lapp'd in lead,
All thy fellow birds do sing.
Careless of thy sorrowing.

XXII.

Whilst as fickle fortune smil'd,
Thou and I were both beguil'd:
Every one that flatters thee
Is no friend in miserie:
Words are easy, like the wind;
Faithful friends are hard to find:
Every man will be thy friend,
Whilst thou hast wherewith to spend;
But if store of crowns be scant,
No man will supply thy want.

If that one be prodigal,
Bountiful they will him call,
And with such like flattering,
Pity but he was a king,
If he be addict to vice,
Quickly him they will entice:
If to women he be bent,
They have him at commandement;
But if fortune once do swarm,
Then, farewell his great renown:
They that saw'd on him before
Use his company no more.
He that is thy friend indeed
He will help thee in thy need:
If thou sorrow, he will weep;
If thou wake, he cannot sleep;
Thus of every grief in heart,
He with thee does bear a part.
These are certain signs to know
Faithful friend from flattering foe.

The Poem is contained in R. Bardsfield's "Eccomion of Lady Fenem," 1594. It is also inserted in "England's Helicon," 1600. It is under the signature of Ignato; but as Bardsfield reprinted it as his, in 1603, there can be little doubt that he was the author of it. "England's Helicon" here adds this couplet—

"Even so, poor bird, like thee,
None alive will pity me."

This is the last poem in "The Passionate Pilgrim," 1599. It is a separate production, both in subject and place, with a division between it and Bardsfield's poem, which precedes it; nevertheless they have been inconsequently coupled in some modern editions. * This poem is printed, as we have given it, with the name of Shakespeare, in Robert Chester's "Love's Martyr, or Rosaline's Complaint," 1601. It occurs near the end, among what are called on the title-page, "new Compositions of several modern Writers, whose names are subscribed to their several Works."
Whereupon it made this threne,
To the Phœnix and the dove,
Co-supremes and stars of love,
As chorus to their tragic scene.

THRENOIS.

Beauty, truth, and rarity,
Grace in all simplicity,
Here inclos'd in cinders lie

Death is now the Phœnix' nest;
And the turtle's loyal breast
To eternity doth rest

Leaving no posterity:
'T was not their infirmity,
It was married chastity.

Truth may seem, but cannot be,
Beauty brazen, but 'tis not she;
Truth and beauty buried be.

To this urn let those repair
That are either true or fair;
For these dead birds sigh a prayer.
